Drive-In Shopping Center Combination Planned

Walter Reade Circuit, whose latest drive-in, the Lawrence, is illustrated on the opposite page, and whose earlier ventures in outdoor theatres during 1949 are recounted in STR for May 28th (Page E-16) and July 23rd (Page E-12) has announced plans for a combination drive-in shopping center, entertainment center, and (eventually) indoor theatre—all on the same grounds.

The new enterprise will occupy a 15-acre site on the traffic circle at Eatontown, Monmouth County, New Jersey. Popularity of its shopping center will be enhanced, Reade interests believe, by the recent installation of parking meters in nearby towns such as Asbury Park.

Leon Einhorn, of Einhorn and O'Toole, member of STR's Advisory Council, has been retained to draw up the detailed design. Opening is scheduled for next spring. Capacity of the drive-in is to be 1,020 cars. It will be completely paved, will have exceptionally wide aisles, and its centrally located concession and rest-room building will be accessible from all ramps by way of paved paths. Children's playground area will be fitted with slides, swings, sand boxes and park benches. Decorative drives, summer houses, shade trees and flower beds are to be included in the landscaping, according to present plans.

Baldwin Theatre

high wainscot) and its ceiling are all the same arching structure. Areas of junction between arches carry the lighting coves and break the curving wall-ceiling into four sections each painted in a different shade of green. This is deepest at the front section, palest at the rear. Carpeting is a Wilton weave of greens, and chair upholstery rust-colored. Lighting throughout the entire theatre is extremely simple —flesh-white and canary-yellow neon, with auxiliary downlights and spots.

The shape of the auditorium, and the blown-on asbestos-base insulating and sound-absorbing material with which its entire interior is coated, are one factor making for the very superior sound quality claimed for the Baldwin. Another, however, would certainly by the use of sound equipment of 150 watts output power (Research Council specifications for a theatre of 1,800 seats call for only 40 watts—thus the Baldwin's amplifiers never even approach the point of being overdriven into harshness).

The shape of the auditorium, moreover, is also credited with providing very unusual ventilating comfort. Fresh air enters the theatre through a series of grilles running completely around the screen opening, and thence proceeds at large volume, low velocity and without draft throughout the length of the auditorium to exhaust via the foyer. Heating is provided, but not refrigeration.

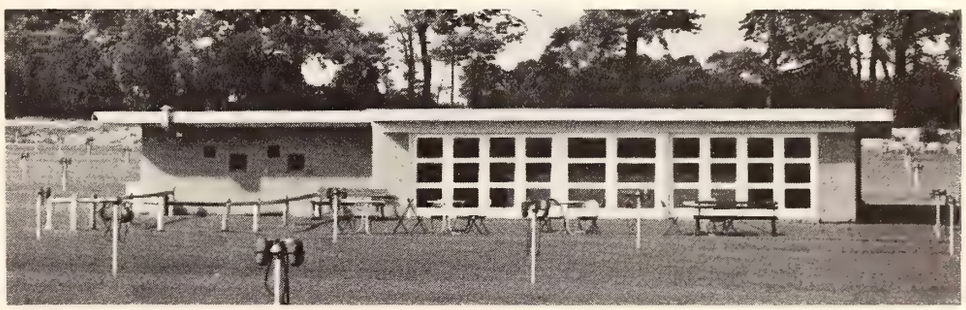
Twin box-offices at the entrance (top) serve four lines of cars simultaneously. Private road beyond them is paved, lighted, and fenced with rustic fencing; and serves as a holding area when theatre is filled. Admissions are 60-65 cents for adults, depending on time of week; 12-20 cents for children between ages of 6 and 12 years; children under 6 always free. Immediately above, view of parking area.

Built for Patron Comfort and Family Trade

Walter Reade's Latest, Near Trenton, New Jersey, Accommodates 850 Cars

Fully paved, hard-surfaced grounds, insect-repellent lamps, and complete fencing to keep out road lights and car lights are among the features built into this latest Walter Reade drive-in theatre for audience comfort. Trees found on the property were so far as possible retained to reserve the appearance of a pleasant, park-like area. The play area is open to the public during the day for use as a free community center.

Advertising stresses family appeal. "It's for the entire family," says a folder. "They remain intact as a group while being entertained in the confines and comforts of their car. All can come, including the elderly who need face no stairs or crowds."

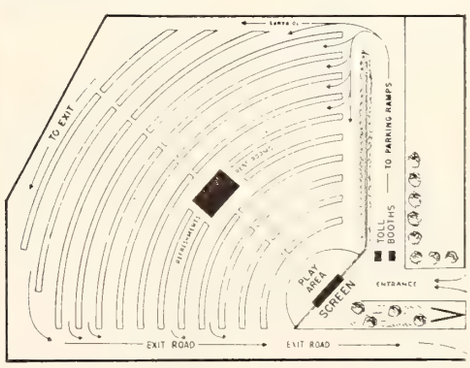


The new drive-in covers 16½ acres, and accommodates 850 cars. It is known as the Lawrence, and is located in Lawrence Township near Trenton, New Jersey, on U. S. Highway No. 1. The name tower, 40 feet high, and lamped with flashing neons, is visible for long distances in both directions because the highway is both straight and flat. The changeable letter attraction board is two-sided, arranged like a letter 'V.'

Cars enter the theatre at the far side of the name sign as seen in this picture, and exit at the near side. Ticket booths can serve four lines of cars at once. The long road between ticket booths and theatre proper is paved, fenced and lighted, and serves as a holding area when the theatre is filled.

Screen image is 60 feet wide, and projection throw 300 feet. Projection room, refreshment room and rest rooms are all located in the same cinder-block building. Tables, chairs and benches are placed immediately in front of the refreshment room, doors of which swing upward to leave its entire face wide open. Refreshments sold include popcorn, soft drinks, hot coffee, ice cream and candy. A center aisle running the full depth of the parking area facilitates access afoot to rest rooms, refreshment counter and play area.

Policy calls for three changes of program—on Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. Admission prices inclusive of taxes are 60 cents for adults, 12 cents for children between the ages of 6 and 12, from Monday to Thursday; and 65 cents for adults, 20 cents for children.



W. W. Smith of Camden, New Jersey, and Melvin Fox of Philadelphia were associated with Walter Reade in construction of the drive-in.

Tables, chairs and benches are set out before this refreshment room, doors of which swing up to leave its entire face open. Popcorn, hot coffee, soft drinks, frankfurters, ice cream and candy are among refreshments sold. Projection room is at left of same cinder-block building, and rest rooms in the rear behind the refreshment room.

Cars enter theatre at the far side of this name tower and exit at the near side. Name sign, lighted in flashing neon, is 40 feet high and is visible for long distances in both directions. Changeable letter attraction board is two-sided, V-shaped.

Landscaping surrounds entrance area and completely separates theatre from highway. Additional rustic fencing all around protects patrons against road and car lights. Fence in turn is surrounded by trees that were carefully preserved during construction.

The Progressive Encyclopedia Of Theatre Operation

A Compendium of Conclusions on All Phases of Theatre Design, Construction, Maintenance and Operation, Developed at Monthly Discussions By Members of the Architects, Projection and Theatre Advisory Councils.

ABBREVIATIONS USED

AC—Architects Council; PC—Projection Council; TC—Theatre Council; UO—Unanimous Opinion; MO — Majority Opinion; PO — Plurality Opinion.

The compendium that follows comprises the conclusions of three different Councils; and represents either unanimous, majority or plurality opinion of each body. To keep the reader informed just which Council or Councils offered the opinion cited, and just how closely the members of that body themselves are agreed concerning it, the above abbreviations are used throughout.

Council conclusions are often unanimous on technical matters, as the reader will find on glancing through these pages. In fact, two different Councils may agree, even by unanimous votes of each body, on many technical details of theatre operation. But factors of taste—as for example, in decoration—may be involved, as well as of technology; and therein agreement is naturally not to be expected. On some purely technical points also, especially in matters in which industrial practice is still rapidly evolving, agreement does not always exist. In each case, however, the initialed abbreviations (such as AC—MO, etc.) that follow each conclusion or opinion reported, will accurately inform you as to which Council's conclusion is cited and to what degree the members themselves concurred in it. These abbreviations—as well as the index appearing on this page—are necessary both for your own convenience and for economy of space, because the ground covered by the Councils, in the years in which they have been advising you in these pages, covers an enormous scope.

Design and Construction

Architects' Services. An architect experienced in theatre work can effect economies to many times his fee—and no theatre should be built or remodeled except under such supervision.—TC, MO.

Drive-In Theatres, at current building costs, may be a better investment than a conventional house. They have become a permanent part of the industry.—AC and TC, MO.

Screen towers and buildings should be architecturally treated for impressiveness, glamor and beauty; grounds should be landscaped (this is not seriously expensive); rest rooms, employes quarters, manager's office, etc., should not all be grouped in the same building with projection equipment, but some built into the screen tower or scattered among other structures built to house them.—AC, MO.

Refreshment sales building should have large picture windows so patrons will not be deterred from buying refreshments by unwillingness to miss part of the show.—AC, MO.

Best drive-in location is on a main highway, with screen located back to road. (TC, MO, AC, PO.) Illumination, except for aisle marker lights, is undesirable during the show (TC, PO), but artificial moonlight during the show is desirable (AC, MO). Deep wells are best for water supply, and septic tanks for sewage disposal.—TC, MO.

Projection and sound quality in a drive-in should be fully as good as in a conventional theatre. Projection room safety provisions should be equally complete, since panic among an automobile audience could prove even more disastrous than in an indoor theatre. (PC, UO). Best screen width for drive-ins is 40-50 feet; best projection distance 120-220 feet. PC, MO.

Drive-in screen should tilt forward to minimize keystone effect. (AC, PC and TC, MO). Individual in-car speakers are more desirable than a powerful central-speaker arrangement.—PC, MO; TC, UO.

Admission scale should be such that individual drive-in patron pays as much as, or more than, the local rate for indoor theatres.—TC, PO.

Prefabricated and Quonset Theatres. Their use can be expected to increase in the future (AC, PO) but at present they are desirable for some locations only, as for example where a long lease cannot be obtained.—AC and TC, MO.

Exterior or Facade Design. The box office belongs on the sidewalk line. (AC and TC, MO). Exterior design should exploit refreshment sales as well as picture advertising; a refreshment counter opening on the street will earn more revenue for the theatre than a poster case occupying the same wall space. (TC, MO; AC, PO). The facade should be functional in design, with little or no ornamentation, except where some special style is needed to keep it in harmony with exceptional surroundings, as in the case of a Colonial facade in a Colonial neighborhood. (AC, MO). Ornate, elaborate decoration has no place on the facade of any modern theatre.—AC, UO.

Design for Exploitation

Exterior Exploitation. Both marquee and name sign should be built-in as integral parts of the theatre structure, not treated as additions to be hung on after construction is completed.—AC, MO.

The marquee should provide large attraction boards for changeable letters. Variety of marquee display is important; monotonous appearance should be avoided. Even visibility should be sacrificed if necessary to avoid monotonous appearance. White space is important; and even information should be sacrificed if necessary to provide adequate white space.

White space should be left around all the margins of the copy and between all lines of copy; and either one or two letters of space between words on the same line. Letters should be of different sizes and colors. Red and green translucent letters are the preferred colors. Colored translucent letters may be used either alone or in association with opaque letters; but where more than one color translucent letter is used in the same copy it is not desirable to add opaque letters also. Attraction board background lighting should be white not tinted.—TC, MO.

In general tone, the outdoor advertising display should harmonize with the overall design and color scheme of the facade and catch attention, not by clashing with the facade, but by being more brilliantly illuminated.

Bottom of the marquee attraction boards should be 9-11 feet above the sidewalk. Outdoor 40x60" poster cases should be mounted with their centers from 4'3" to 4'8" above the sidewalk. Poster cases should not be crowded too closely together, but reasonably well spaced.—AC, MO.

Cellars and Roofs. Putting a cellar under a theatre is a needles expense. (AC, MO). There should be no steps or ramps in the path of patron traffic; the ground site should be graded accordingly before the theatre is built.—TC, MO.

A flat, sloping "lean-to" roof is best for theatres. Tar-and-gravel is the best roofing material.—AC, MO.

Interior Design. Indoor poster cases should be reasonably well spaced, not crowded too closely together. (AC, MO). The 40x60" size should be mounted with centers 4½' above the floor.—AC, PO.

Animated displays in the lobby or under the marquee are helpful, but only on occasion, not for every program. Lobby tripods, loudspeakers under the marquee and sound trucks are helpful, wherever the law allows their use, but again only on occasion and not for every show. The entrance-way may be designed accordingly.—TC, MO.

The reverse slope floor, which slants downward in the rear of the orchestra but slightly upward in the front of the house, is desirable. TC, MO. It is desirable only in some theatres, such as long and narrow ones, or theatres with balconies, or where its use will effect an economy in grading. (AC, PO). A proscenium arch is unnecessary in a motion picture theatre. (AC, MO).

In general, single-floor seating is best, stadium-type seating next best, and orchestra-and-balcony least desirable. (AC and TC, MO); but in theatres planned for live entertainment the orchestra-and-balcony arrangement becomes preferable.—AC, MO.

Hanging ceilings are the most economical form because they provide an inexpensive and accessible location for ducts, pipes and wiring.—AC, MO.

Every theatre of over 400 seats should have an exit or exits near the screen in addition to whatever other modes of egress may exist. (AC, UO). In fact, every theatre, regardless of size, should have one or more exits at its screen end. (AC, MO). There should be at least one exit for each 250 seats in addition to means of egress through the lobby.—AC, PO.

Where possible, keep the downward projection angle to less than 12 degrees, as recommended by the SMPE. Locate the projection room squarely in front of the center of the screen if at all possible; avoid any side angle of projection whatever if avoidable. Follow the SMPE recommendation calling for a picture width equal to approximately one-sixth the distance from screen to the last row of seats. In planning sight lines, remember that it is more tolerable to look downward at the screen than upward at it; the downward viewing angle may be as much as one-third steeper than the maximum upward viewing angle. (AC, PC and TC, MO). Distance from screen to front row of seats should be not less than 0.87 feet for each foot of screen width. (AC, PC and TC, MO). It should not be necessary to increase projection light because smoking is permitted, but ventilation should be increased in such cases.—PC, MO.

The Projection Room

Projection Room Design. For general layout of the projection suite, the recommendations and blueprints of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers should be followed as closely as possible; they have proved successful and practical in actual use. (PC, UO). Ample floor and wall space should be left in the projection room for future changes and additions, including addition of a third projector if only two are installed originally; space for public address equipment and space for unpredictable contingencies. (PC, MO). Also, extra front wall space should be provided for additional spotlight parts to accommodate a possible future policy of live entertainment. (TC, MO). Power lines from meter to projection room should be oversize to take care of possible future requirements. (PC, UO). For the same reason, conduit, switchboards and fuse boards should be larger than needed at the moment.—PC, MO.

Interior Construction. Preferred material for interior walls: hollow tile. For surfacing lobby, foyer and lounge walls: plaster. For surfacing auditorium walls: acoustical plaster. For toilet room walls: tile. (AC, PO). For floors that rest directly on the ground the best material is concrete properly waterproofed, and laid over gravel for drainage, or over gravel plus drainage tile. Lobby entrance doors should be of the all-glass type.—AC, MO.

Projection Room Construction. Electrical conduit should be buried in the projection room walls, not mounted on their surface. But building sound amplifiers or other apparatus into a partition wall (so as to be able to get at the back of it from the adjoining rewind room, etc.) is now no longer desirable.—PC, MO.

Finishing

Interior Finishing and Maintenance. Copper tubing is the best plumbing. For carrying electrical wires rigid conduit is better than metal channel. (AC, MO). The theatre should not do its own painting but allot such work to a reliable contractor who will furnish all materials, tools and labor. For most theatre surfaces conventional oil paints are best. For special purposes, as in boiler rooms, or over acoustical plaster, casein paint is preferable. Water colors also can be used on acoustical surfaces. (TC, MO). Paint should never be applied to an unsuitable surface without first preparing that surface by washing, wire-brushing, scraping, etc.—TC, UO.

Frequency with which different theatre surfaces will need painting naturally varies according to location, cleanliness of air, type of patronage, and other factors. The following opinions on this matter, by the Theatre Advisory Council, are not cited by majorities or pluralities but by averages and extremes:

Auditorium floor: average 2¼ years, extremes ½ year, 5 years; Auditorium walls and ceiling: average 9 years, extremes 3 years, 15 years; Facade: average 2½ years, extremes yearly, never; Foyer: average 4¼ years, extremes 1 year, 10 years; Inner doors: average 1½ years, extremes 1 year, 5 years; Lobby: average 3¼ years extremes 1 year, 10 years, Lounges and Rest Rooms: average 2 years, extremes ½ year, 5 years; Marquee: average 2 years, extremes 1 year, 10 years; Offices: average 3½ years, extremes 1 year, 10 years; Outer doors: average 1¾ years, extremes 1 year, 5 years; Projection room: average 3 years, extremes 1 year, 10 years.

Decorating

Interior Decoration. Auditorium decoration should be simple, not highly ornate. (AC and TC, MO). However, the screen opening should be very ornately ornamented (TC, MO)— no, the screen area treatment also should be simple (AC, MO). Only a few settees, chairs, etc., should be provided in foyers and lounges, and these should be chosen more for appearance than for comfort. Furnishings of the manager's office should be practical and business-like, not planned for impressiveness. Equip women's powder rooms simply and economically; elaborate decorations and fittings in that location turn out to be a constant expense.—AC and TC, MO.

Acoustics

Acoustical Treatment. Acoustical control by means of permanently-attached surface materials that absorb sound is preferable to use of draperies, and preferable to special acoustical shaping of auditorium walls and ceiling. (AC and TC, MO). Acoustical treatment, if needed, is a "must" in which cost cannot be allowed to count against the necessity of having it. Amateur advice should be avoided in planning acoustical treatment—only qualified experts should be consulted in this matter. Dusting, vacuuming and painting (with water color preferably—never with oil paint) are the approved methods of keeping acoustical surfaces presentable. (TC, MO). Acoustic treatment of the projection room is essential.—PC, MO.

Lighting

Indoor Lighting. First consideration in lighting the interior of the theatre is safety—and all other factors must be subordinated to that.—PC and TC, MO.

Lighting should taper down progressively in intensity from maximum brightness under the marquee in minimum at the front of the auditorium. (AC and TC, MO). There is no clear agreement as to what intensities to use; the following represents the range of opinions of the members, stated in footcandles:

Under marquee, 100-20 fc; outer lobby, 30-10 fc; inner lobby or foyer, 10-0.2 fc; auditorium rear, 5-0.1 fc; auditorium front, 2-0.1 fc; lounges, 10-5 fc; stairs 3-1 fc. (AC and TC).

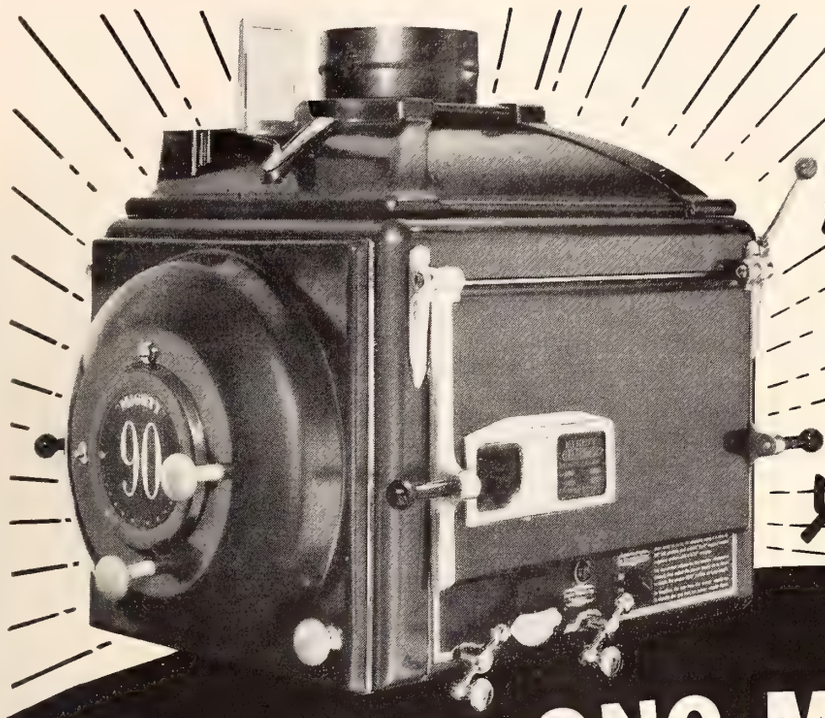
Indirect lighting should be used in the auditorium (AC, PC and TC, MO) preferably from ceiling troughs; and there should be no exposed lighting fixtures in the auditorium. (AC and TC, MO). Blue or green are the best colors for running lights.—PC, MO.

For general indoor lighting colors should be chosen that are harmonious with the colors of the decorations. "Black light" murals are advantageous. (AC, MO). Fluorescent murals, if used, should not be placed where they can distract attention away from the screen. (TC, MO). The proposed semi-illuminated screen border is not desirable (TC, MO) but it may have possibilities worthy of further experiment.—AC and PC, MO.

Installing oversize or extra conduit, switchboards and fuseboard when a theatre is built costs very much less than making changes at a later date (AC, UO) —subsequent addition of larger facilities will cost 117½ per cent more (average of all AC estimates). The following provisions for possible future changes should therefore be made in building a new theatre: oversize switchboards and fuse boards (AC, MO)—20-25 per cent oversize. (AC, PO). Oversize conduit should be run to stage area, to outdoor lighting areas, and to locations where refreshment facilities may subsequently be installed (or enlarged). It is not worth-while, however, to pull in spare wires at the time of construction.—AC, MO.

In building or remodeling a theatre today, provisions should be made for possible future need to light live entertainment. Such provisions should include: extra space in wings for stage switchboard; space above screen for overhead lights and alongside screen for border or bunch lights. Heavier main switchboard, fuse board conduit and wiring in anticipation of future requirements for stage lighting; but not actual conduit, wiring or fixtures to or at the stage for that purpose. Enough ports in projection room front wall for spotting stage shows, and conduit and wiring capable of carrying at least 75 amperes to each spot location.

Lighting Live Entertainment



Change in policy to incorporate live entertainment will not require any changes in auditorium or outdoor lighting. (TC, MO). The average theatre today will, however need more spot equipment, plus modernization if not replacement of existing equipment, for adequate spotting of live entertainment.—PC, MO.

Lighting Economy. Individual members of the Theatre Advisory Committee offer the following suggestions for lighting economy:

Reduce outdoor and lobby lighting as much as 80 per cent after box office closes for the evening. Vary outdoor lighting carefully according to season. Use neon where practicable. Select lamps of makes and types that give best economy in terms of overall lighting costs, as demonstrated by tests. Prolong lamp life by protecting them against vibration. Prolong lamp life by using incandescents of slightly higher rated voltage than that of the theatre's power line. Replace blackened lamps; they are inefficient. Keep lamps, fixtures and reflectors clean. Control inventory to prevent employe pilfering. Recheck with power company for best possible rates and meter connections.

Carpets, Etc.

Floor Coverings. Should not be the same in all parts of the theatre. For the lobby: tile or terrazzo. (AC and TC, MO). Rubber mats or runners should be used to get water and dirt off shoes before patrons reach carpeted areas. (TC, UO). Auditorium aisles should be carpeted. (AC, MO; TC, UO). In carpet the best and most expensive quality is the most economical. Velvet is the most suitable weave. Carpet should have underpadding. (AC, MO). The floor should be recessed to receive carpet wherever it does not run from wall to wall. (AC and TC, MO). Wooden strips, preferably but not necessarily embedded in the concrete, are best for fastening carpet to concrete floors; wooden strips embedded in the concrete where the riser meets the step below are best for fastening carpet to stairs. Carpet should be cleaned in place only by vacuuming; taken up if shampooing is needed.—TC, MO.

Climate Control

Air Conditioning and Heating. No theatre should be built without some form of air conditioning; the money saved by leaving this out will be more than lost at the box office. (AC, MO). Refrigeration requirements are: one ton for every 12-20 patrons, depending on climate. (AC and TC, MO). Economy requires insulating the theatre. (TC, MO). Costs of insulating a new theatre, or adding insulation to an old one, are justified in terms of fuel saved. (AC and TC, MO). Absorptive insulating materials such as rock wool or expanded mica are better than reflective types such as metal foil.—AC, MO. (Regardless of type, on which there is no agreement) some type of air freshener, sterilizer or deodorizer should be included in the air conditioning set-up. (TC, MO). Conditioning equipment should be serviced by outside experts, not by theatre personnel. (TC, UO). Warm air heating is the best for theatres of any size. (AC, MO). Cost of a new theatre can be reduced approximately 4 per cent by combining heating and air conditioning, as compared with putting in two completely independent systems. (This figure represents the average of the median estimates submitted by members of the Architects Advisory Council on this matter.)

Gas is the most efficient fuel in terms of labor and attendance needed.—AC and TC, MO. It is the most efficient fuel when all considerations are taken into account, but not in all areas of the country.—AC and TC, MO.

Air conditioning equipment should be put into operation long enough before opening so that the very first patron to enter finds a completely conditioned theatra. (AC and TC, MO). The system should not be taken out of operation until after the last patron has left. (AC and TC, PO). Theatre dry bulb temperature should not be maintained at any absolute level but varied according to outdoor weather—in summer, from 5 to 20 degrees below the outside temperature. (AC and TC, MO). In winter, however, indoor temperature should be kept at a fixed level and not varied with changes in outdoor weather. (AC and TC, MO). Relative humidity should be held to some set value at all times, between 30 and 60 per cent.—AC and TC, PO.

Dry bulb thermometers should be located in several parts of the theatre, and read hourly. (AC and TC, MO). The engineer or other employe who has charge of the conditioning equipment is the one to be assigned to taking dry bulb and humidity readings.—AC and TC, PO.

Patron Comfort

Seating. No aisle should run down the center of the seating area. (AC and TC, UO). Aisles, not seats, should be placed next to side walls. Cross aisles are not desirable and should be avoided unless required by law.—AC and TC, MO.

In all seating plans, the primary consideration is patron comfort. (TC, MO)—Recommended spacing between rows, 34". (TC, PO). Recommended chair width, 20-21" wide as of October, 1946, 20-22" wide as of July, 1949.—TC, MO.

Sponge rubber, either alone or in combination with springs, makes the best chair upholstery. (AC and TC, MO). Fabric is the best covering for the back of the chair. (AC, MO; TC, UO). Best covering material for seat of chair is plastic or leather (AC, MO) or leatherette (TC, MO).

Slip covers are not advisable; flameproof or flame-treated upholstery is. Chairs should be anchored with expansion bolts. Spare chairs should be kept on hand so that damaged ones need not be sent for repair individually but can be accumulated and repaired in groups.—TC, MO.

Chairs should be inspected daily.—TC, MO.

Draperies are desirable.—(AC and TC, MO). They should be used around the screen area, and in lounges. Fabric wall coverings are desirable.—AC, MO.

Hearings Aids. The permanently wired system, connected to the sound amplifier, is preferred. Less than 2 per cent of the total number of seats need be so equipped. Hearing aids are handed to patrons as they enter; the employe who passes them out should be responsible for their return. Both lorgnette and headset types should be available to the patron.—TC, MO.

Selling Refreshments

Refreshment Sales—The extra revenue they yield abundantly justifies the expense and trouble they involve. Theatre refreshment business is still growing and has not nearly reached its peak. (As of January, 1949.) It is more profitable for the theatre to handle its own refreshment business than to lease out the concession. For the primary sales outlet use an attended counter; the increased business will more than justify the salary of the attendant. (TC, MO). However, one attended counter is enough for any theatre; supplementary sales points should always be equipped with automatic machines only. (TC, MO; AC, PO). Popcorn, soft drink and candy machines are desirable. Except in large houses, corn should be popped in the sight of the patrons. Correct storage of popcorn has a vital bearing on profits from its sale. Vending machines should be serviced by outside experts, not the theatre's staff. Circuits should centralize the buying of refreshment merchandise; very important discounts are possible.—TC, MO.

The primary refreshment stand should be located in the path of patron traffic, but accessible also from the street for sales to passersby, and likewise from the theatre for re-sales to patrons. (AC and TC, MO). Accessibility from the theatre should be via the lobby, so the noise associated with a snack bar will not interfere with enjoyment of the picture. (AC, MO). Drive-in refreshment rooms should have large picture windows facing the screen so patrons can buy and consume refreshments without losing track of the continuity of the show.—AC, MO.

When a theatre is being built or remodeled, and there is any possibility that additional refreshment sales locations may be needed some time in the future, niches or other spaces should be provided for such future use. Moreover, facilities that may be neded in the future such as water pipes, drain pipes and adequate electrical wiring should be run in to those locations at the time of building or remodeling, because it is so very much cheaper to do it then than to add facilities later.—AC and TC, MO.

The refreshment stand, machines and merchandise should be well lighted. This requirement does not conflict with the desirability of maintaining a gradually diminishing intensity of lighting inward from box office to auditorium, since it is the merchandise not the area that needs to be illuminated; hooded lights, indirect lighting, light baffles, etc., can be used to reconcile the two requirements.—AC and TC, MO.

(For fire precautions associated with popcorn oil and popcorn and candy wrappers, see "Safety.")

A Good Show

Projection and Sound Quality. Even the smallest theatre can afford to give patrons the best quality in projection and sound and will profit by doing so. (PC, MO). Projection and sound equipment should be bought for top performance and price considered only as between items that will all give equally good performance.—PC, MO.

Regardless of cost, the screen image must be large enough for comfortable viewing. Whatever expense this involves in the way of larger screen, more powerful arc lamps, or more electricity must be regarded as unavoidable expense.—TC, UO.

And whatever may or may not be done about television in the theatre, competition of home television will definitely compel the theatre industry to make still further improvements in the quality of its projection and sound.—PC, MO.

Projection Economy. Keep effective records. Get competitive bids. Insist on guarantees. Order replacements in advance of actual need. Create a projection department and Supervisor of Projection if the circuit is larger than 10-25 theatres.—PC, MO.

Individual members of the Projection Advisory Council also offer these suggestions for economy.

Take into account the reliability of the supplier; consult with a trustworthy supplier, other theatremen, the larger circuits, your own projectionists. Form a buying pool with other theatres or circuits; consult larger circuits as to prices and discounts to expect on such quantity purchases; buy on a cash basis, pay bills promptly; overhaul equipment regularly, don't wait for trouble to appear; fix small troubles promptly, don't wait for them to grow larger; keep in touch with the advice of the Projection Advisory Council as printed in SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

(For projection safety, see under "Safety.")

The Projection Room

Projection Room Fittings. Battleship linoleum (where permitted) is the best floor covering. Green is the best color for the walls. Lighting should be indirect or by shaded drop-lights. Clothing lockers and toilet facilities are essential.—PC, MO.

All projection rooms should have: cabinets for spare parts, fuses and tools;

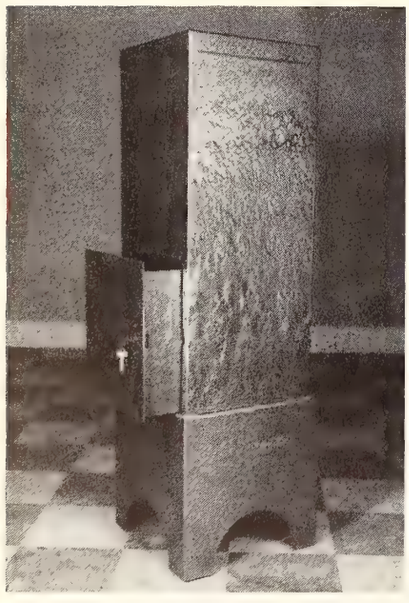
THEATRE EQUIPMENT GUIDE

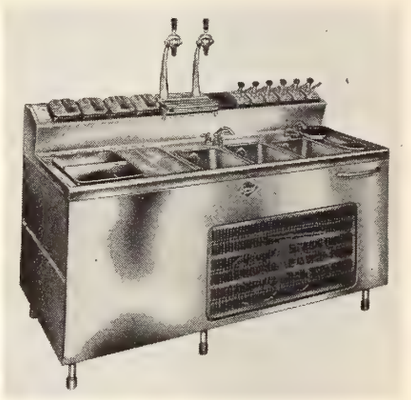


Current Information for the Buyers of Theatre Equipment and Accessories

Drive-In Refreshment Vendors

"Buffeteria," pushed by hand facilitates sale of wide variety of refreshments to drive-in patrons. This cart has both hot and cold compartments, pre-heated or pre-cooled, which retain their temperature over substantial periods of time by reason of insulated construction. Sterno "canned" heaters and one electrical heater are furnished with the carts. Sign plates can be changed according to types of merchandise offered. Plastic display sign at top of rod is lighted from within by means of batteries. "Walky Fountain" on top of cart in this picture dispenses iced orange drink; another can be substituted (or added at other side of cart) for vending hot coffee. These "Walky Fountains" are also available separately, fitted with straps so vendor can carry one strapped around his or her shoulders. Manufacturer is Walky Service Co. (#1)

Ticket Box Designed by Theatreman

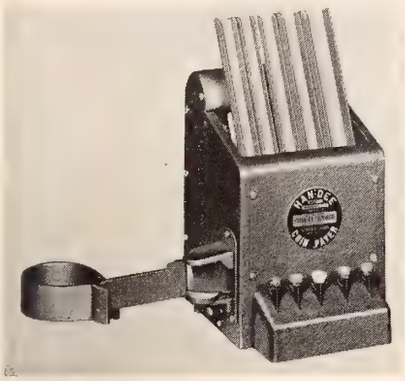


W. H. Hoffman, owner of the Lamar Theatre at Arthur, Illinois, designed this ticket box, which is available in crinkle finish of gold, silver, copper or bronze at $21.87, F.O.B., Arthur, Ill., or in any other color at $1.25 extra. Theatreman Hoffman designed the box when one department of a local factory slowed down, and he wanted to keep the payroll going full strength "because it helps me when they are working steadily." Box is made of 20-gauge steel, weighs 43 pounds, and measures 12″x12″x43″. There is no bin in the bottom drawer that stubs can miss; they all fall into the drawer. Apparent flare at top of the ticket box is a photographic illusion; actually the sides are perfectly vertical. (#2)

Plastic Wall Covering

Here pictured is one of the many patterns in which Varlar Stainproof Wall Covering is manufactured for theatre and other uses. The material, product of United Wallpaper, Inc., is available in either paper backing or cloth backing, and is designed to be applied like wallpaper. Grease and oil spots, pencil and crayon marks, ink stains and other common forms of soil are readily removed, the makers assert, without any damage to the wall covering. The material is described as mildew-proof, non-supporting to vermin, and resistant to water, steam, abrasion, and common cleansing agents. Varlar wall covering can be obtained in plain tints as well as in color patterns containing as many as 13 separate colors. (#3)

Soda Fountain Unit

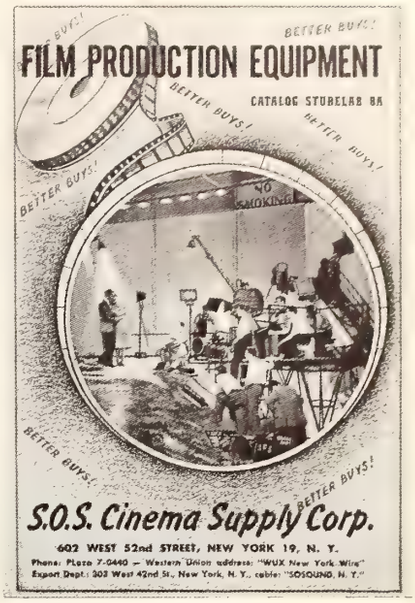


Latest product of the Soda Fountain Division of Liquid Carbonic Corporation, this 5′6″ Bobtail stresses sanitation especially. Stainless steel and round-corner construction, cold storage compartment without seams in which food can lodge, base six inches from the floor for easier mopping, are among its features in this respect. Wide choice of merchandise, and convenience and flexibility in operation, are incorporated by means of six syrup jars, four crushed fruit jars, sliding chipped-ice pan and shelves in the cold storage compartment. (#4)

Aluminum Safety Ladders

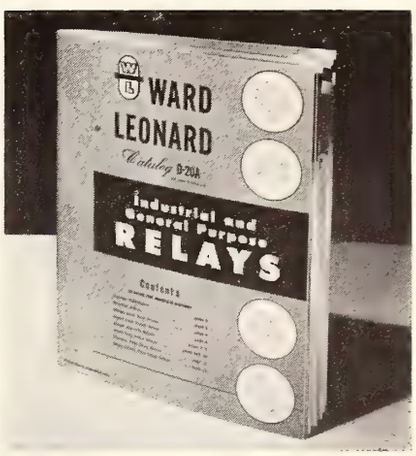
Built of light-weight aluminum alloy, and insulated against slippage and electricity by rubber pads ¾-inch deep at the bottom of each leg, two styles of step-ladders produced by O'Connor Company are available in heights ranging from 3 to 12 feet. Principal difference between the two styles is that one has steps on both sides and no pail rack while the other has a pail rack and steps on only one side. Both styles are available in heights of 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 feet; and the double-step ladder in heights of 10 and 12 feet also. (#5)

Compact Coin Changer



In production and available for immediate delivery, this new and highly compact coin-changer has only five keys, and measures only 12 by 8½ by 6½ inches. The penny key, with a plastic cap of lighter color, is the center of the five. The other four keys are arranged in order of value from left to right: 5, 10, 25 and 50 cents. The fact that there are only five keys, and that their order is so obvious and easy to learn, minimizes possibilities of error. Device is known as Handee, and is a product of Coinometer Corporation. It carries a factory guarantee for two years. (#6)

Aerosol Wax



Maintenance of surfaces is said to be greatly simplified by use of this "household" wax on wood, linoleum and other waxable surfaces because it is applied by simple spraying. The principle is the same as in the case of aerosol insecticides—pressure, put into the can at the factory, produces a spray when the valve is released. The seal, however, is hermetic, according to Bostwick Laboratories, the manufacturers, who state that no spontaneous evaporation or drying of the contents of the can will take place even over a period of years. The manufacturers further assert that the wax coating applied to surfaces by this spray will not chip, peel, gum up or water-spot; and that neither rubbing nor polishing is necessary. For metal-enamel surfaces, as often used in modern lobbies and entrance-ways, the same company offers a companion product called Bostwick Automobile Spray Wax, which has a Carnauba base, and is wiped lightly to dryness after being sprayed on. Both the choice of ingredients in these compounds, and their packaging in pressure cans, operate to effect material reduction in the labor cost of maintaining large areas of surface. (#7)

Television and Studio Equipment

Television and studio equipment, including 35-mm. projection and sound apparatus — a total of about 1,600 items altogether—can be found listed at prices said to be 25-40 per cent below the market, in this new catalog just issued by S.O.S. Cinema Supply Corp. The catalog is coded "Sturelab 8A." It covers 88 pages. Two hundred of the 1,600 items listed are illustrated. Equipment is grouped into sections according to its nature, while a convenient cross-index facilitates finding any item. New, used, and rebuilt apparatus items are included in this quasi-encyclopedia of technical aids. (#8)

For Sound Systems, Oil Burners, Flashers, Etc.

Sound systems, oil burners, flashers, public address systems, air conditioning equipment, and many other appliances indispensable to the theatre use relays, some of which wear out from time to time while others could be replaced to advantage, in some instance, by better types. Complete specifications and prices on relays of many different kinds are contained in this Catalog D-20A, just issued by Ward Leonard Electric Company. Midget and Heavy Duty, Magnetic and Motor Driven, Time Delay and Thermal relays are among the types listed and described in this catalog. (#9) mechanical film splicers, mechanical picture changeover, telephone connection to the manager, and projection reels so the picture need not be run on shipping reels. —PC, UO.

(For projection room ventilation arrangements, see under "safety.")

Projection Equipment

All projection rooms should be equipped with both hand and automatic rewinds where legally permitted and with mechanical cue markers, and necessary tools. —PC, UO.

The theatre, not the projectionists, should supply needed tools. Tools should be kept under lock and key. Keys should be entrusted to the projectionists, but tools should be inventoried periodically and the manager should do it himself.—PC, MO.

Following is a list of the tools the majority of the Projection Advisory Council thinks the theatre should supply:

Screwdrivers of various sizes, pliers of various sizes, cutting pliers, open-end wrenches of various sizes, soldering iron (not torch), projector-lamphouse alignrod, trouble lamps, rubber tape, friction tape, allen wrenches, test phones, tube puller.

Life of Projection Equipment. In the experience of the members of the Projection Advisory Council sound and projection equipment properly maintained has the following life expectancy:

Arc Rectifiers, tube type: 10 years to indifinitely, Arc Rectifiers, stack types 5 years to indefinitely. Motor-driven Rewinds: 5 years to indefinitely. Projector Mechanisms: 10 years to indefinitely if overhauled every 18 months to 5 years depending on severity of service. Sound Systems: 10-15 years.

Projection Standards

Operating Standards. Inspect all equipment before each day's show. Inspect every reel before running it for the first time. Repair all faults in film or equipment without delay. (PC, UO). Have sound and projection equipment serviced by outside experts. (PC and TC, UO). No matter how small the theatre or how limited its budget it cannot afford to give patrons less than the best in sound and picture quality at all times.—PC, UO.

Rewind by hand (where permitted and practical). Follow SMPE screen brightness, power line voltage variation, projection angle and viewing port standards. Exceed Academy sound power standards. Keep flutter distortion to not more than 0.15 per cent.—PC, MO.

In modernizing speakers do not put new units on old baffles, replace the entire speaker system. Do not add modernized speakers to old-type sound systems—modernize throughout. It is no longer necessary to stock spare speaker units in the theatre.—PC, MO.

Don't continue old-fashioned low-intensity arcs in operation, they are uneconomical. Replace them.—PC, MO.

Don't fail to complain about poor prints, and don't let the projectionist do it. Complaints should be made by the person who does the booking.—PC, MO.

Theatre circuits larger than 10 to 25 theatres (according to local circumstances) will benefit economically and in efficiency by retaining the services of a competent Supervisor of Projection.—PC, MO.

Projectionists' Inspection Routine. The following schedule for inspections by projectionists is recommended:

Inspect Daily: Exciter lamps, lamphouse reflectors, power line voltage (this depends on location; where voltage is well regulated inspections as infrequent as once a month may be adequate), projector fire shutters, projector lenses, smoothness of take-up action, tube readings (with built-in meters), and volume and quality of each loudspeaker unit.

Inspect Weekly: fuses, motor-generator brushes and commutators, non-synch condition and turntable speed (or leave this to the service inspector) port safety shutter action, projector and soundhead gears, rectifier tube filaments, reserve of carbons, sound track alignments, spare parts supply, tube readings requiring portable test meter (or leave this to the service inspector).

Inspect Monthly: backstage speaker connections, condition of power switch blades, condition of screen, flutter or wows in sound, lamphouse asbestos leads, projector and soundhead sprocket teeth, soundhead frequency response, amplifier frequency response, and sound system ground connections.—PC, MO.

Projection Room Maintenance

Projection Room Cleanliness. The projection room and its fittings should be on a continuous clean-up program, not given a "spring cleaning" once in a while. Sweeping and mopping the projection room floor, however, should be the responsibility of the janitors and not of the projectionists.

Projectionists should clean the following items daily: lenses, lamphouse mirror or condenser, lamphouse interior, film compartments of projectors and soundheads. Weekly or oftener: projection and viewing port glass. Monthly: clear dust out of interior of rectifiers and amplifiers. Semi-annually: drain and change motor-generator lubricant.—PC, MO.

Where the projector mechanism is one that has an oil sump and automatic spray or splash system, lubricant should be drained and changed monthly.—PC, PO.

Projection room walls and ceiling should be painted every two years. Projection room floor (unless covered with linoleum, which is not permitted everywhere) should be repainted as often as paint wears thin.—PC, MO.

Safety

Safety. In planning a new theatre or remodeling an old one, keep ramps and steps out of the path of patron traffic if at all possible. Ask local fire authorities for their safety suggestions and adhere to them—this reduces not only the chance of accidents but also the chance that the manager can ever be accused of negligence. Flame-treat all curtains and draperies, repeat the treatment as often as necessary (usually yearly). Hold regular and repeated fire and panic drills for all employes. For the cigarette hazard: train employes to watch for lit stubs at all times and particularly on closing; flame-treat all flammable materials in sections where smoking is permitted; provide enough sand urns, extinguishers, and ash trays with mats under them. For the popcorn oil and candy wrapping hazard: train the staff to pick up packages and bags as fast as dropped; provide plenty of waste cans for such trash; store only a minimum of popcorn or candy outside a fireproof storeroom; train the operator of the popcorn machine carefully.—TC, MO.

Protect Audience

Keep the auditorium as bright as safety requires. (PC and TC, MO). If that is too bright for the picture, put in more powerful projection lamps.—PC, MO.

Inspect chairs daily; repair all faults promptly. Carry the fullest and broadest possible liability insurance. Provide adequate emergency lighting (not necessarily consisting of full normal lighting) with duplicate controls; locate one set of emergency light controls in the projection room.—TC, MO.

Provide the theatre with a first-aid kit. (TC, UO). Train all employes in its use. —TC, PO.

Projection Safety. Adhere to Underwriters recommendations; they have proved in practice to be adequate and not excessive. (PC, MO). Scrupulously follow all officially required safety measures regardless of what the competition may do —these measures are not so expensive as to justify taking risks with human lives. —PC, UO.

Severely discipline or dismiss any projectionist who violates a safety rule. There is no labor union local in the I.A. that will ever object.—PC, UO.

Protect Employes

All lamphouses must be vented to outdoors; arc lamp fumes are dangerous to health. (PC, UO). Ventilating provisions that will automatically exhaust smoke and fumes out-of-doors in case of projection room fire are indispensable.

Adequate projection room ventilation is essential for prolonging the life of projection and sound equipment by avoiding undesirable temperature rise in operation (PC, MO) and it is also essential to the health of the projectionists. (PC, UO).

In air conditioned theatres, conditioned air should be supplied to the projection suite through suitable ducts and whatever safety shutters, etc., in the ducts local regulations may require—not from the auditorium. Air from the projection room, however, should not be re-circulated back to the conditioning system, but vented out-of-doors.—PC, MO.

In non-conditioned theatres, air should be supplied to the projection suite from outdoors; and the projection rooms supplied with radiators or other heating facilities for winter months.—PC, MO.

Operating at 85 amperes, the Motiograph-Hall produces 19,000 lumens—more light than condenser-type high intensity lamps operating at more than twice this amperage.
A rotating positive carbon (an exclusive feature) permits even burning of the carbons and a proper crater form.
Automatic focus control holds the crater of the positive carbon at the exact focal point of the mirror.
The carbons used cost about one-third that of the larger carbons employed in condenser-type lamps operating in the 140-180 ampere range.
Other Motiograph products: 1 K.W. and 46-ampere high intensity arc lamps, projectors, sound systems, motor-generators, in-car speaker equipment and junction boxes, ramp switching panels for drive-ins, turntables, etc.

EQUIPMENT LITERATURE

One request brings you any number of items of equipment literature. For booklets described below, check appropriate square in adjoining coupon. For other literature listed in the coupon, check adjacent squares. There is no charge or obligation.

ARC LAMP DATA. A great deal of valuable information about arc lamps and their optics is packed into a small, pocket-size booklet put out by Heyer-Shultz, Inc. It details the reason for, and importance of, matching lens speed and reflector speed; tells how to determine the reflector working distance for any given lens speed, and explains the optical details of reflector action. Additionally, it describes the Heyer-Shultz optical reflectors, how to install and how to maintain them; and explains the use of both the company's pin hole aperture plate for aligning optical elements, and split aperture plates for balancing light from two projectors. (#1)

CLEANING AND SHAMPOOING. Effective cleaning of theatre screens, drapes, ornamental surfaces and upholstery; and in place shampooing of carpets, are pictured and explained in a four-page folder by National Super Service, Inc. The bulletin describes the best methods of using the Super vacuum cleaner, and technical details of the cleaner itself (#2)

DRIVE-IN CORDS AND CABLES. Retractile, spiraled "Koiled Kords" for in-car speakers, and "Teleseal" underground service wire for inexpensive wiring of drive-in areas, are described in literature issued by the Whitney Blake Company. Four feet of coiled-up speaker cord extends to approximately 25 feet, if necessary. but retracts to its original length when released. Twisting, tangling and trailing of speaker wires are eliminated where Koiled Kords are used. Teleseal underground wire is copper, electroplated with lead, which in turn is plated with brass, insulated, and then jacketed in neoprene over the insulation. (#3)

DRIVE-IN "PACKAGE." A 16-page, 3-color booklet issued by Ballantyne Company describes in detail the drive-in theatres that organization is prepared to design, build, equip, and deliver as a completed "package" ready to operate. All the purchaser needs to do is turn the key and start his show, the booklet asserts; and adds that such drive-ins, planned and built on a mass scale, cost the purchaser $10,000 to $20,000 less than any comparable theatre he could build for himself. A very complete description is given of the services Ballantyne offers to render and the materials it will supply and install. (#4)

GENERAL CATALOG—for every part of the theatre—is issued by S.O.S Cinema Supply Corp. Nearly a thousand items are included in its 64 pages. Prices are given, and are highly competitive. Whoever buys anything for a theatre will want this free catalog handy for reference. (#5).

LENSES. The Kollmorgen Super-Snaplite and Snaplite lenses (f/1.9 and f/2.0 respectively) are described in detail in a two-color, six-page brochure by Kollmorgen Optical Corporation. Also illustrated and described is the Kollmorgen Series 1 Snaplite. Included is a list of fittings, by means of which any Kollmorgen lens can be used with any of 23 models of American-made projectors. (#6)

MARQUEE SAFETY LETTER. Adler Silhouette Letter Company's new plastic "Lok-Lin" letter is featured in a new 4-page, 2-color bulletin issued by that company. The letter, it is stated, cannot blow off or fall off the rails under any conditions of wind or weather because of a new, integral construction that holds it safely, yet permits it to be installed and removed instantly. Aside from describing the new letter, the bulletin pictures seventeen different marquee arrangements for attracting the public. (#7)

PROJECTOR MECHANISM. Mechanical details of the Century Projector Corporation's single shutter projector are set forth photographically and diagrammatically in a four-page, two-color booklet. Text material explains the gear arrangements, constructional features, and so on. (#8)

PROJECTOR PARTS. Latest catalog issued by Wenzel Projector Company, although primarily intended for users of that company's equipment to assist them in making repairs and ordering spare parts, will be of interest and value to anyone concerned with projection. Its "exploded" drawings and photographic illustrations convey an abundance of detailed information about the construction of modern equipment and accessories. (#9)

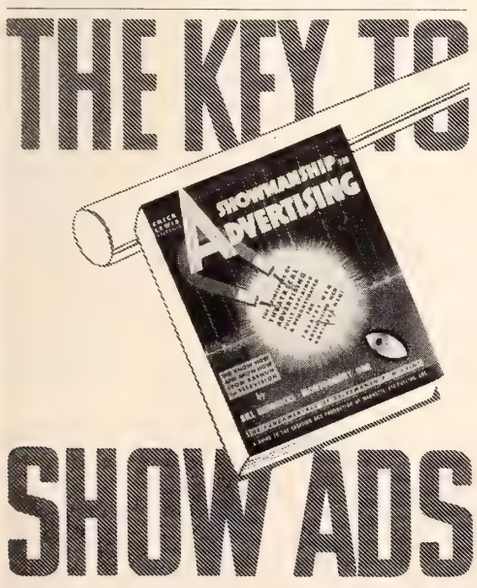
While every precaution is taken to insure accuracy, we cannot guarantee against the possibility of an occasional change or omission.

Pictures and slides may soon be rear-projected from within to the translucent glass panels of this inner-service marquee, recently installed at the Capitol Theatre, Manitowoc, Wisconsin. Picture shows employe changing copy from within, and some of the reflector-mounted incandescent lamps.



Plan Rear Projection to Put Pictures on Marquee

Passersby will be attracted to the theatre by pictures and slides flashed on marquee attraction panels from within when experiments now under progress have been completed, Ben B. Poblocki of Poblocki and Sons reveals. The process will employ rear projection, with the glass panel serving as the translucent screen. The projected material will appear on a suitable space left blank amid, or alongside of, the usual changeable letter copy.

It is expected that the projector to be used for this purpose will be entirely self-contained. The space available behind the Poblocki inner-service attraction panels, and its accessibility, facilitate solution of the problem of marquee projection.

James Frank Heads Sales Of Ticket-Auditing Device

A new device to audit motion picture theatre admissions automatically and eliminate ticket manipulation by employes has been developed by Theatre Control Corporation and will be marketed under direct supervision of James Frank, Jr., who has been named vice-president.

I. A. Notes • News of the Locals

Richard F. Walsh

Reduction of theatre admission taxes is a matter of concern to the I.A.T.S.E., which is cooperating with the theatre industry in trying to induce Congress to cut such taxes. The I.A. Bulletin for Autumn, 1949, urges members to express their view individually to their Senators and Representatives. President Richard F. Walsh has written to Congressional leaders urging action, and explaining: "It is my desire to be of all the help I can to increase the attendance in theatres and places of amusement, because when that attendance is large more of our people are given employment."

Another local union to spend its own funds on advertising on behalf of its employers is No. 647 of Cheyenne, Wyoming. As noted in this column on September 17th, Local 386, Columbus, Ohio, printed a paid advertisement in the Columbus Citizen expressing gratitude to local theatre owners in these terms: "They have contributed to our welfare as well as promoted the American way of life by their consideration . . ." Local No. 647 advertises in the Scottsbluff Star-Herald, on the occasion of the opening of the Hi-Way drive-in, as follows: "We of the unions ask you to support this theatre because we feel that the owners will be fair to their employees and that they will endeavor to give the public the best in entertainment at reasonable prices." Seven other labor organizations in the vicinity of Scottsbluff cooperated in the full-page appeal.

Stagehands were paid one dollar per evening, on condition of working matinee performance for nothing, according to a handbill of December, 1887, re-printed in the Autumn, 1949 issue of the I. A. Bulletin. The handbill was a protest, distributed on behalf of one John Godwin, who was dismissed from his $1-a-night job because he refused to work matinees without pay. The Bulletin does not say how the dispute ended.

In an effort to increase business (and therefore employment) in legitimate theatres, Local No. 1, Stagehands, New York, is cooperating with the Esso gasoline company in sponsoring the telecasting of legitimate entertainment from the stages of New York theatres. The TV series, known as "Tonight on Broadway," is expected to attract more patronage to live-entertainment box offices.

Morris J. Rotker of Local No. 306, New York, is now also a member of School Board No. 18, the Bronx.

British Promote 'Julia' With Window Contests

British exhibitors in many sections of the country are exploiting "Julia Misbehaves" by taking advantage of the window display contests which MGM arranged for in its tieup with the Cooperative Wholesale Society on a washing powder which it is promoting. Theatre managers are sent publicity material from which they make up their window displays and prizes are awarded to those adjudged best in selling the washing powder and in selling tickets for "Julia Misbehaves."

Take for instance, Manager R. G. Francis of the Regal in Chester, who succeeded in getting all 12 local branches of the Cooperative Wholesale Society to arrange ambitious displays in their windows. Manager H. Clayton-Nutt of the Broadway, Eccles, went Francis nine windows better, getting 21 CWS displays in that town. For a local incentive, Clayton-Nutt offered a two-month pass to his theatre as a first prize in addition to the national prize of $60 and a two-week holiday for two presented by MGM. Business was so good that the manager, by consulting his records, found it almost reached a new high for the house.

Lessons Never Learned

In our travels around this country we've met and talked with a lot of exhibitors. Circuit men and Independents.

A great many with whom we chatted were mystified by what they seem to feel is a complete disregard of fair trading and, in some instances, in violation of the recent decision in the government case.

The constant jockeying for position by some of the companies under the very questionable guise of trading, can only lead to another avalanche of lawsuits.

Even worse than the potential flood of suits is the constant danger that the Department of Justice will step in and charge the industry with further violations of the anti-trust laws. Each time they do so means millions of dollars of expense and endless charges and counter-charges.

Why must this continue? When will the Big Brains of this business learn that it is not only bad business to push a hard deal but downright silly in the face of possible results from such tactics?

What the hell difference does it make if a company does pop up with a rare and occasioned super-duper that can do a great business at the box-office? Is that any reason to make outrageous demands or sledge-hammer the kind of a deal or the kind of terms that the average theatreman, be he circuit or independent, does not want? Or why have one kind of a deal for circuits and another for independents?

It is sometimes sickening to listen to every conceivable form of criticism and abuse being heaped upon the industry as a whole because of these examples of bad trading. There was a time when we looked forward to getting out into the field and visiting and talking with industry people. Now we are getting to hate the idea altogether.

Put this in your pipe and smoke it: In the last three weeks we heard of contemplated lawsuits, some in the talking stage and some about ready to be started, in several different parts of the country, that can add up to ten or fifteen triple-damage court duels amounting to about forty millions of dollars in damages claimed.

In our humble opinion—and with the welfare of the industry at heart it is not only a right but a duty to speak out about this situation—these possible suits create a distinctly bad impression regarding the whole setup as it exists today in the selling and buying of pictures.

Why this grim determination that the domestic market must make up for all the lost or frozen foreign revenue? How about all those Hollywood economy drives that we were told, time and again, would bring production costs down to where they could recoup on the domestic market. Wha hoppen to those costs? Have they been brought down or was the campaign a flop? And if they were brought down, why the demand for higher and tougher terms all the time?

How in the name of goodness can this industry even contemplate, much less expect to launch, a public relations campaign when two of its most important branches are ready to spring at each other's throats.

Perhaps the divorcement of exhibition from distribution now in process may to some extent alleviate this situation and create a market so competitive that many of the weird and fantastic policy-makers will have to change their tunes and their habits. Especially the ones who are responsible for the current wave of antagonism which appears to be engulfing the industry.

What kind of a crime is it supposed to be when an exhibitor can buy a great picture and make a lot of money with it? Is it against the laws of man and business? We don't think so. We've never heard of a great picture that made a lot of money for the exhibitors that didn't do likewise for the producers and distributors. Did you?

Think it over, carefully and soberly, you men and women of this movie industry. Whether you be part of exhibition or distribution, just ask yourself: is it all worth the money, the time and the bitterness that comes of these incidents?

There can be only one answer and those involved had better act on it . . . but quick before too much damage is done.

Good Timing

The industry will watch with considerable interest the results of the immense effort made by the 20th-Fox showmen who have tackled (most ambitiously and seemingly most efficiently) that problem of timing consumer advertising to do the picture some good when it breaks at the theatres. "The Prince of Foxes" national campaign scores high from every standpoint of selling approach, tailoring messages to the reader-interest of the various magazines, and timing.

Perhaps it will serve as a guide to those who have been splashing the pages of magazines with costly art for very costly space to ballyhoo a show that wasn't going to show up at the theatres for weeks, even months after publication.

WHAT'S NEWS
In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

To a few in the motion picture industry Columbia General Sales Manager A. Montague is a quiet man, interested in the arts, an accomplished pianist, and above all one who weighs his words carefully so that they don't say what he doesn't mean, but who in the process has sometimes been known to obscure his meaning altogether. This week there wasn't any obscurity in what Montague told the Theatre Owners of America. Faced with that cat that continues to come back—the report that Columbia employes are intimating that advanced admissions should be asked for "Jolson Sings Again"—Montague's reply had a vigorous clarity:

"We have never demanded, or have we authorized any employe of Columbia to even remotely suggest that an exhibitor advance his admission price, and I vigorously deny any reports to the contrary and would appreciate any evidence available in substantiation of such reports."

Montague's answer came as the TOA was attacking Columbia's sales policies on "Jolson" with TOA General Counsel Herman Levy declaring that the terms asked by Columbia were out of line in that they had the practical effect of forcing an exhibitor to raise his admissions. To this Columbia Attorney Lou Frohlich, who says what he means and says it with emphasis, replied that exhibitors had no more right to fix the prices Columbia charged for its films than Columbia would have the right to fix the exhibitor's admissions. Late this week no progress seemed to have been made in the controversy, with one possibly significant action standing out: Further discussions would be handled by TOA's Counsel Levy, not with Montague, but with Columbia Attorney Frohlich.

Meanwhile Rotus Harvey, board chairman of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, called upon his group not to pay 60 per cent terms for "Jolson." Allied has already probed the Columbia sales policies in this direction and a somewhat cynical trade wonders whether all the shouting is actually over "Jolson" or the fact that other companies might follow suit on mass appeal pictures.

In Pennsylvania 57 communities voted to legalize Sunday movies; 23 against. Lumpkin, Ga., also voted to see movies on Sunday. In Savannah, Lucas Theatres was telling the town that its city amusement tax was unconstitutional in view of the Georgia Supreme Court ruling for the town of Brunswick, that the tax could not be collected along with an occupational tax. In Louisville, the National, which made headline space in an anti-trust suit, closed, with lack of proper product given as the reason. And out in Hermitage, Mo., the Hickory Theatre burned to the ground as a volunteer bucket brigade lost the fight with a block-destroying fire.

In New York, the TOA executive committee, approved a series of views which will form the backbone of suggestions towards a code of fair trade practices, and out in Los Angeles, Henry Wilcoxon, who completed a tour of 15 key cities for Paramount, declared that the biggest beef he had received about movies was that while one half of a double-feature bill might be suitable for children, the other half wasn't.

LITIGATION

In New York off Times Square on 42nd Street is the New Amsterdam Theatre, once the seat of Flo Zeigfeld's glories in the days of Will Rogers and the "Follies." This week, the New Amsterdam, now a movie house, went to court and asked for damages amounting to $9,125,000 from the eight majors and the Loew and RKO circuits, charging that the split of product system used by the circuits made them the arbiters of how and when the New Amsterdam should book product.

This was only one suit in an active week. Metropolitan Playhouses and Skouras Theatres, which are financially related, went to court and asked $9,000,000 in damages from RKO plus a court order which would compel that circuit to sell to Metropolitan-Skouras its joint interest in four New York areas theatres. (P. 13)

Also in a New York State court, Paramount won the right to pre-trial examination of witnesses and inspection of all records in its $562,265 suit alleging fraud over film rentals against Harry Brandt and 122 of his alleged associates. Suit grants the right to inspect operating cost charts.

And out in California, carrying out the divestiture agreement reached with the Government through its parent 20th Century-Fox, Fox West Coast was giving up 16 theatres to Principal Theatres and retaining nine.

GENERAL

It was a busy week for Eric Johnston, dapper president of the Motion Picture Association of America. To a House judiciary committee investigating monopoly he suggested that a governmental agency be set up to counsel businessmen on what might be trust law violations. He stood up for the defendants in the Government anti-trust suit saying their violations were "not willful." (Last week a subsidiary of one of the defendants actually told a court that an agreement it had entered into with a partner was illegal because it had been designed to prevent construction of a rival theatre in a neighborhood!) And he insisted that the Motion Picture Export Association had not divided the European markets, said anyone could join, and defended the Webb-Pomerene Act (P. 12).

He also made a speech at the Motion Picture Pioneers in New York where Cecil B. DeMille was honored as "Pioneer of the Year" and where Pioneer President Jack Cohn announced his outfit was getting up a fund for indigent members. And in Washington he said that the first action of the all-industry committee, which meets in Washington at the Shoreham Hotel, Dec. 12-13, would probably tackle federal amusement taxes.

In Hollywood, 1500 members of the Screen Actors Guild turned down plans for a new Television Authority Union, which threatened a further split in the parent ranks of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. And also in Hollywood, shorts producers were up in arms over the Academy action in cutting the shorts Oscars down from two to one.

Financial: Paramount—estimated earnings quarter ending Oct. 1, 1949, $5,824,-000; compared to $6,445,000 for the comparative period last year. Dividends of 50 cents a share of common, payable Dec. 21, declared. Loew's, declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on common, payable Dec. 31, 1949.

Johnston Wants Trust Law Advice Agency Set Up

A government agency to which businessmen could come for counsel about the legality of their actions under the anti-trust laws was recommended Wednesday to the House judiciary committee in Washington, D. C., by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America. The counseling body could be established within the Justice Department or the Federal Trade Commission, he suggested.

Johnston's recommendation came as he told the committee that he "is certain that any violations of the anti-trust laws" by the defendants in the Government anti-trust suit "was not willful." After that he avoided questions on this case, declaring that the MPAA was not a party in the suit and had no control over the operations of the individual companies which are defendants in the suit.

Denies Market Divvy

Johnston also denied that the Motion Picture Export Association had divided up markets abroad terming a statement on MPEA activities by Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers President Ellis Arnall "completely incorrect."

Johnston's defense came as he testified in favor of the Webb-Pomerene Act, which permits industries to unite for foreign trading and practically waives application of the anti-trust laws in deals outside the United States.

The three-corporation president declared that "The Motion Picture Export Association is open to all American motion picture companies big and small. It lives up both to the letter and the spirit of the Webb-Pomerene Act."

Arnall Disagrees

Previously, Ellis Arnall, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers had attacked the MPEA for alleged discrimination against the smaller companies and urged the repeal of sections of the Webb-Pomerene act which made such alleged discrimination possible.

Johnston, in defense of the act, declared it had made it possible for the American motion picture industry to operate abroad since the end of the war and that the MPEA had been organized as the result of conditions which "were principally brought about (abroad) by military occupation, state-sanctioned monopolies and nationalization of the industry in Iron Curtain countries."

Need Foreign Business

Johnston declared that "the prosperity of the American motion picture depends upon this foreign business," adding:

"Everyone in the motion picture business ought to be eternally grateful to the authors of the Webb-Pomerene Act for the wisdom of Congress in passing it."

Paramount Wins Inspection Right In Brandt Suit

Paramount this week apparently won a sweeping right to pre-trial examination of witnesses and inspection of all records in its $562,265 suit alleging film rental fraud against Harry Brandt, prominent New York circuit and buying combine head, as well as 122 other defendants said to be associated with Brandt.

The right to inspect the records was granted by the New York State Supreme Court, which in New York is the court of first appeal and not the highest tribunal, and covers, apparently for the first time in such suits, the right to examine operating expenses. Legal circles thought that this might be because one of the methods charged by Paramount in perpetrating the alleged fraud was by exaggerating cost of operations. Suit was originally filed on Jan. 12, 1948. (See STR, Jan. 17, 1948, P. 9)

Big 3 May Ask 5 Years' Time

The Big 3 defendants—Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM)— in the Government anti-trust suit were reported ready with a proposed decree this week which would give them five years to put divorce into effect and which would provide for voluntary arbitration of intra-industry disputes.

Filing of the Big 3 decree, which is largely a formality since they are fighting divorce and may appeal against divorce to the U. S. Supreme Court if they do not negotiate consent decrees, is considered more or less an action to comply with the three-judge statutory court's invitation to all parties in the suit to submit their versions of a decree. Such submitted decrees must embody a plan for divorce and divestiture, in addition to incorporating the trade practices which

See Warner Consent Decree Shaping; RKO to Ask for Divestiture Extension

Warner Bros., and the Department of Justice seem to be moving closer toward a consent decree, usually well-informed sources in Washington, D. C., indicated this week. The sources pointed out that the Warner-Justice Department talks were continuing, indicating that neither side could be "far off as far as disagreement is concerned."

RKO meanwhile was seeking a year's extension of the divestiture deadline, apparently on the grounds that it has been having difficulty with some joint owners. The Justice Department is said to be undecided on this.

Week's Trust-Suit Demands Reach $18,124,000 Damages

What is probably the all-time high record for damages demanded in motion picture industry anti-trust suits, was reached within a seven-day period this week when two suits alone filed in the New York federal court reached a total of $18,12 ,000.

They are:

1) Suit for $9,120,000 filed by Max A. Cohen's three companies controlling the New Amsterdam Theatre against the eight majors and the RKO and Loew's circuits on the ground that the product split system used by the circuits had the practical effect of controlling what and when he booked for the New Amsterdam.

2) Suit for $9,000,000 by Metropolitan Playhouses and Skouras Theatres against RKO, seeking to compel the circuit to sell the interests it holds jointly with Metropolitan-Skouras in three New York and one New Jersey theatre.

Max Cohen Sues For $9,124,000

Claiming that a product split system enforced by the RKO and Loew's circuits in New York, through alleged conspiracy with the eight major distributors was practically making the two circuits the arbiter of how he booked pictures for his Times Square area New Amsterdam Theatre, Max A. Cohen Thursday filed an anti-trust action in federal court for triple damages amounting to $9,124,000.

Actual plaintiffs in the suit are three Cohen-controlled companies—Anco Amusement Corporation, Anco Enterprises and Anwell Amusement Corporation. Defendants are RKO and Loews theatre circuits, 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, Warner Bros., RKO, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, Universal and United Artists. A spokesman for Cohen's attorney declared that under the system, whereby RKO and Loew's theatres split product in New York, Cohen "couldn't select the pictures he wanted when he wanted them" for the New Amsterdam. This house, the spokesman explained, is not a neighborhood house but draws from all over New York due to its downtown location and for it to have to wait until either of the rival circuits booked pictures before it could get product was the basis of the suit. Formerly the Cohen house, it is said, played product after the circuits. Now it is playing day-and-date, but the system still deprives of freedom in selecting its bookings when wanted, the spokesman said.

Not Dictating Admission Increases To Exhibitors, Montague Insists

Columbia General Sales Manager A. Montague this week denied that his company was intimating to exhibitors that they must charge advanced admissions for "Jolson Sings Again" and reiterated his request that any evidence to the contrary be submitted to him by exhibitors.

Montague's denial came in the face of a report made by a Theatre Owners of America committee which criticized the company's sales policies on the Jolson picture and concurred in the opinion of its counsel, Herman M. Levy, that the terms Columbia was asking for the feature were so high that they had the practical effect of compelling exhibitors to raise their admissions.

"The fact that no runs of 'Jolson Sings Again' have been observed at other than advanced admission prices is most persuasive to the belief that some policy designed to bring about such advance prices is in effect," Walter Reade, Jr., chairman of TOA's Distributor-Exhibitor Relations Committee, declared after a meeting of the committee had been held on the question of the "Jolson" rentals.

Columbia's reply to this, through Attorney Lou Frohlich, was, in effect: "Nuts."

"The exhibitors got the Government to get a decree that we can't fix admission prices, and the exhibitors can't fix our prices either," declared Frohlich vigorously. "We have the same privileges they have."

More formally, Montague replied to the TOA protest:

"We have never demanded, or have we authorized any employe of Columbia to even remotely suggest an exhibitor advance his admission price, and I vigorously deny any reports to the contrary and would appreciate any evidence available in substantiation of such reports."

This was substantially the same reply Montague's office had issued to the National Allied

National Closes

The National at Louisville, Ky., which made the headlines repeatedly when its operators, Fifth and Walnut Corporation claimed it could not get product and filed suit against the majors, closed this week. A spokesman for the owners declared the house had not been able to operate profitably on the product that was available. Fifth and Walnut is now asking the U. S. Supreme Court to review the adverse decision handed down against it by both a New York Federal Court and U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Skouras Seeks To Oust RKO

Metropolitan Playhouses and its subsidiary, Skouras Theatres, this week sought a court order to compel RKO to sell them its interests in four jointly-owned New York area theatres. The court order is sought in an anti-trust suit asking triple damages amounting to $9,000,000 filed by the plaintiffs against the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, RKO-Radio Pictures, Inc., and RKO Theatres.

The suit involves the RKO-Skouras holdings in the Pelham and Castle Hill, in the Bronx, the Midway at Forest Hills, Long Island, and the RKO Proctor in Newark, N. J.

Either Buy or Sell

Under the terms of the consent decree which RKO reached with the Justice Department in the anti-trust suit, RKO may either buy full interest in the houses or may sell its interest to its partners or outsiders. The Metropolitan-Skouras action arises over the allegation that RKO is refusing to sell to the plaintiffs. It seeks a court order which would not only prevent RKO from selling to anyone other than Metropolitan-Skouras but would order the defendant company to sell its interest to the plaintiffs.

The basis for this request is the allegation that

Motion Picture Pioneers Sets Up Fund for Needy Members

The Motion Picture Pioneers has established a fund to care for its needy members, and will appoint a board to administer the fund, President Jack Cohn announced Wednesday during the annual dinner of the organization at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York.

The Pioneers, made up of film men from all over the world who have had more than a quarter of a century's association with the film business, raised the fund purely through voluntary contributions, which came in unexpectedly after Cohn had first suggested such a fund at last year's dinner. He did not say how much was involved or how many needy members there were.

Should Care for Own

Cohn's remarks preceded those of Cecil B. DeMille, who was presented with a scroll as the Pioneer of the year. He told the diners that one fault of the industry is that it did not take care of those who hit the skids.

"You're only as good as your last picture," he remarked, turning to Cohn, "You should look after your own. Almost every other industry does."

"I'd like to give a minute's thought," the producer said in accepting the scroll, "to the pioneers who are not here. . . . I mean the unknown pioneers, the men who have done so much. . . . They haven't got a monument like the unknown soldier."

The inscription on the scroll presented DeMille reads:

"To Cecil B. DeMille, who took a dream long, long ago and side by side with other dreamers, gave it form and nurtured it into an art that now circles the globe."

Si Fabian made the presentation, stating:

"We laud him for his pioneering; we laud him for his artistry. Above all we laud him as just a human being."

Cohn was presented with a silver tray by Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America. Spyros Skouras, another speaker, praised the role of the motion picture declaring:

"In my opinion the motion picture industry is performing today a service to the world equal to the United Nations." Milton Berle was master of ceremonies; Hal Horne, toastmaster.

Volume, Not Price Is Vital—DeMille

The number of people who see a picture interests him more than the price they pay to see it, Cecil B. DeMille told a press conference in New York Monday replying to a question about advanced admissions.

"The principal thing is to get as many people to see it as possible," he declared, making it plain, however, that his views would not influence sales policies for his forthcoming "Samson and Delilah." For, he explained, he was looking at the subject as a producer and was not engaged in distribution.

He also pointed out that presently curtailed foreign markets made it necessary for a picture to get back as much money as it could in the domestic market.

This curtailed revenue situation, he continued, forced Hollywood to turn to economy and had "brought about what is a very vital necessity . . . that is the cutting out of waste."

As far as economy is concerned, "you should go as far as you can without hurting a picture," he believes. That he achieved his aim to trim costs successfully was indicated in his revelation that "Samson" had been brought in for $3,000,000 or $1,000,000 less than "Unconquered."

Most of the saving is done in the script, he declared, stating: "Do all cutting in the script and not on the film."

As to production time, DeMille says it still takes him about three years to get a picture to the public, though at one time, he recalled ruefully, he had made two pictures simultaneously —"The Cheat" in the daytime and "The Golden Chance" at night, doing most of his sleeping in the studio. Both had made money, he recalled, also revealing frankly that there had been a flop on the DeMille schedule—"Four Frightened People"—whose failure he attributed to a story the public did not like.

Asked what he thought of production abroad, he replied:

"I would be apt to produce where I think it's best for the picture itself. I've done right well here and I think the industry should be supported," he added indicating he did not think producers should fly abroad because of problems at home.

Free Flow

However, he does believe in the free flow of motion pictures, believing "definitely that art should be as international as medicine."

The veteran producer indicated that he was interested in television. He explained that he had been first with the legitimate theatre, then in motion pictures and later in radio. He thought that television might prove a help to pictures, recalling the fear with which exhibitors greeted radio. Such fears, he declared, had been unfounded and radio in turn had given the screen Bing Crosby and Bob Hope.

TOA Committee To Screen Views AsCodeSuggestion

The distributor-exhibitor relations committee of the Theatre Owners of America concluded a meeting in New York Wednesday with approval of a series of views, which when sifted and rewritten may serve as the basis of suggestion to the motion picture industry of code of trade practices.

TOA Executive Director Gael Sullivan, discussing the meeting said that everyone present had presented his views on the trade practices—ranging from print shortages to squawks about trailer agreements between the major distributors and an accessory outfit,—and that these views would be sifted by a special screening committee and reduced to written form.

Sullivan declared that the project would take considerable time so that the views would be clearly expressed. He pointed out that TOA itself could not write an industry code but could only arrive at the combined views of its membership and present this as its side of the story to the remainder of the industry.

Oscar Minus

Short subject producers in Hollywood this week were drawing up a protest to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences over its action in cutting the number of shorts "oscars" from two to one. Prior to the cut, the Academy gave an "oscar" to the best live action one-reeler and the best live-action two-reeler. From now on, two-reelers and one-reelers will compete for one "oscar." The Academy board has been asked to reconsider.

SAG Turns Down Television Authority

Fifteen hundred members of the Screen Actors Guild this week overwhelmingly rejected plans for a proposed Television Authority, further widening the breach between that organization and the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, which favors the move.

Sag rejected the plan, which would call for a new union whose jurisdiction would cover television and motion pictures made for television, at its annual meeting. The plan is backed by other unions in the AAAA—the American Federation of Radio Artists, the American Guild of Variety Artists, Actors Equity, Chorus Equity and the American Guild of Musical Artists.

Exhibitors Protest Salesman's Firing

Protest over the dismissal of Carl Devizia for 22 years an RKO salesman in New England, was filed with RKO this week by a group of Maine exhibitors led by Andy St. Ledger of Pittsfield and Irving Cohen of Lewiston. Devizia was reportedly one of several discharged by RKO in various sections of the country in an economy move.

"It appears that the lack of thought and unjustified handling of this matter reflects the policy of the company and does not foster a favorable understanding between the exhibitor and the distributor," the protest sent to RKO Chiefs Howard Hughes, Robert Mochrie and Ned Depinet read. RKO had no official comment.

Canadian Exhibitors Elect Officers

Officers elected at the meeting of the Motion Picture Branch of the Toronto Board of Trade, held this week are Chairman Gurtson Allen; Vice-Chairman F. H. Fisher. The organization went on record as supporting the Motion Picture Industry Council of Canada, headed by J. J. Fitzgibbons.

57 Pa. Communities Approve Sunday Movies

Fifty-seven Pennsylvania communities this week voted to legalize Sunday movies in the face of strong opposition on the part of the Federated Legislative Committee, a state-wide organization of churches. Among the central Pennsylvania towns approving movies on the Sabbath are Gettysburg, Littlestown, Swatara Township, Mill Creek, North Lebanon Township, Pottsville, Coaldale, Minersville, Norwegian Township, North Union Township, Seringettsburg township. Some 28 communities voted to maintain present no-Sunday shows.

Furnish Proof, Asks Montague

Convention, which had protested the "Jolson" sales policy and allegations that advanced admissions had been demanded. This week, the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners took the same tack. (See separate story. p. 15).

The TOA distributor-exhibitor relations committee, meeting Tuesday with its executive committee, devoted a whole day to the alleged sales policies of "Jolson Sings Again." Reportedly the exhibitor organization is not too alarmed over the alleged actions of Columbia but is worried lest high-bracket rentals spread to other top-bracket pictures. Unconfirmed reports indicated that the chiefs of the exhibitor organization had feared that Paramount had a similar idea with "Samson and Delilah" and hoped to force a showdown at once.

Hear Gamble

The all-day TOA sessions assumably moved to denounce the Columbia policy on "Jolson Sings Again" after it listened to an impassioned speech by Ted R. Gamble of Gamble Enterprises.

The results of Tuesday's meeting were approved by the executive committee which met Wednesday and instructed Levy to pursue the conversations with Columbia. Indication that legal principles are involved was made plain when it became known that Levy will talk not with Columbia Sales Head Montague, but with Columbia Attorney Frohlich, who makes no bones about the fact that he does not think the protesting exhibitors have a legal leg to stand on.

What Next?

What TOA's eventual action will be is not known. One member declared that it definitely did not include any direct action by the organization to invoke the assistance of the Justice Department, but it was noticed that the TOA statement on the subject practically shouted that Columbia was engaged in illegal practices and that it was assumed the Justice Department would see a copy of the statement. Further, TOA Executive Director Gael Sullivan at a press conference, refused to clarify what was meant by the committee's instruction to Levy "to seek other means" if his talks with Frohlich broke down and would not say whether TOA would submit any evidence it might get of admission-raising demands on the part of Columbia employes to the Justice Department.

Against Rises

"The committee took the further position," a formal release of the organization declared at conclusion of the meeting, "that over and above the legality of fixing minimum prices for admission, that, as a matter of general policy, looking to industry welfare, it should go on record as taking a definite stand against the advancing of admission prices for so-called mass appeal pictures. Admitting that there might be rare classic pictures, with special appeal, for which exhibitors might feel that so-called 'road show' treatment is indicated, the feeling is that the presentation of pictures other than such special productions should be presented at normal admission prices and that the advancing of admissions on mass appeal pictures should be discouraged as a matter of policy.

"The reasons assigned for this position were a re-statement of TOA's position on this subject, namely, that the advancing of admissions on normal good pictures is bad public relations, in that it imposes an additional cost on the theatre-going public that in many instances patrons could not afford to pay. Theatre goers who have been patient with usual product and re-issues should be given, as a natural right, the better-than-good pictures. Also when the public is deprived of the privilege of seeing good pictures because of advanced admission prices it is poor public relations for the industry."

Private—Keep Off

Protocol runs mighty high in diplomatic circles but if you can believe the latest Broadway story, it also is pretty important in motion picture business. The story says that a certain Hollywood studio chief not only has a special place to hang his hat when he visits the home office, but he also has a commodious and strictly personal privy which is kept locked at all times when he is not in New York. During his absences, however, other company officials, apparently on the theory that association produces greatness, pick up the key and make use of the off-limits privy. As would happen, the chief arrived unexpectedly from the coast one recent day to find his personal privy occupied. Pounding on the door, he imperiously dispossessed the subordinate and promptly took over himself.

Get the Goods, Harvey Advises

Board Chairman H. V. (Rotus) Harvey this week called upon all members of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners to gather evidence on what they might consider allegedly illegal demands on the part of Columbia over sales of "Jolson Sings Again."

The move presumably is directed against reports for demands for increased admissions, a report whose accuracy Columbia General Sales Manager A. Montague had previously challenged when Allied protested over the the same charge.

Harvey further declared that he granted Columbia's right to ask what it wanted for a picture, but that if it were asking 60 per cent of the gross, as reported, the exhibitor should refuse.

the U. S. Supreme Court has upheld. The Government has already filed a proposed decree.

The Little 3—United Artists, Universal and Columbia—this week filed their version of a proposed decree. They seek a separate decree which in all respects carries out the trade provisions made mandatory by the U. S. Supreme Court (no addmission fixing, separate picture selling, etc.) but seeking to avoid the rulings which apply to the theatre-holding Big 3.

The practical effect of this separate decree, if granted, would be to allow the Little 3 to acquire theatres in the future without court consent and to point out in anti-trust suits filed against them by exhibitors, that the practices condemned by the statutory court and the high court against the theatre holding defendants did not apply to them. It would not enable them to escape the findings of fact in the suit as handed down by the lower court and the Supreme Court. The Little 3 proposed decree also includes provisions for voluntary arbitration.

RKO blackjacked its interest in the Pelham, Castle Hill and Midway from Skouras by threatening other distributors with the loss of RKO circuit business if they sold the Skouras houses and thus shutting them out of product. As a result, the petition continues, Skouras had to take RKO in as a partner. Skouras was compelled to take an interest in the Proctor, the petition further states, as a result of another product shut-off which forced the Skouras interests to give up the Terminal Theatre in Newark and join RKO as a partner in the Proctor.

As a result of these alleged acts, the petition claims, the plaintiffs were damaged to the extent of $3,000,000, which when tripled under the provisions of the anti-trust laws, amounts to $9,000,000.

Attacks Consent Decree

The petition also attacks that clause in the RKO consent decree, which would give RKO the right to buy out Metropolitan-Skouras, if it wishes, on the assertion that the clause was won by deceiving the Justice Department and that if such acquisition is permitted, it would increase monopoly and defeats the prime purpose of the consent decree.

The suit specifically asks that RKO be enjoined: 1) From disposing of its interests in the contested house to anyone else but the plaintiffs, or from taking steps to dissolve the corporations controlling the houses; 2) That the court declare the RKO holdings in the four theatres to be the property of the plaintiffs; 3) That RKO be directed to transfer its interests to the plaintiffs subject to "such reimbursement . . . in such amounts as may be determined by the court against damages inflicted upon the plaintiffs."

Army to Pay MPEA $1,600,000 for Japan

The Army has contracted with the Motion Picture Export Association to pay $1,600,000 in remittances for frozen film rental earnings in Japan, it was revealed in Washington this week. The agreement covers out-of-pocket expenses and a portion of production costs. Army occupation authorities will continue to select the films to be shown in the occupied area.

Notre Dame Star In Boston Pilgrim Theatre Telecast

Notre Dame proved a star on large-screen theatre television as well as on the grid last Saturday as its game against North Carolina, received by the American Theatre's 190-seat Pilgrim at Boston, brought out a crowd which outstripped those which attended the world series telecasts presented by the same theatre.

Reports from the Hub city indicate that 1600 attended the telecast of the game and that the theatre concession trade did an average business. Reason for football's topping the world series classic, which let the Pilgrim down attendance-wise, was attributed to the fact that Boston is more interested generally in football when played by Notre Dame and to the fact that the Pilgrim, profiting by world series experience, did not raise its admissions. The series was sold at advanced prices, the Notre Dame game at the regular matinee prices of 50, 65 and 85 cents, which included a double feature.

Price Rise Unlikely

A spokesman for the Pilgrim said it was unlikely that the theatre would advance admissions for sports telecasts in the future as this did not seem a desirable policy unless the event should be exclusive. Two other Notre Dame games are to be received by the Pilgrim, those at Iowa and at Southern California.

3 More Petitions On Theatre Video

The Theatre Owners of Oklahoma, the Walter Reade circuit and Washington, D. C., Exhibitor Sidney Lust this week joined the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of West Virginia to petition the Federal Communications Commission to hold hearings on theatre television and to assign special channels for theatre telecasting. Twenty-five petitions are expected.

All but Lust emphasized the point that theatre video "may be the only satisfactory television service" available to small-town and rural areas. Lust skirted this point, apparently because there are four commercial video stations in Washington, but he did claim that theatre television could serve the public by going beyond ordinary video service and offering entertainment beyond the means of commercial broadcasting.

Cut March of Time To 8 Issues a Year

March of Time will cut its release schedule from 13 issues a year to eight during 1950, with the new series to be issued Feb. 3, March 17, April 28, June 9, August 18, September 29, November 10 and December 22, offices of Producer Richard deRochemont announced Monday. The move, thought to be the result of economy and the difficulty in getting playing time for shorts, marks the first change in March of Time issues in 16 years of operation. Originally issued as a 12-issue a year proposition, it was increased to 13 issues shortly after its inception in order to provide one subject every four weeks.

"You Can't Escape"

That the motion picture industry is thoroughly tied up with and by lawyers received corroboration again this week when inside sources reported that the script on "All the King's Men," current at New York's Victoria, was read and reread by lawyers who practically did some rewrite to make sure that there was nothing obviously libelous in the film which deals with the rise of an American fascist politician to dictatorial power. Some observers, it was feared, might draw conclusions that the conditions portrayed actually took place in a state somewhere around New Orleans.

Commemorating

A plaque commemorating the discovery of a baby girl in the Sheridan Square Theatre at Pittsburgh—the event which led to the foundation of what is now the Variety Clubs International—was unveiled last Sunday in the theatre in ceremonies which preceded the annual banquet of Pittsburgh Tent No. 1 at the William Penn Hotel. The banquet was held to honor outgoing Chief Barker George W. Eby and in celebration of the tent's 22nd birthday.

Bull's-Eye

That fast shooting Roy Rogers seems to have hit the bull's-eye in the Chicago area with the Republic exchange reporting that it has so many demands that it is now shipping out prints which go back to 1944. Reason: The increased number of kid shows is putting a strain on the hoof-and-heroers.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Kaye Comedy Bow Aids Variety Club

World premiere of Warners' "The Inspector General," Danny Kaye's first picture for that company, was held Thursday evening at the Imperial Theatre, Toronto, Canada, with the star appearing in person on the same program in a special "Variety Club Theatre Night" for the benefit of the Variety Club's Occupational Training School for Children.

The program included a special stage show starring Kaye, who also made appearances on Thursday at several civic meetings in Toronto. Tickets for the premiere, all proceeds of which were to go to the Variety Club charity, were scaled up to $25.

The premiere climaxed a three-day round of civic ceremonies in honor of Kaye in the Canadian metropolis. Traveling aboard a special Trans-Canada Airlines plane christened "The Danny Kaye-'Inspector General' Special," the comedian arrived at Malton Airport on Tuesday ,where a civic and press reception was accorded him. That night there was a formal reception in the city itself.

On Wednesday, Kaye was guest of honor at the Toronto City Hall for a noontime ceremony preceding a luncheon tendered him by the Toronto Variety Club. He also attended the official opening of the Occupational Training School for Crippled Children in Variety Village, endowed by motion picture people, and was also expected to be present at the Royal Winter Fair, one of the world's leading agricultural exhibits.

The Personal Touch

Manager Lou Fuhrman of the Arcade, Cambridge, Md., gave the personal touch a test, and found it very effective, when he showed "Lost Boundaries." He wrote letters (no carbons, no mimeographing) to 28 clergymen and important individuals in the community stressing the picture's theme. He received a joint endorsement from the clergymen.

SOME SCROLL. Roy Rogers, Republic's "King of the Cowboys," proudly exhibits a 12-foot scroll containing 1,832 signatures of members of his Riders Club at the Alhambra Theatre, Decatur, Ill. The scroll was airmailed to Roy by genial "Chuck" Duncan, theatre manager. The cowboy received over 50,000 birthday cards from his youthful admirers.

'Hopalong' Tie-in Goods Prizes at Kid Matinee

Tieing up of merchants in Perth Amboy, N. J., by City Manager Herbert Gordon for a kid matinee proved so successful that the Walter Reade circuit has decided to start organizing "Hopalong Cassidy Troopers Clubs" in the other cities where it has theatres. Gordon put on a "Hopalong" film for a kiddie morning matinee at the Majestic on Armistice Day and experienced no trouble in getting half a dozen local merchants who handle the Hopalong Cassidy licensed merchandise to contribute such articles as Cassidy wallets, records, western costumes and other novelties as door prizes for the kids, to take a cooperative ad and make window displays of their Hopalong goods with plugs for the kiddie show.

CAREFULLY PLANNED CAMPAIGN FOR 'JOLSON STORY.' Opening of Columbia's "Jolson Sings Again" at the Miami, Lincoln, Miracle and Cameo theatres in Miami, Fla., last week was backed by an extensive and carefully planned exploitation campaign which utilized the talents of every manager and assistant manager of the Wometco chain. Every phase of exploitation was considered and carefully explored by the Wometco publicity staff at a meeting over which Sonny Shepherd, Wometco advertising and publicity chief, and Harry K. McWillimas, Columbia exploitation manager, presided. In the scene above, McWilliams addresses the gathering which included, among others, Ted Beil, Mark Chartrand, Harvey Fleischman, Jack Fink, Mel Haber, Walter Klements, Harry Kronewitz, Clyde Lucas, Phil Masters, Frank Maury, Ed May, Van Meyers, Arthur Price, Ken Rockwell, Frank Rubel, Herb Rubinstein, Tim Tyler and Everett Walshon.

EXPLOITORIALS

If you could walk along Broadway, those large display signs proclaiming the Dec. 21 double opening of Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah" at the Paramount and Rivoli theatres would hit you right between the eyes. Paramount has grabbed some of the stem's best locations, and those signs, bear in mind, will have been on view more than two months by the time the picture has its double premiere on Broadway. Now that's something for you to think about. You may not have the facilities to duplicate this Broadway splurge, but you can emphasize the spectacle of "Samson and Delilah" by posting liberally and in the best locations as far ahead of playdate as possible—much farther ahead than ordinarily. As soon as the picture is contracted for, get busy and reserve the best poster sites in town and along the highways leading into town. Cover 'em with 24s, sixes, threes and ones, according to size. You can't do too much in the way of circus-style showmanship to let your patrons know something really big is in store for them. But do it early to insure capacity audiences.

Theatres playing "Savage Splendor" seem to be harvesting the benefits of RKO Radio's tieup with Dodge automobiles. Down in Memphis, Tenn., bannered Dodge trucks transported youngsters to Loew's State to see the Armand Denis-Louis Cotlow film. The assemblage of "small fry" in front of the theatre overflowed the sidewalks.

Ever stage a political campaign? You can come pretty close to the real thing if you jump aboard the politico-exploitation bandwagon Columbia has started rolling on "All the King's Men" out Los Angeles way. In case you didn't know, Broderick Crawford plays Willie Stark, who becomes governor and then dictator of his State, in the screen version of the Robert Penn Warren novel. What could be more fitting than to inaugurate a "Willie Stark for Governor" campaign? That's what they've been doing out in L.A., with all the electioneering trimmings. Bannered sound trucks tour the city to bring Willie's "message" to the people. Tack cards booming Willie for governor have been put up in all available spots, and thousands of campaign buttons have been passed out to school children. Maybe you can get political campaign workers to aid you in your own "Stark for Governor" campaign on the picture.

In the current New York advance newspaper advertising campaign on MGM's "Intruder in the Dust," which opens Nov. 22 at Brandt's Mayfair, there is prominent mention of the fact that "Clarence Brown went to Oxford, Miss., and did an authentic job on William Faulkner's great American novel." No matter where your theatre is located, moviegoers seem to take more than just a passing interest in the fact that a picture has been made on some actual location site. Oxford may be thousands of miles away from them, but the very idea that a movie company sent a production unit there (or to some other location site, for that matter), gives them the feeling of becoming a part of the glamor of Hollywood moviemaking. Thus the suggestion that you play up that angle when you show "Intruder in the Dust."

INCENTIVES SPUR CELEBRATION. More than 100 Florida theatres actively participated in a state-wide celebration of the 35th Anniversary of Florida State Theatres with localized results in concentrated interest surrounding motion pictures and theatre-going. The Anniversary campaign, carried on during a period of six weeks, paid honor to General Manager Jesse L. Clark. To make the event individually interesting and competitive among the district managers, advertising men and assistant managers, there were enthusiasm-arousing awards, including a new Chevrolet, television set, Pan-American Carribbean tour for two, tickets and hotel accommodations in Miami for the New Year's Orange Bowl game, etc. The sky was the limit as far as invention of activities for special shows and local publicity were concerned, and the Florida State showmen turned on the steam to produce a tremendous amount of publicity—the kind that sold tickets. In photos at left, reading from top down, high school students hold pep rally on stage; a fashion show drew crowds to the Howell Theatre, Palatka; a burlesque "beauty" contest drew entries of prominent New Smyrna Beach citizens, here seen with Mayor Huffaker, who awarded the crown. Right, top, Jesse Clark, Wanda Hendrix—who visited her home town of Jacksonville—and Leon Netter, vice-president of Florida State Theatres. Lower right, the GM registers justifiable pride in the results as he surveys material sent in by the various theatres, as Advertising and Publicity Director Pettengill, and Publicity Staffer Helen Tracy, look on.

'Big Wheel' Spins Goodwill Campaign

A wave of goodwill for United Artists' "The Big Wheel" is being rolled up through the long and hard punching of Jack Dempsey who, with Sam Stiefel and Harry Popkin, produced the picture. The activity is being seconded by UA exploitation men in the field. Following its world premiere in Indianapolis on Nov. 10, the picture was due for additional openings in Cincinnati, Detroit, Dayton, Akron, Toledo and Cleveland.

Capitalizing on the popularity of the former heavyweight king, UA field men lined up press and radio coverage for Dempsey in every town, and followed through with major tieups.

Giant Parade

In Detroit, the UA exploitation man arranged with Oldsmobile for a giant parade of cars with banners to greet Dempsey. Also highly successful was a theatre contest in which the public was invited to elect "Big Wheels" from every field of endeavor.

In Dayton, the Agonis club feted Dempsey at a special luncheon which was given full advance and post-event newspaper and radio coverage. Here, too, Oldsmobile provided an attention-getting motorcade which toured the main thoroughfare with banner greetings to Dempsey and "The Big Wheel."

In Akron, the UA exploitation man lined up the Junior Chamber of Commerce to host Dempsey. Another stunt with a guaranteed pay-off had Dempsey present "Big Wheel" emblems to "Big Wheel" Akron Beacon-Journal News carriers.

In Cincinnati, the UA exploitation representative set up the Cincinnati Post for a Police Athletic League-Big Wheel promotion, climaxed by Dempsey's appearance. The Post also obtained approval from the Scripps-Howard home office to incorporate a special comic-strip drawing and dialogue mentioning Dempsey in Philadelphia, watching the main character in the strip training for a fight.

'Time, Money, Well Spent'

"If you see 'Lost Boundaries' this week at the Pontiac Theatre, it will be time and money well spent. This is a voluntary, unsolicited plug by your pastor," said the Rev. Norman M. Moss, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Saranac Lake, N. Y., in his Sunday program. A nice bit of publicity for the picture.

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

"It's a Movie 'Must'!" headlines many of the ads in MGM's press book on "Intruder in the Dust." Attention is also directed to the "flaming book" (by William Faulkner) from which the picture was adapted, and to "the story of a Negro accused of murder in the Deep South." Also highlighted in many of the layouts is the line, "It's sensational!" The figure of man with a gun silhouetted against the sky dominates the posters, with the title, in most cases, emerging in fiery letters.

The "kiss" idea is extensively utilized in the press book exploitation suggestions for United Artists' "A Kiss for Corliss." There's a whole page of ideas on how to "sell it with a 'kiss'." General theme of the ads is that "Corliss could do no wrong . . . but, brother, how she tried!" Shirley Temple and David Niven are featured in the layouts.

With the title a natural on which to peg such promotion, "doll" and "music" selling suggestions are plentiful in the exploitation pages of the press book on 20th-Fox's "Oh, You Beautiful Doll." And that line, "Oh, What a Great Big Doll of a Musical" is prominent in the ad layouts, most of which show June Haver (or both Haver and Mark Stevens) in dancing poses. There's a head of S. Z. Sakall in many of the ads. A page is devoted to a tieup with Muzak, which services music to many accounts throughout the U. S.

11 Cities to Follow N. Y. 'Deadline' Contest Idea

Thirteen more Hearst newspapers in 11 cities will follow the novel "reporter contest" used by the New York Journal American as a promotion stunt in connection with Paramount for "Chicago Deadline" in which bonuses were offered readers who supplied that newspaper with new tips and photos for publication. The stunt in New York brought so many news tips that the promotion is being extended to other cities in which Hearst has newspapers. In New York a typewriter a day was awarded tipsters for seven days with an automobile a grand prize for the week's top entry.

Newspapers and cities which will aid in promoting "Chicago Deadline" with the "reporter contest" are: the San Francisco Examiner, San Francisco Call-Bulletin, Albany Times-Union, Boston Record-American, Detroit Times, San Antonio Light, Baltimore News Post, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Los Angeles Examiner, Los Angeles Herald-Express, Oakland Post Enquirer, Seattle Post Intelligencer, and Milwaukee Sentinel.

Mitchell Gum Stunt Scores in Massilon

It was a swell stunt, and other showmen should take it up to advertise that next comedy or suspense picture. So read on:

When "Abbott and Costello Meet the Killer" played at the Weslin Theatre, Massilon, Ohio, Manager Jack Mitchell promoted 2,000 sticks of Beech-Nut chewing gum which he distributed the day before playdate.

To each stick of gum was attached a slip of paper with this copy: "Don't chew your nails when you see 'Abbott & Costello Meet the Killer" at the Weslin Sunday—chew Beech-Nut."

He makes the most of moonlit moments . . .

IT'S mighty important to star . . . director . . . movie-goer . . . to have this moonlit moment come alive upon the screen.

And when it does—in all its subtlety of mood in light and shadow—the credit's due in no small measure to the important contribution of the laboratory control engineer.

For his knowledge of photochemistry, his "eye" for photographic quality . . . his vigilant control of printing density and contrast . . . do much to make moonlight footage look like moonlight, and help to bring out the best in every frame of film.

Quality of film contributes, too; and this important assistance the laboratory control engineer is sure of when he works with the famous Eastman family of motion-picture films.

'Fallen Idol' Premiere Aids Prescott House

Distinguished royalty, society, political and theatrical notables attended the gala New York premiere of Selznick Releasing Organization's "The Fallen Idol" at the Sutton Theatre last Monday evening for the benefit of the Prescott Neighborhood House.

The premiere committee used the motif, "A Night in a London Theatre," and all the atmosphere of a typical evening at a British theatre was faithfully reproduced. Prominent socialites formed a "queue-line" outside the theatre before the performance while others acted as "buskers" (entertainers) on the sidewalk. Debutantes portrayed tea girls and usherettes and there were the usual old flower girls selling violets and newsboys hawking editions of the London papers especially flown here for the occasion. More than $25,000 worth of banners, coats-of-arms and other material were used to re-decorate the theatre for the eventful night. Arthur Treacher, popular stage and screen comedian, added a humorous note by posing as a London "bobby," and maintaining "law and order."

The picture, which Carol Reed produced and directed, began its regular engagement at the Sutton on Tuesday.

Ribbon Clue to Film's Title

Small yellow ribbons in the hair of the cashiers, usherettes and candy girls at the Community Theatre in Morristown, N. J., was the only clue given to patrons, starting three weeks in advance of playdate, to obtain free passes by guessing the title of the coming feature, "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon." A 40x60 lobby card announced that the women employes were wearing a clue to the title with offer of passes to those guessing it. The girls wore the ribbons until advance paper on the picture was posted. Those who guessed the title and those who didn't aroused much public curiosity and word-of-mouth publicity. Stunt was the idea of Reade Theatres' Morristown City Manager Ralph Lanterman.

'Columbus' Area Premiere Notes From Syracuse, D. C., and Tampa

One of J. Arthur Rank's biggest bids for the American market—an extravagant Technicolor recounting of the discovery of this land, with American performers in the starring roles—hit the screens in area premieres on Columbus Day. The salesmanship used in launching this Universal - International release, "Christopher Columbus," worked against a background of quite different situations, yet in none could the film fail to have special significance.

Take Washington, for example. That city is in the District of Columbia, named for the great explorer and now the governmental seat of his "New World." In connection with the film's engagement at RKO Keith's there Universal Publicist David Polland tied in with a most prestigious organization, the Pan American Union. The film was shown—to a formal dress gathering including Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks of Great Britain and high representatives of all the American republics—at the Union's annual celebration. As one local newspaper observed, "Never in the fanciful history of motion pictures was there a more appropriate setting for the premiere of a film."

Or take Tampa, Fla., which has a large Latin section called Ybor City, a sort of symbol of the Americas and of their discovery. Manager Elmer Hecht of the Park there focused part of his campaign around Ybor City in ways to catch both its own population and that of the rest of Tampa. He tied-up the largest Spanish-language newspaper for seven advance daily picture stories, climaxed by a three-column page one cut on opening day. Fifteen Ybor City merchants were persuaded to tie in with the Tampa Daily Times for publicity and a full-page ad on special sales celebrating Columbus Day and the Columbus movie. Nor did Hecht forget Christopher's place in the schools. He arranged screenings for all the teachers and then instituted morning matinees for which children might be excused from school. The result, he says, was literally thousands of paid admissions, wonderful public relations, and a plan he thinks could be generally adopted throughout the country.

Letter Sent to Schools

Is Syracuse, N. Y., less touched than those other cities? Unlike them it is a northern site and central in the nation's most polyglot state. This beginning of the American legend, Dick Feldman of Schine's Paramount found, was welcome material for the Polish News and the Jewish Chronicle as well as the regular dailies, and the film, of course, was strongly plugged by the Knights of Columbus and the Daughters of Columbus. A letter commending it, too, was sent to the schools by the Children's Council for Better Pictures.

Thus were welcomes prepared for "Columbus" in three picture ports. Models enough they are, but, we suspect, only starting points for many an explorer showman.

'BATTLEGROUND' TAKES OVER BROADWAY. At the same location where "The Big Parade" of World War I vintage was a sensational success 25 years ago, MGM's "Battleground" made its bow on Nov. 10 in one of the most glittering premieres Broadway has seen in a long time. The giant theatrical sign, which rises 96 feet above the Astor Theatre marquee, may be seen at the upper left, while at the lower left is a view of the front with its military face-lifting and premiere-night crowds filling the street in the brilliantly-lighted vicinity. Photo at top right shows recruiting poster and display at the U. S. Army Times Square recruiting station. The posters, incidentally, were spotted throughout the metropolitan area. Getting together for a moment of levity (bottom right) are (l-r) MGM Executives Si Seadler, advertising manager; Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president and treasurer, and Dore Schary, vice-president in charge of production, and producer of "Battleground."

Lobby 'Murder Case' For 'Scene of Crime'

For "The Scene of the Crime" at the Massena, Massena, N. Y., Manager Les Coulter followed up the lead of Look magazine's "Photo-crime" by borrowing furniture and a mannequin from local dealers: The mannequin was covered, all but feet and head, with a sheet. Patrons were invited to solve the murder from the different clues appearing about the "corpse" in the lobby. Only three identified the murderer, but the stunt got valuable publicity for the film.

National Ad Barrage for 'Prince of Foxes'

Magazine Campaign to Reach 300 Million for Christmas Holiday Release

Precise timing so as to reach the greatest number of people throughout the nation in one fell swoop is the chief factor in 20th Century-Fox's concentrated national advertising campaign on "The Prince of Foxes," which the company announced more than a month ago (STR, Oct. 1, p. 17).

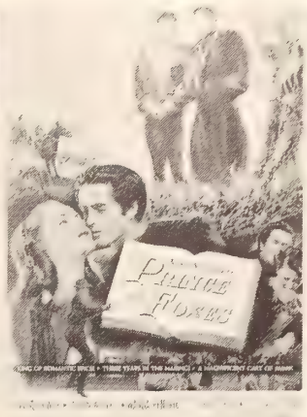
Starting this week and running through Dec. 18, a total of 24 first-line publications will carry the advertising, marking one of the largest national campaigns ever put on by a motion picture company. Some 300 million readers are expected to be reached, with virtually every family in the United States seeing a "Prince of Foxes" advertisement at least four times during the period of the campaign.

Penetrating

Following the technique that has proved successful in the sale of automobiles, home appliances, dentifrices, razor blades, cereals, etc., the company is laying down the national advertising barrage on a scale so widespread and penetrating that theatres playing the picture need take only their usual advertising space to announce that they will play the picture.

Besides the time element, the advertisements have been designed to appeal to the readership of the magazines in which they will appear. Thus those ads in American Weekly and the fan magazines, for example, will have the romantic fiction appeal, while spectacle and intrigue will highlight the Cosmopolitan display. Similarly, the feminine romantic appeal will be prominent in the Good Housekeeping ad, while comic strip narration with melodramatic overtones will attract readers of Puck Comic Weekly, Sunday newspaper supplement. Other publications on the campaign list include Look, Life, Woman's Home Companion, House Beautiful, Redbook, Collier's, Harper's Bazaar, Parade and This Week.

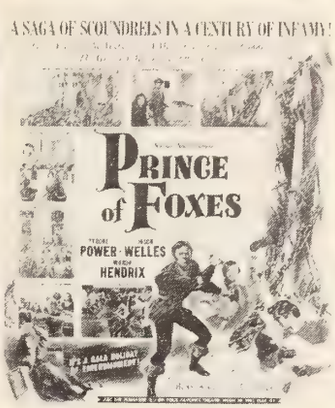
Another feature of the national ads is that they will sell "Prince of Foxes" as great family entertainment during the holidays. Release of the picture is scheduled for Christmas at a time when the magazines will be in homes and being read.



Twentieth-Fox is making available 500 prints of the picture for the national Christmas release date, thus enabling exhibitors to play the film at the peak of the campaign's effect and cash in on the pre-selling job.

Circulation Figures

To tell the exhibitor of this national advertising campaign, 20th-Fox will break down the circulation figures for every town of 2,500 and over throughout the country, and present this information through large-scale ads in the industry trade press. Exhibitors will then know exactly the circulation of national magazines in their own cities so as to hit the largest audiences when they lay out their own campaigns, as well as to tie-in locally with the magazine and newsstand distributors.



In this connection, publishers are notifying their dealers to assist the local engagement of the picture in every way possible. Display material and other exploitation items will be used extensively for mutual tieins between the issue carrying the advertising and the film's opening.

Des Moines 'Kiss' Bow Honors Miller

Colin Miller's "A Kiss for Corliss," United Artists release, had its world premiere Wednesday in Des Moines, with the town turning out to honor the local boy who made good.

Although Producer Miller is a native of Oak Park, Ill., he made Des Moines his adoptive town while working there for years as an executive of the Des Moines Register and Tribune Syndicate. He chose Des Moines for the premiere of his first independent film produced under the banner of Milbak Productions because of his affection for the town and in keeping with the locale of the film, which is set in a "typical midwestern community."

Following the premiere, "A Kiss for Corliss" was slated to open in other midwestern cities nearby, all in Iowa. These include Iowa City, Clinton, Ft. Dodge, Mason City, Ames, Newton, Oskaloosa, Ottumwa, Waterloo, Sioux City, Cedar Rapids and Davenport. Additionally, Tri-States and Central States theatres have booked the film in Fairbury, Falls City, Grand Island, Hastings and Omaha, all in Nebraska, and in Moline and Rock Island, Ill.

Miller and F. Hugh Herbert, playwright, made personal appearances in the territory to spark the openings. Both appeared at Davenport, Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo and Des Moines for radio and newspaper interviews, and also appeared before high school and college groups. Over 100 radio stations and 50 newspapers were used in an Iowa-Nebraska advertising campaign.

The Des Moines Theatre premiere campaign included the distribution of 5,000 bags of candy kisses on downtown streets, special window displays (Younkers department store featured a series of windows), and contests conducted over two local radio stations and another by a newspaper.

. . . and Passes Too

Couples caught kissing after midnight in Market Square at Harrisburg, Pa., during the first three days of the run on "That Midnight Kiss" at Loew's Regent, were given free passes to the film by Manager Sam Gilman. Gilman had no trouble finding winners.

6-Sheeted Sidewalk

Fred Lentz of the Athena in Athens, O., plastered six-sheets of "Mighty Joe Young" on the sidewalk in front of the theatre where passersby would be sure to see them.

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

Get Aboard That Christmas Bandwagon

I should have gotten around to this particular chore a couple of weeks ago but I was sashaying around listening to some of the industry "bigs" air their views on such all-important items as competitive bidding, television, public relations, etc. and just didn't hear the snortin' of Santa's reindeers.

Exactly three weeks from the day you read this column you'll be facing the annual 7-day plague to theatre profit that immediately precedes St. Nick's midnight chimney chore. What have you done and what are you going to do to immunize your operation or at least reduce to the lowest possible minimum the effects of the anti-show fever always prevalent during this period?

The prevailing economic winds and all other indicators on the business front tend to warn that '49's prelude to Christmas will be somewhat tougher on ticket sales than any of its predecessors for the past 10 years. Just take a gander at your local newspaper and give a looksee to the bargains the stores are offering. There's been nothing like it since 1939, and if you don't think housewives and husbands are planning on spending savings and mortgaging future earnings to satisfy cravings for domestic needs and whimsical fancies that have been stifled by the "high cost" and "shortage" conditions of previous years, there's something seriously wrong with your mental machinery. Things that just couldn't be had or were out of dollar reach of the average family a year ago are now being "presented" by sales forces everywhere at prices well within reach of Mr. and Mrs. Wage Earner. And, the recent lifting of credit restrictions make almost every desire subject to fulfillment on the little-cash, long-debt basis that was totally denied or seriously restricted during years past. A Wall St. report shows installment buying to be 25 per cent above '48 and 400 per cent above 1946 and still going up.

That such conditions pose a box-office threat of unusual severity—not only during the pre-Christmas week, when the buying splurge is at its peak, but for many weeks and months thereafter—is as plainly menacing to future contentment as a strange shade of lipstick on a married man's shirt front.

Ingenious Thinking, Cooperative Effort Vitally Essential

That's the picture we of the entertainment field will have to look at for some time to come, and no matter which way you turn or twist it, only one conclusion presents itself; ingenious thinking of the kind that gets you, your theatre and its attractions a favored place on every band wagon passing in public review, every atom of cooperative effort you can manage and an abundance of hard work, is vitally essential to success.

So-o-o, with the first severe business blight only 21 days off, let's see how the formula can be applied to assuage our threatened box-office pains. Here are a few ideas for getting aboard the biggest and fanciest bandwagon that passes in annual public review: the Christmas Shopping Spree.

Your earliest cogitations will result in the obvious conclusion that matinees are certain to be sparsely attended and that empty chairs will be plentiful. Why not use those chairs to build your public relations structure and, at the same time, get a running array of publicity that will help get the tired shoppers out of their easy chairs to enjoy the restful atmosphere of your theatre and its attractions during the evening hours? Determine immediately how many institutions for the indigent and other public charges exist in your community. Canvass the newspapers and radio stations to sponsor theatre parties for these groups, dividing the effort as equally as possible. Then get your show hours straight and approach the automobile dealers for free transportation to carry the orphans, the aged and afflicted to and from your theatre. Day-to-day stories, radio programs, etc. will result and, if you see that the job is done thoroughly your matinee generosity will be rewarded with evening attendance by those who read and hear about your programs. Even if the box-office reward fails to strike profit oil, your heart will be happier and your community standing more imposing.

Along this same line is the matter of offering your theatre and its facilities to any and all religious groups for morning services. If a religious attraction can be obtained and its cost absorbed through congregational or individual collection channels, so much the better. But even

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Pointers on Projection and Sound

Sound volume needs exceptionally sharp watching at times when the size of the audience is rapidly changing; partly because of the traffic noise, and partly because people absorb more sound than the chairs they sit in. Projectionists should watch changing audience conditions if they can; management should be alert at such times to signal the projection room to change volume as often as necessary.

Managers can help their projectionists put on a better show by authorizing proper painting and illumination of the projection room walls and ceiling. The accuracy with which the projectionist can observe and control the quality of his picture depends on the "conditioning" of his eyes by his surroundings. Overbright walls and ceiling, or glaring exposed lights, make good results difficult—if not impossible.

Projectionists can keep slight background noise out of their sound by keeping switch and volume control contacts clean, and contact tension tight. When this becomes impossible and replacements are needed, managers can help keep the sound "clean" by authorizing such replacements without hesitation.

If it becomes necessary to inspect the film compartment of the soundhead while film is running, it is better to use a flashlight than a trouble-lamp. The invisible a.c. flicker of the latter may be picked up by the photocell and add a temporary burst of hum to the sound.

Electric power companies will lend the theatre a recording voltmeter in cases where harmful variation in line voltage is suspected. A continuous, automatic record is thus made. From it, the theatre can readily determine whether protection of its equipment requires installation of a voltage regulator.

Projector manufacturers report cases of rusting traced to water in the projector oil. Moisture gets in by condensing on the oil. Keeping the lubricant out of contact with the atmosphere as much as possible minimizes the chance of this form of trouble.

In cases of hum in the sound, or pickup of radio or television or sign-flasher interference, temporary relief can sometimes be achieved by disconnecting sound system grounds. Permanent remedy will usually require the ministrations of the service inspector.

Show Business

COAST TO COAST: Kid shows continue to pay dividends in goodwill even if they don't always pay in cash profits to Irving Hillman, manager of the Empress at Danbury, Conn., the latest showman to come up with a testimonial for them. His Saturday matinees for children, sponsored by the Danbury Parent-Teacher Council, have clicked so well that he plans to keep them going indefinitely. This view is probably shared by Ira L. Schiffman of National and Rialto in uptown Harrisburg, Pa., who is getting an excellent play from his children's shows at both houses. . . . And over at Paxtang, Pa., Dr. Samuel Goldstein invited the children of the St. Chaterline Laborne's church as guests of his Paxtang for a Halloween show with the Parent-Teachers Association co-sponsoring and awarding prizes for outstanding costumes.

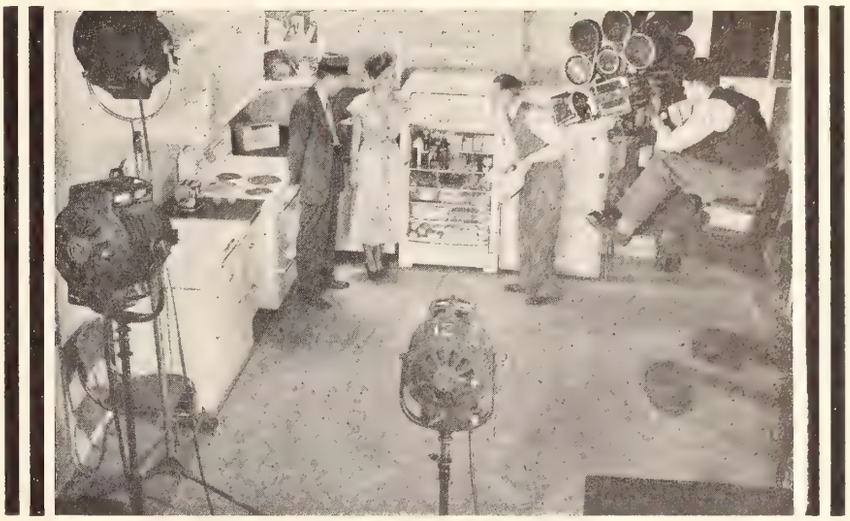
without film entertainment, such a gesture, properly publicized, is certain to reflect to the good of yourself and your theatre.



Of course, there's the matter of using care in the selection of your attractions. If you've been so short-sighted you failed to attend to this important matter until now, there's little that can be done about it. If at all possible you should book only light entertainment during this week when everybody has the "Peace On Earth Good Will Toward Man" spirit. Don't let your selfish desire for revenge on the distributor who is demanding high terms for a potential low-grosser overcome your good judgment. You can do a lot of harm to your theatre by giving the customer the worst of it during this period. Try to get "Christmassy" cartoons, song reels and features with moral content in keeping with the seasonal spirit.

Don't overlook the atmosphere of your front, lobby, interior and screen. Be sure that you do a good job of decorating and that care is used to insure its effectiveness as an attention-compeller to all who get within vision of the establishment. Tinsel, cotton, reproductions of Santa, life-size and bigger, and other seasonal decorative matter is inexpensive. But, for Santa's sake, don't overlook the need of care in planning their placement, lighting, etc.

Start The Season Early

Instruct the service staff to start passing out "Merry Christmas" greetings early. Let the customers hear it from the cashier, the doorman, the usher—it's a greeting that becomes more cherished with repetition, so you can't overdo it. You can afford to spend a little more time than usual in the lobby yourself and personally extend seasonal cheer to the patrons.

As for ideas that hold promise of quickening the clatter of the ticket machine while the bandwagon of Christmas is parading, why not lend your effort to help those merchants who are trying so hard to move merchandise from their shelves? Before this gets into print announcements will be rampant of two national merchandising stunts that can be revamped to the benefit of theatre box-offices everywhere. The Birds Eye Division of General Foods and Philco Corp. have announced a "Dollar a Label" promotion with Philco dealers accepting 20 Birds Eye Frozen Food labels as $20 down payment on home freezers. Westinghouse Electric has agreed to take two Lever Bros. box tops (Rinso, Lux, etc.) as a $2 payment on any Westinghouse Electric appliance.

Apply the Idea Locally

Why not get with some local merchant and, in return for lobby and/or screen advertising, arrange for the acceptance of ticket stubs, properly signed by you, for some particular attraction playing during the period as part payment on certain items of merchandise he is anxious to move? You'll be missing the biggest end of the deal if you don't insist on prominence being given in his ads about the picture that features the cooperative effort. Don't quit when you have one merchant. Go on and get others so that every attraction has the support of cooperative advertising and every ticket a dollar value in the purchase of stoves, washing machines, etc.

You can add materially to receipts by offering the merchant an opportunity to preview his effort from your stage on some one night preceding the special sales promotion. Let him use the stage to demonstrate the worth of the item, with his best salesman doing the talking. But, exact a sale of tickets in advance. This last can be in the form of special matinee prices, with the merchant inviting preferred prospects as his guests; tied up to the numbers of his sales slips of the preceding or current week or any of numerous other ways. Just do a smart job of planning so that your theatre stands to gain from every possible angle of the tieup before you even go near the merchant and you'll find many extra dollars in the till when the co-op effort goes into effect. Remember, this year the merchants are all on the search for customers and making some pretty attractive proposals to get business. The above comment about General Foods, Philco, Lever Bros. and Westinghouse is proof of how avidly even the better known brand names are chasing the customer dollar this year.

The butcher who wants to sell turkeys can unquestionably be induced to arrange an attractive display at your theatre—and take care of it daily—in return for screen or accompanying card mention to the effect that the stub of a ticket to your theatre will be accepted at its full value on the purchase of birds weighing above a certain specified poundage. The same goes for the grocer who is anxious to accelerate the sale of complete Christmas dinner baskets, etc. In each event you must insist on proper and adequate mention in all newspaper, radio, handbill, etc. advertising without cost to your theatre. In the event of no newspaper advertising insist on handbill circulation with your theatre and its attractions given prominence.

Put Your Imagination to Work

The ticket-selling potential of the idea is as broad and penetrating as your imagination and ability to express the confidence you hold in your theatre. Auto accessories, furniture, hardware, department stores, clothing merchants, and just about everybody except the undertaker is a prospect this year. It all depends on how well you plan and how hard you work.

The oft-repeated admonition about canvassing the heads of industries and other employers of large numbers of workers for the purpose of arranging theatre parties for their employe family is still excellent. It will serve to ease their burden of what to do to improve their labor relations and swell the take at your box-office. If you happen to be located where there is a concentration of industry, be sure you control traffic to fit your seating capacity.

Action Is Called For

Any and all of the above can be accomplished in the time remaining between now and the week before Christmas by theatremen who are willing to plan carefully and work hard and intelligently. They—or ramifications of them—are vitally needed if theatres are to avoid the marking of large red-ink figures on the weekly statement. A haphazard job and half-way effort won't do the job this year. The competition for the spare coin of Mr. and Mrs. Public is entirely too strong to respond to anything other than all-out pursuit. Merchants will be going full blast with advertising to steam up the Christmas bandwagon. Use your brains instead of your money and get aboard. You can't afford to let the Christmas parade pass you up. Taking part—a big important part—insures you a head start in the mad scramble for a share of the spendable dollar and a place on the family budget of 1950.

There's a rugged battle for those dimes, quarters and halves in the immediate offing. Better lay aside your dancing slippers, golf clubs and kid gloves and don your most serviceable and dependable "hustle" paraphernalia.

Reade Theatres in New Talent Quests

Capitalizing on the success of "Mr. Song" contests last season, three Reade Theatres in New Jersey have launched new talent quests, with weekly eliminations and grand prizes worth more than $1,000 in each location.

While last year's quests were limited to male vocalists, the new contests, which in most cases will last 10 or more weeks, are open to all types of entertainers, male and female. In every instance all entries will be photographed and their pictures displayed in the lobbies, along with the merchandise contributed by local stores which will be part of the grand prizes.

In Plainfield, City Manager Harold Martz has promoted $1,500 in prizes for a "Star of 1950" talent hunt, which is being held every Monday night in conjunction with professional vaudeville at the Oxford Theatres. In Long Branch, City Manager John Balmer has promoted $1,300 in prizes for a "Stars of Tomorrow" contest held every Wednesday night between his professional vaudeville shows.

In Asbury Park, City Manager Guy Hevia has tied in with local AM and FM radio station WCAP, which organized a "Pick a Star" contest, so that eliminations will be held on the stage of his St. James Theatre every Tuesday night, with finals during Christmas week. Here as in the other cities, paid vaudeville engagements and expense-paid trips to New York City for dinner and shows, will be among the final awards.

At the Traco in Toms River, N. J., I. M. Hirshblond has set up a 5-week Talent Quest for Sunday nights, utilizing a professional entertainer as master of ceremonies. Refrigerators, home furnishings, television sets and jewelry will be in the big jackpot. This is the most extensive series of talent contests ever attempted in the off-season in this resort community, and represents the greatest merchant cooperation effort in many years.

Buffalo Theatre Holds Weekly Amateur Shows

John Shelvet, manager of the Amherst Theatre, Buffalo, has tied-in with the Old Gold amateur show by offering the talent of western New York State to compete in a series of amateur contests on the stage of the Dipson community theatre every Thursday night for the next several weeks. The winner of the series will get an all-expense-paid trip to New York to appear on the Ted Mack Amateur Show telecast nationally every Tuesday evening.—BUF.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

The Dalton Gang

Lippert Prod'ns. Western 58 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Exciting outdoor action film that will satisfy the most avid of horse-opera adherents.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good offering for the action houses; in fact, for any house that has a western following.

Cast: Don Barry, Robert Lowery, James Millican, Betty Adams, Byron Foulger, J. Farrell MacDonald, Greg McClure, George Lewis, Marshall Reed, Ray Bennett, Lee Roberts, Cliff Taylor, Cactus Mack. Credits: Directed by Ford Beebe. Screenplay by Ford Beebe. Photography, Ernest Miller. Produced by Ron Ormond.

Plot: The Dalton brothers, under assumed names because of the big reward offered for their capture, get mixed up with a killing. Don Barry, as the U. S. marshal sent to find the culprit, uncovers their guilt. They ambush him, with intent to kill, but the Indians come to his rescue.

Comment: There's lots of action in this tale of the final adventures of the notorious Dalton Gang: enough excitement, suspense, chases and gunplay, plus a band of Indians, to more than satisfy the western followers and all action fans. Performances are first-rate, with Don Barry doing a standout job as the U. S. marshal, very capable with his fists, his gun and his hard-riding. Betty Adams looks attractive in the only feminine role in the cast and J. Farrell MacDonald gives a convincing performance as a judge. Picture moves fast under Ford Beebe's direction. With these requisite elements, "The Dalton Gang" should prove quite satisfactory in any situation. Ron Ormond produced.

Holiday Affair

RKO Radio Comedy-Drama 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An appealing human interest story, expertly handled in all departments. Certain to delightfully and thoroughly entertain everyone.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The Robert Mitchum name and the names of the other principals, wherever known, should help attract crowds. General excellence of the picture will then bring word-of-mouth that should push it into the money-making class.

Cast: Robert Mitchum, Janet Leigh, Wendell Corey, Griff Barnett, Esther Dale, Henry O'Neill, Henry Morgan, Larry J. Blake, Helen Brown and Gordon Gebert. Credits: Produced and directed by Don Hartman. Screenplay by Isobel Lennart. Based on the story, "Christmas Gift," by John D. Weaver. Photography, Milton Krasner.

Plot: A young widow, who has a young seven-year old son, meets a stranger while doing some comparison shopping at a local department store. Circumstances bring them together several times and they find themselves mutually attracted. In the meantime, she has consented to marry a young lawyer who has been courting her for several years, but she discovers she doesn't love him and goes west with her son to be married to the other man.

Comment: Here is an excellent example of how a simple story can become engaging screenfare, if correctly handled in all departments. Starting with a well-contrived screenplay, in which all the characters are human, down-to-earth people, and cast with players whose performances are natural and interesting, "Holiday Affair" has been made into an amusing romantic comedy that is certain to delightfully and thoroughly entertain everyone. Robert Mitchum, Janet Leigh and Wendell Corey all give finely-etched delineations, appearing human and arousing a tremendous amount of sympathy for them in their individual situations. But in spite of these excellent players, the most outstanding member of the cast is little Gordon Gebert, who practically steals the picture. As little "Timmy," this child, who makes his screen debut here, acts like a veteran player and seems to take direction like an old trouper. There is little doubt but that this should be the beginning of a very busy film career for him. Producer-Director Don Hartman deserves credit for the understanding way in which he handled his players and the effectiveness of the various situations. It is through his efforts that this simple story has become such an entertaining film. Name draw, though strong, isn't sufficient to bring in justifiable returns, but the general excellence of the picture will create word-of-mouth that should push it into the money-making class.

The Merchant of Slaves

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

Lux Film Melodrama 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A dashing shiek and a proud beauty are the main supports to the exotic theme.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Exploitable second feature for grinds and foreign houses.

Cast: Enzo Fiermonte, Annette Bach, Dino Di Luca, Elena Zareschi, Mara Ciukleva, Augusto Di Giovanni. Credits: Producer, Colosseum Film. S. A. Director, Duilio Coletti. Story, Nicola Manzari and Cesare Vico Ludovici. Photography, Aldo Tonti.

Plot: Ali, leader of an Arab tribe which raids Sicily for women to sell on the slave market, gets the haughtiest maiden on the island with child and then falls in love with her. Her anger turns to love, she frees him from a Sicilian prison, and she and the baby live in disgrace. Ali returns, fends off attack, and sails away with his family.

Comment: This should be an exploitable second feature for grinds and foreign houses, for while its spectacle is not mighty, it does have in support of its exotic theme a thoroughly dashing shiek (he at length learns that he is Sicilian by birth—and apparently in heart), played by Enzo Fiermonte, and, in Annette Bach, a convincingly proud and beautiful heroine.

Satan's Cradle

United Artists Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Those two quite different western heroes, the Cisco Kid and Pancho, with action aplenty this time.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Fits happily into the general western category.

Cast: Duncan Renaldo, Leo Carillo, Ann Savage, Douglas Fowley, Byron Foulger, Claire Carleton, Buck Bailey, George De Normand, Wes Hudman. Credits: Producer, Philip N. Krasne. Director, Ford Beebe. Associate Producer, Duncan Renaldo. Based on the Cisco Kid character created by O. Henry. Original screenplay, Jack Benton. Music, Albert Glasser. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh.

Plot: Lil, a woman who sets herself up as the widow of the town's founder and owner, uses her position to help a gang run Silver City crookedly. Cisco and Pancho, after rough encounters with the gang and romantic duelling with Lil, discover that the town founder's death was not accidental and that Lil was never his wife anyway. She finally gives up and the gang is vanquished.

Comment: STR reviewers have reported a too leisurely pace and a lack of action—for westerns—in the last two entries in this series. Perhaps the installation of Ford Beebe as director has made the difference, for the pace here, while not too rapid, is satisfactory and action there is aplenty. There's also plot interest, a suspenseful stalking sequence at the climax, and a capable supporting cast, but of course the distinguishing mark of the photoplay is the presence of those two quite different western heroes, O. Henry's brainchildren, the Cisco Kid and Pancho. Dashing, utterly lighthearted and sometimes quite funny they are: Duncan Renaldo as the suave Kid and Leo Carillo as his stocky sidekick. "Satan's Cradle" fits happily into the general western category.

Welch Aims at Family Trade for Big Grosses

"The family trade is the source of business that builds the big grosses," says Robert Welch, Paramount's dynamic young producer of highly successful comedies and musicals.

Welch, who in the past three years has produced the Bob Hope pictures, "Paleface," "Sorrowful Jones" and "Fancy Pants," and Bing Crosby's "Top O' the Morning," pointed to his impressive array of successes to prove his contention.

Robert Welch

"There are certain basic elements that I believe will be found in every successful picture," he continued. "A first requirement is universality of appeal. Assurance that this element will be in the picture begins with the title. The title should find a response in the emotional pattern common to all humanity, or it should connote a theme that will strike a memory chord. This relation to the emotional or the memory pattern should be as direct as possible. I believe we caught this quality in the Hope pictures. 'Paleface' and the soon-to-be-released 'Fancy Pants,' especially, have an immediate association with memory patterns.

"Next, atmosphere can provide a strong audience interest. I like to work with picturesque or unusual settings. The rugged settings of the western film, or the bizarre quality of foreign locales, find a quick response in the spirit of adventure extant in any audience. In more familiar settings, realism can achieve the same interest effect.

"And, finally, remember that the impact of any picture will depend on a story that moves and on characters that live. Take the audience into the picture. Make the moments that they live vicariously in the action on the screen real and exciting. Then 'be lucky' and you have the kind of screen fare that pays off."

Studio Roundup

This week Columbia put out what it considers one of the largest extra calls of the year when it hired 445 persons for ball-park sequences in the new William Bendix comedy, "Kill the Umpire." However, Paramount outdid Columbia at Marysville, Calif., where it issued 2,500 checks to townspeople who played bit parts during location shooting on the Pine-Thomas production, "Outrage."

Speaking of extras, there seems to be a trend toward taking advantage of native types and professional training as seen in the recent casting for United Artists' "The Men." To give added realism to the Stanley Kramer production, a doctor, two nurses, and a physical therapist from Birmingham Veterans Hospital were signed for parts in the film. These are in addition to 32 paraplegic veterans who will play themselves. Shooting started last week under Director Fred Zinnemann.

John Ireland, whose work in "All the King's Men" is winning him critical acclaim, reported back to Columbia to team with Evelyn Keyes in "The Killer That Stalked New York," which Producer Robert Cohn put into work with Earl McEvoy directing.

Following shooting of boxing scenes at the Chicago fight arenas, Director Felix Feist is megging the principals, James Dunn, Gregg Sherwood and Steven Andrews, for the balance of the footage in "The Golden Gloves Story," for Eagle Lion release.

William H. Wright started his third production of the year last week when the Robert Walker-Joan Leslie starrer, "The Skipper Surprised His Wife," rolled at MGM. Extensive pre-production conferences between Wright and Director Elliott Nugent resulted in launching "The Skipper" a full week ahead of schedule.

Signalizing a general upturn in production, five pictures were rolling at Paramount alone when "The Furies," epic western starring Barbara Stanwyck and Wendell Corey, started filming at Tucson, Ariz. The main company flew out to Tucson last week, joining Director Anthony Mann. And on the western front another John Ford special started with the principals, Ben Johnson and Joanne Dru, going before the camera in RKO's "Wagon Master," while at Warner Bros., "Colt. 45," starring Randolph Scott, began filming. Edwin L. Marin is directing.

Also at Warner Bros., lensing began on "Bright Leaf," story of the tobacco empire. Gary Cooper, Jack Carson and Lauren Bacall carry the chief thespian honors for Director Michael Curtiz. Henry Blanke is producing.

'Glass Menagerie' Unit Back from Location

A second unit headed by David Curtiz was scheduled to return to Hollywood this week with background shots for Warner Bros.' "The Glass Menagerie," which stars Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas, Gertrude Lawrence and Arthur Kennedy under the direction of Irving Rapper. Jerry Wald and Charles Feldman are co-producing the film.

'Riviera Story' to Perlberg

William Perlberg, 20th Century-Fox producer, has been assigned the preparation of "The Riviera Story," a comedy, as a possible vehicle for Micheline Prelle, the studio's import from France.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

Rank Report Gets Big Press Coverage as Newspapers Stress Need for Entertainment Tax Cut; Wilcox Financing Set

By JOCK MacGREGOR

The press coverage of the Rank balance sheet was enormous and many newspapers made it their top front-page story, giving terrific play to the demands of entertainment tax and the need for a cut if the industry were to continue. This has been a wonderful boost for Sir Alexander King's campaign, but it is tragic that millions must be lost and thousands thrown out of work through studio closings before the producers realize that an exhibitor can be right.

Jock MacGregor

If only the BFPA had enjoyed better relations with the CEA and, instead of inflicting the unrealistic quota, cooperated on the entertainment tax campaign long ago, this unhappy situation might never have occurred. After all, no matter how much the independent producers may curse the exhibitors and the circuits in particular, they do finance them. Those still in doubt have only to note that Odeon had to write off £2,500,000 against production losses.

The balance sheet was released at a series of press conferences at the Rank capitol in South Street. The nationals were seen in the boardroom, but the American trade papers were ushered into Mr. Rank's private office after we had had little time to study the complicated report.

The hub of this movie empire, with its period furnishings, shelves of leather-bound volumes, family photos and a picture of Sir Laurence Olivier looking strangely out of place, is like the smoking room of a very large country house, and the atmosphere is more conducive to discussing shooting pheasants than shooting films.

We sat around a roaring fire with Mr. Rank, John Davis, R. Leach, financial adviser, and knowing how much he had personally advanced to the group, one was reluctant to frame the leading question.

Mr. Rank was hesitant to answer my query as to how much the quota had cost him, and it was Mr. Davis who said that it was the ill conceived ad valorem duty which had brought about their difficult position, and that without the act they would have been worse off, for their pictures might not have been shown. (In the actual report, however, Mr. Rank states: "The theatres suffered to some extent from having to show a number of indifferent British films in order to satisfy their quota requirements . . .")

Mr. Rank took care to remind us that, originally, when the new act was being framed, he was against quota, but that he changed his mind when, with the advent of the ad valorem duty, the Americans stopped sending product and he realized the industry must be protected.

Production will be cut to 6 to 8 pictures and may cease in June unless the entertainment tax is reduced. The most disquietening thing about this is that in the report Mr. Rank writes: " . . . we made demands on the creative talent in the industry that were beyond its resources . . . " Yet several of those who were given their chances during the period are associated with the forthcoming offerings.

One man who is not in the least worried about the current situation is Herbert Wilcox, who can lay hands on all the finance he needs and relies on his knowledge of the box-office to pay his backers a dividend.

He rejects entirely the suggestion that the recent unhappy events make it possible for British pictures to be made only for the home market. He believes it is essential for films to be produced for the world market and that this can only be achieved through Anglo-American cooperation.

He has formed with Anna Neagle and Michael Wilding the Artistes Alliance Corporation and will produce in association with famous American partners. He will personally be responsible for the pictures but will call on the services of Hollywood stars and, probably, script writers. A transatlantic exchange of artists is included in the scheme.

Charles P. Skouras called an urgent press conference at 10 A.M. At least it seemed urgent, since notification was only phoned at 9:20 A.M. We anticipated a big story, maybe confirmation of 20th-Fox's rumored buy into Odeon of Canada, but all we learned was that he was here on a vacation. Pressmen looked at the pile of wet overcoats, the roaring fire which bolstered Claridges' far from ineffective central heating and his colleagues, F. H. Ricketson, Jr., of Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres; and Elmer C. Rhoden of Fox Midwest, and thought it sounded a strange holiday.

Tension

follow his new life.

Comment: "Tension" is graphic proof that valid writing, good direction and excellent performances can yield superior entertainment on a relatively modest budget. The picture lives up to its title, moving step by logical step to its climax. Suspense is maintained consistently to that point, and singleness of effect makes the film seem short. Richard Basehart gives a powerful performance as the shy little druggist, achieving a progressive character development in his role that is chiefly responsible for the impact of the film. Audrey Totter does a standout job as the wife and Cyd Charisse is excellent as the girl who turns Basehart from his intent to murder. Barry Sullivan does a fine piece of acting as the police lieutenant, while the more than adequate support of Lloyd Gough, Tom D'Andrea, William Conrad and Tito Renaldo contributes to the excellence of the picture. John Barry deserves recognition for a superior job of terse, tight-reined direction. Though "Tension" lacks top marquee strength, it does have a title that will draw and merits special exploitation effort on the part of the exhibitor. Word-of-mouth should push it into the top grosser class.

Project X

Film Classics Drama 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Lacking in smoothness but has reliable cops and robbers theme, Communist angles, New York background.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Could be a valuable second feature or grind offering.

Cast: Keith Andes, Rita Colton, Jack Lord, Kit Russell, Joyce Quinlan, Harry Clark, Robert Noe, Joanne Tree, Craig Kelly, Tom Ahearn, Dorothy Renard, William Gibberson, Herbert Holcombe, Vickie Hayes, Charles Martin. Credits: An Edward Leven Production. Producer, Edward Leven. Director, Edward J. Montagne. Screenplay, Gene Hurley and Earl Kenuedy. Photography, Don Malkames.

Plot: Wooed by a Communist group because of his former sympathy with them and his present position in an atomic energy project, a young physicist uses the opportunity to work as an inside man for the U. S. government. Hanging around the group's nightclub headquarters he meets, in addition to a smoldering blonde singer of puzzling affiliations, the head man whom the government seeks. The plotter is finished off in a chase. The blonde? A good, clean kid from Peoria.

Comment: The reliable old cops-and-robbers theme is handled here from a timely "Communist" angle and with a New York City background. Leading lady Rita Colton, furthermore, lends the touch another player attributes to her: "She practically smolders." Rita, said to be a mite of 17, is cast as the nightclub singer. Little can be said for her acting, however, while that of the other unknowns—Keith Andes as the young physicist who is attracted to her, Jack Lord as the Commie contact man and Kit Russell as the number one villain—is only routine, and the production is notably lacking in smoothness. An interesting twist is the group leader's appearance throughout not only as himself but also, unknown to the audience, as a cigarette girl; in that disguise he nearly escapes the climactic raid. The New York location has been realistically exploited in the photography. "Project X" could be, with its advance selling points, a valuable second feature or grind offering.

The Inspector General

(Color by Technicolor)

Warner Bros. Comedy with Music 104 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This first Danny Kaye comedy for Warner Bros. shows off the comedian to best advantage, with his whole bag of tricks to delight and convulse audiences. Photographed in Technicolor, this is a picture that should score solidly with moviegoers who like comedy and music, especially the Kaye brand.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well wherever it plays, for there are strong box-office values in the Kaye name.

Cast: Danny Kaye, Walter Slezak, Barbara Bates, Elsa Lanchester, Gene Lockhart, Alan Hale, Walter Catlett, Rhys Williams, Benny Baker, Norman Leavitt, Sam Hearn, Lew Hearn, Nestor Paiva, Byron Foulger, Lennie Bremen. Credits: Directed by Henry Koster. Screenplay by Philip Rapp and Harry Kurnitz. Suggested by a play by Nikolai Gogol. Photography, Elwood Bredell. Technicolor Color Director, Natalie Kalmus; associate, Mitchell Kovaleski. Music and Lyrics by the Associate Producer, Sylvia Fine. Produced by Jerry Wald.

Plot: An honest, but illiterate young man is mistaken for an investigating Inspector General by the grafting mayor of a small town. To win his favor, the mayor gives him special treatment, and everything goes well, until the young man's crooked cousin shows up. However, the young man is honest enough not to be influenced by the cousin's threats and is influential in cleaning up the town.

Comment: In this latest Danny Kaye picture, the first under his new long-term contract with Warner Bros., Producer Jerry Wald and his associate producer, Sylvia Fine (Kaye's wife), prove that they knew just what type of vehicle was needed to show Kaye off to the best advantage. For in "The Inspector General" one gets the real Kaye, in most of his phases: the clown, the comedian, the tragedian, the singer of specialized songs and the man who has the exceptional ability of handling each situation in his own inimitable way, with incomparable skill and rare understanding. It is a farce comedy that should score solidly wherever played, for there is only one Danny Kaye, and what he has to offer in this film is something no one will want to miss. Excellent support is furnished by Walter Slezak as his uncle, a crook who tries to take advantage of Kaye's ignorance, and by Gene Lockhart, Alan Hale and Elsa Lanchester as comic officials with whom he comes in contact. The Technicolor photography makes impressive the colorful backgrounds and costumes worn by the players, while the music and lyrics, written by Miss Fine, are the special kind she usually composes for Danny. The most outstanding of these is the one in which the comedian sings a quartet. It is quite unusual and new and something Danny himself dreamed up. There are dance sequences, an eating scene and many chase sequences to keep the patrons amused and in a constant state of hysterical laughter. Direction by Henry Koster takes full advantage of Kaye's unusual ability, giving him the spotlight and surrounding him with an able supporting cast in every department.

Tell It to the Judge

Columbia Comedy 87 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Not just a good comedy but a very excellent one that should go a long way toward making both exhibitors and their customers happy. The producers have hit the entertainment jackpot with this one.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Smart exploitation is definitely in order, and word-of-mouth will play a large part in maintaining box-office grosses at a high level.

Cast: Rosalind Russell, Robert Cummings, Gig Young, Marie McDonald, Harry Davenport, Fay Baker, Katharine Warren, Douglass Dumbrille, Clem Bevans, Grandon Rhodes, Louise Beavers, Thurston Hall, Jay Novello. Credits: Produced by Buddy Adler. Directed by Norman Foster. Screenplay by Nat Perrin. Additional dialog, Roland Kibbee. Story by Devery Freeman. Photography, Joseph Walker. Art direction, Carl Anderson. Musical score, Werner R. Heymann. Musical direction, Morris Stoloff.

Plot: Attorney-at-Law Rosalind Russell is up before the Senate Judiciary Committee for approval of her appointment to a seat on the Federal bench. There is opposition from those who disapprove of her recent divorce from Attorney Robert Cummings. Her grandfather, Harry Davenport, is all in favor of her career and all in disfavor of Cummings. While the committee is considering Rosalind's appointment, complications develop as the result of Cummings' pursuit of Rosalind in an effort to effect a reconciliation. The pursuing ex-husband is always getting in a jam just as the couple have been reconciled. But things right themselves eventually.

Comment: There hasn't been much drum-beating about this comedy up to this time, but the producers can still get out the sticks and drum away. For while "Tell It to the Judge" is not destined to win Academy Awards or make the ten-best list of all time, it will go a long way toward making both exhibitors and their customers happy. It isn't just a good comedy, it's a very excellent comedy—due, undoubtedly, to Nat Perrin's screenplay of Devery Freeman's story, Norman Foster's splendid direction, Buddy Adler's topnotch production values and the fine performances of the principals. If there isn't an outright belly-laugh every minute, there's a chuckle, so that throughout the entire proceedings the spectator is never permitted to lapse into sobriety. And situations that are apparently contrived and anticipated nevertheless appear spontaneous and laugh-provoking. Rosalind Russell is in her element again and proves once more her ability as a comedienne, while Robert Cummings, whose recent comedy portrayals have seemed too forced, does a bang-up job in this new offering. Perhaps it took just the right director to bring forth this actor's talents in the most favorable manner. At any rate, Cummings practically steals the picture. There is capable support by Gig Young, Marie McDonald, Harry Davenport, Douglass Dumbrille, Clem Bevans and others. The producers have hit the entertainment jackpot with this one, and exhibitors should look forward to playing it. Smart exploitation is definitely in order, and word-of-mouth will play a large part in maintaining box-office grosses at a high level.

Square Dance Jubilee

Lippert Prod'ns. Musical 78 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Satisfactory entertainment for all those who like musical westerns. Loaded with music, entirely of the hillbilly variety, this should please all those who like Spade Cooley and his brand of music.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good offering for the small towns, where a picture of this type should have a following. In the urban areas, it will draw best where Spade Cooley and his type of entertainment is known and enjoyed.

Cast: Don Barry, Mary Beth Hughes, Wally Vernon, Spade Cooley, John Eldredge, Thurston Hall, Britt Wood, Chester Clute, Tom Kennedy, Max Terhune, and others. Credits: Directed by Paul Landres. Based on a story by William Nolte. Screenplay by Ron Ormond and Daniel B. Ullman. Photography, Ernest W. Miller. Produced by Ron Ormond. A Donald Barry Production.

Plot: Two television scouts arrive at a small town looking for typical western acts. In the process of finding them and weeding them out, a show is put on. Also, during their stay they come across cattle rustlers and help the young ranch girl who is being harassed by the thieves.

Comment: In "Square Dance Jubilee" a collection of western variety acts have been linked together with a story about television talent and, inevitably, cattle rustling. It's a good offering for small-town audiences and for moviegoers who enjoy this particular kind of musical entertainment. Loaded with hillbilly music, several square dance sequences and various other forms of stylized entertainment, this picture, though it has little to offer the average urban patron, might even attract in those areas, now that square-dancing and western music are such a rage. Spade Cooley and his band head the list of entertainers, among whom are the Cowboy Copas, the Broome Brothers, Smiley and Kitty, the Tumbleweed Tumblers and many others, too numerous to mention. Don Barry and Mary Beth Hughes are the romantic leads and Wally Vernon is the comic relief, a role he handles capably. Direction by Paul Landres plays up the "vaudeville" for the sake of entertainment, letting the story come in only when necessary. Production credit goes to Ron Ormond, who lined up quite an assortment of artists, to make sure that the film had enough "western flavor" to satisfy everyone.

The Affair Blum

(German Dialog—English Titles)

Central Cinema Drama 109 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Long and weighty but well constructed, excellently played story of a murder case that gets involved in anti-semitism and politics.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good for serious audiences, billed as the German Dreyfus affair that foreshadowed the days of Hitler.

Cast: Kurt Erhardt, Gisela Trowe, Paul Bildt, Gerhard Bienert, Claus Becker, Renee Stobrawa, Helmut Rudolph, Arno Paulsen, Karin Evans, Maly Delschaft, Hans Christian Blech. Credits: Produced by Deutsche Film A. G., Berlin. Director, Erich Engel. Scenario, R. A. Stemmle. Photography, Friedl Behn Grund and Karl Plintzner. Music, Herbert Trantow. English titles, Charles Clement.

Plot: A young hoodlum kills and robs an accountant of the large Blum company. Learning that the accountant was trying to catch the company in some fraud, he attempts when he is apprehended to shift the blame for the murder to Blum. Encouraged by the officials concerned with the case, who are anxious to discredit a prominent Jew, he adds to his story until Blum is on the point of conviction. Outside investigation reveals the truth in time, but a dangerous flaw in German justice has been revealed.

Comment: A 1926 murder case described as the German Dreyfus affair, which foreshadowed the Jewish persecution under the Hitler regime, is the basis for a well constructed, excellently played drama from the Deutsche Film Studios of Berlin. The camera carefully records the planned killing for robbery and the tense reaction of the culprit and his girl friend. From the time shortly afterward when he is picked up for passing a suspicious check until the end of the picture there is a great deal of dialog as the officials pump the killer for the information with which to convict Blum. The plot so develops, however, with the race between the independent investigator and the killer trying to save his own neck by telling the right lies, and the acting is so excellent that suspense is created. Outstanding in the cast as the magistrate who hopes to convict Blum is Paul Bildt, who also appears in the recent "Somewhere in Berlin." Kurt Erhardt plays the killer. So long and weighty a film, in a foreign language, has obvious audience limitations. Serious audiences, however, will find it good.

PARAMOUNT'S HIT FOR THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

Killing the Sacred Cow

It has been said now and then, and more frequently today than some years ago, that the "big boys," the top executives of our industry, are not taking their trade press seriously.

Unfortunately, it is true. But some segments of our trade press are as much to blame as the executives who have, over a period of years, lost some respect for the trade press.

The combined trade press of the motion picture industry is a powerful medium and the one and only direct contact between the various branches of our business. Through it, news, activities and announcements of trade matters can be disseminated efficiently and rapidly. In addition, the trade press renders many important services which are not only invaluable to the industry as a whole but could not be duplicated through any other known means.

But an unhappy situation developed in this field through which it appears that some of the trade journals are more interested in trying to discredit each other than in asserting their particular place and function as units of a vitally important force of a great industry.

The net result could only be the loss of respect for the trade papers as a whole and the exploiting of them by some executives who, cannily aware of the unorganized condition of the trade paper group, successfully play one against the other and make demands that under any other conditions, especially an organized trade press, should perhaps be thrown right smack into their faces.

However, even though this industry's trade press cannot seem to get together for the good of themselves, the fact remains that individually and collectively, despite the petty quarrels, they are doing a magnificent job for the industry and so are justly entitled not only to respect but to their full and complete support and encouragement to continue to serve this industry to the best of their very capable abilities.

In the long run those who have been taking advantage of the present situation may have reason to regret their attitude and their brush-off of the trade press, particularly those papers of importance and influence in the field. They may not be aware of the fact that Mr. Exhibitor is still the guy who buys the pictures and runs the box-offices through which the money that runs the industry is channeled.

They had better remember that not a single one of them is bigger or stronger than the trade press and that the latter can still be as great a force on both roads. Good and bad.

Yes, we know. The Sacred Cow is getting an awful kicking around on this page today, but it was high time someone spoke out truthfully and honestly because if this industry moves forward or backward the trade press will play an important part either way.

Throttling the trade press through any process of slow or premeditated starvation isn't going to do anyone or any company much good. In the long run all segments and individuals will have to travel the same road.

No trade paper is bigger or stronger than the industry it serves and by virtue of the same argument, no company or industry is bigger or stronger than its trade press. If, perchance, there is any individual or group who thinks he or they can sit around a table and decide the destinies of the press, he or they are totally ignorant of the simple facts of life.

And besides, there are laws which clearly state you just can't do those things indefinitely without some repercussions and perhaps a lot of additional grief for the whole industry.

Unfortunately there are a few people who just can't resist the temptation of trying to act like Czars and characters from out of silly story books. They had better stop long enough to glance at the last chapter and find out how the story ends. . . .

Hip, Hip for Mississip

The exhibitors of Mississippi have launched a vigorous drive against the state sales tax, with all-out showmanship applied to the job of awakening the public to the high impost on their movie-going.

The screens will be used for a trailer offering a first prize of a $1,000 Savings Bond—$500 Savings Bond second prize—for the best letters on the subject: "Should I have to pay 15 times more 'sales tax' on my movie tickets than I pay on most other purchases?" (Mississippians pay 10% State tax in addition to the Federal 20% tax on tickets).

Theatremen in other states who are faced with the unfair burden of such discriminatory taxes will do well to consider the Mississippi plan for application to their own situation. And the industry will be cheering all of the Mississippi exhibitors who whole-heartedly join up in the good fight on their home grounds.

WHAT'S NEWS
In the Film Industry This Week

LITIGATION

Back in the post-Revolutionary War days, when a new United States was struggling to take shape, the Founding Fathers wrote the Constitution amidst such wrangling and haste that they forgot some very important considerations. As a result 10 Amendments, known as the Bill of Rights, had to be rushed through. The first of these insures freedom of speech. Back in the post-Civil War days, a Congress which had freed the slaves rushed through, against considerable opposition, a fourteenth amendment, which among other things forbids any state to deprive anyone of his property "without due process of law." This week in Atlanta, the two amendments were cited in a suit which marks the first direct attack on censorship of motion pictures to be filed since pictures began to talk. Producer Louis de-Rochemont, irked over the fact that Censor Christine Smith had banned his "Lost Boundaries," filed suit in federal court asking that the Atlanta censor law be declared unconstitutional because it violated both these constitutional amendments.

(Out in Ohio, though not authorized to do so by law, Ohio censors have extended their activities to the ads on a movie, using the censor power to hold up a picture whose advertising is objectionable to the censors.)

In the Government suit, the Big 3—Warner Bros., 20th-Fox, Loew's (MGM)—filed a rough draft of the decree which is being held confidential by the Justice Department, and RKO got a further amendment of its consent decree until Feb. 16, 1950 to get rid of joint ownerships. Faced by refusal of several of its partners to sell, RKO was said to be considering selling its stockholdings outright to bidders, or to seek through court action to compel its partners to dissolve the corporations and sell the assets.

TELEVISION

Si Fabian's Brooklyn Fox turned schoolroom last Tuesday when it presented an hour showing of United Nations General Assembly for 4,000 students of Brooklyn's ninth grade. Result: Technically—Not too good; Educationally—Some changes suggested by viewing teachers; older audiences for the subject matter suggested by Fabian Partner Sam Rosen, who wants to try again; Good Will—Tops.

The Federal Communications Commission announced this week that there would be no more temporary licensing of theatre television, presumably for special events. This would not affect those now operating under license, presumably. Late this week Fabian's Brooklyn Fox was said to be negotiating with DuMont to telecast the Notre Dame football games, but the price seemed to be the main hurdle.

EXHIBITION

Smarting under a 30 per cent box-office tax—20 per cent federal, 10 per cent state —which applies to the bulk of movie tickets sold in Mississippi, exhibitors of that state this week were preparing to do something about it. The "something" is a planned all-out attack on the state admission tax by arousing public resentment through a letter-writing contest. All exhibitors are asked to participate and use their screens to announce to their patrons a contest offering a first prize of $1,000 and a second prize of $500—both in bonds —for the two best letters on "Should I have to Pay 15 Times More 'Sales Tax' on My Movie Tickets Than I Pay on Most Other Purchases?" The contest is scheduled to run in December (P. 9) .

Meanwhile a more cheerful note was sounded in Overland, Mo., where the mayor, in the face of refusal by the Board of Alderman to rezone an area so that Fanchon and Marco could build a 1,000-car under-skyer, was planning to take the question to the people through a referendum. And Drive-in Operators, Inc., of Georgia, meeting in Atlanta, reelected R. J. Barnes as president and general manager, while the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, etc., are going to open a film row office with Myra Stroud as managing secretary. In Chicago, jallopy nights and Old Timers' nights are helping boost business during the pre-holiday slump.

DISTRIBUTION

Both Paramount and 20th Century-Fox this week were reliably reported to have moved towards solving the print shortage. Paramount has raised its print orders from 325 to 375; Fox is said to be working 400 prints on a feature.

In the field of change Robert Gillham stepped up to national ad and publicity director for Selznick and Vanguard, replacing Paul McNamara, resigned, and J. Cheever Cowdin resigned as Universal board chairman, after reported disagreement with the Nate Blumberg interests, which were backed by Principal Stockholder J. Arthur Rank.

GENERAL

First voice to be raised this week in senatorial circles against the excise taxes was that of Sen. Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), who said he would seek reduction next term.

And switching from the financial to the question of morals, Bishop William A. Scully (Catholic), head of the Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures found that motion pictures were getting worse, but that the U. S. product was less the sinner than the foreign import. He urged Catholics to "support and patronize the good and decent films in Hollywood and abroad." Meanwhile the Catholic Christophers were offering $10,000 for the best movie script in the Nov. 21, 1949-Nov. 1, 1950 period.

Financial: Twentieth Century-Fox, net for 39 weeks ending Sept. 24, 1949, $8,200,-013, or $2.80 a share, compared with $9,-119,613 or $3.12 a share for the same 1948 period. Reason for the drop: Losses taken for devaluation and for the stockholder suit settlement which attacked the bonus deal of Charles Skouras and others in National Theatres. Fox also declared the following dividends $1.12½ a share of Prior Preferred, 37½ cents a share on Convertible Preferred, 50 cents a share on common, all payable Dec. 1.

RKO, net loss for third quarter $287,809 compared to net loss of $2,257,888 for corresponding period, 1948. Net profit first nine months, 1949 $1,919,228, compared to net loss same period 1948 of $356,024.

Technicolor, dividend of 40 cents a share on the common, and a special dividend of 40 cents a share—both payable Dec. 20.

Fox, Paramount Increase Prints To Solve Shortage

Paramount and 20th Century-Fox have both been quietly increasing the number of prints alloted their exchanges for each feature until their print shortage situation—subject of almost universal exhibitor complaint in recent months—has been more or less eliminated in recent months, reliable sources indicated this week.

At present Paramount, which once issued 325 prints to a top feature, has run the number up to 375, a figure which Paramount sources declared would be more or less constant.

Up to 400

Twentieth Century-Fox, whose General Sales Manager Andy W. Smith, Jr., months ago had said the company was working out a new print plan, but who declined to discuss it, is reliably reported to be issuing orders for 400 prints on every 20th-Fox feature. Unofficial sources placed the former Fox print order at 275 to 325 a feature.

The increase is said to have resulted from the formal complaint made by the Theatre Owners of America, which took up the matter last September at its Los Angeles convention. On Sept. 15, 1949, the distributor-exhibitor relations committee, headed by Ted Gamble, reported on the matter to the floor, recommending that each distributor increase his print allocations to all exchanges it operated.

Film Export Business Off

With the exception of 16-mm. film business abroad, United States exports of motion picture films and equipment were off during the first nine months of 1949, the Commerce Department revealed this week in Washington.

There was a drop of more than 30 million linear feet of raw 35-mm. stock, projector business was off by one-third and booth equipment dropped even more sharply the figures revealed.

Sixteen-millimeter positive features, however, went up to 24,340,801 linear feet valued at $683,452 in 1949 compared to 14,969,734 feet valued at $417,621 in the same period last year. Export of 16-mm. negative reached 2,165,321 feet valued at $111,246 compared to 1,513,260 feet worth only $69,081 in the corresponding 1948 period.

Cowdin Quits Universal Board Chairmanship

J. Cheever Cowdin this week resigned as board chairman of Universal, with his resignation to take effect Dec. 31, 1949. Cowdin, who had been serving without a contract in recent months, will remain as a financial consultant to the company.

Mayor Goes to Bat

Mayor Norman Myers of Overland, Mo., this week went to the bat for the giant 1,000-car, four-screen drive-in which Fanchon and Marco wishes to build in his community by declaring he would call for a referendum and let the public decide. The project is held up by action on the part of the Board of Aldermen who have twice voted down a rezoning petition. A public vote is thought likely to upset the aldermanic view.

Manpower, Money Prime Questions For Industry Meet

Manpower and money will be two of the prime questions certain to come up before the Conference Committee of the Motion Picture Industry when it meets at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C., Dec. 12-13 to discuss the steps to set up an all-industry public relations program, it was learned from reliable sources Tuesday.

That a move to discuss both budget and operation of the all-industry plan would be pushed by exhibitors seemed a further conclusion, though exhibitor organizations are keeping silent on their plans at present.

Budget a 'Must'

However, a well-informed exhibitor chief told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW that it was of prime importance that a budget be set up and it be determined how much would be allocated each participating member.

It is also important, he pointed out, that the personnel who carry out the forming of the all-industry campaign, be decided upon. There are many areas of conflict within the industry, he pointed out, and to find men who would suit all parties is next to impossible in his opinion. Exhibitors, he said, by the weight of their numbers, might be able to carry the day insofar as selecting the personnel, but then he acknowledged the men selected by exhibitors might not appeal to the other two branches. The same situation applies in all directions, he added, and the solution might be found in picking the actual planners and workers for the campaign from qualified men without the industry.

Just what will be the reaction to this thought if presented is not clear, for the Motion Picture Association of America has more or less inaugurated the plan and may feel a proprietary interest in it.

Support Good Movies, Counsels Bishop

Rev. William A. Scully chairman of the (Catholic) Episcopal Committee on Motion Pictures this week urged all Catholics "to support and patronize the good and decent films in Hollywood and abroad" in a statement which denounced the increasing number of offensive pictures during the past year.

From Washington, Bishop Scully reported that almost 24 per cent of the 467 features reveiwed during the year were classified as "morally objectionable in whole or in part. In this connection 19 per cent of the domestic product and 47 per cent of the foreign imports were found to be what the Bishop termed "offensive".

"Not only in number, but also in the kind and degree of moral offensiveness, films of the past year were at the lowest ebb."

Get 'Em Writing to Get 'Em Thinking Is Tax Strategy

Prize Letter Contest Would Arouse Audience Opposition To Miss. Box-Office Levy

Stung by the fact that the majority of their theatre tickets are soaked with a 30 per cent admission tax—20 per cent federal, 10 per cent state—Mississippi exhibitors this week were preparing to carry their fight to the people through a novel letter-writing prize contest. The idea apparently behind the contest is to get audiences to think about admission taxes by getting them to write about it.

The contest, which offers a $1,000 bond as first prize and a $500 as second prize for two of the best letters written by theatre-goers on "Should I Have to Pay 15 times More 'Sales Tax' on My Movie Tickets than I Pay on Most Other Purchases," is planned to run in December. It's strategy is to hit the voters with the information so that a bill to reduce the tax may be gotten to the legislature during the next term, which apparently precedes elections.

The plan for the contest involves every exhibitor taking to his screen by way of a trailer which calls attention to the prizes and to follow it up with handbills and other informative media. In a letter sent to all exhibitors as the result of initial emergency exhibitor meeting in Hattiesburg, followed by meetings in Meridian, Vicksburg, Natchez and Jackson, all theatres, including those devoted to Negroes, who are also eligible for the prizes, are requested to participate.

In a "Plan of Action" sent out by the emergency committee, the point is made that something must be done about box-office taxes now, even as municipalities are eyeing theatres for their cut of this revenue sources. Exhibitors are requested to seek the cooperation of their newspapers, probably selecting the newspaper editor and the mayor, along with other important people as judges. The five best letters in each are to be sent to Jackson, Miss., where the final two best will receive the prizes.

The trailer announcing the contest, which is to be produced at cost and prorated among the participating exhibitors, reads:

The Theatres of Mississippi
Will Give
A $1,000 Saving Bond as First Prize
A $500 Saving Bond as Second Prize

To the Persons who write the best letters on the subject:

"Should I have to Pay 15 Times More Sales Tax on My Movie Tickets Than I Pay On Most Other Purchases?"

This theatre must receive your letter before midnight, Dec. 31.

Free information is available on this subject in the Manager's Office—Also rules of the contest.

(Note: You are paying approximately 20% Federal Tax and 10% State Tax when you buy a ticket. Mississippi Theatre Patrons Pay the Highest Ticket Tax of any State in the Nation.)

Handbills, Too

The handbill presents the cause of the motion picture as a cultural and entertainment unit in the community and makes points against the tax.

Constitution Invoked as deRochemont Launches Atlanta Censorship Attack

For the first time since movies began to talk, the U. S. Constitution was invoked this week in an attack on censorship as Producer Louis deRochemont sought an injunction against the Atlanta censors in the federal court of that southern city.

DeRochemont's action, in which Film Classics is a co-plaintiff, arose out of a ban placed upon "Lost Boundaries" by Censor Christine Smith and upheld by the Carnegie Library Trustees, who are the censor board under the Atlanta law establishing censorship.

In his petition, the producer of the film which deals with the problems facing a Negro family which passed for white in a New Hampshire town, declares that the censor action violates two amendments of the Constitution. They are: the post-Revolutionary First, which guarantees freedom of speech and of the press, and the post-Civil War Fourteenth, which extends these guarantees to the states and prevents any state from depriving anyone of his property without due process of law.

Mayor Sued, Too

The deRochemont action is directed against Censor Christine Smith, the entire censor board —Milton G. Farris, Sherwood L. Astin, Ralph A. Juie, Mrs. William J. Davis, J. Howard Monroe, John M. Slaton, Aubrey Milam, Troy Steone—and Mayor William B. Hartsfield of Atlanta, as an ex-officio member of the board. It seeks:

1) A temporary injunction halting any censor action against the picture or its playing while the case is being tried.

2) A permanent injunction declaring the censor law of Atlanta to be unconstitutional.

3) And "such other and further relief as this court may deem just and equitable."

"Lost Boundaries originally was banned by Censor Smith, before it had a public showing, which is customary practice in most censor cases. deRochemont and Film Classics appealed this ruling to the censor board which upheld Miss Smith and thereby prevented the picture from getting a license to be shown in the city of Atlanta.

DeRochemont immediately wanted a court test but Film Classics President Joseph Bernhard objected, believing that the ruling would be changed. His position was justified when the censor passed 20th Century-Fox's "pass" pic-

Just a Sneeze

Twentieth Century-Fox's controversial "Pinky" opened in Atlanta last Thursday with police alert in front of the Roxy but anticipated demonstrations failed to materialize. The whole atmosphere was quiet with the United Press reporting a policeman as saying there had been "nothing louder than a sneeze" exceping for one burst of applause in the Negro balcony when Pinky bested an opponent.

Fabian Fox Turns Schoolhouse For United Nations Telecast

Public Service Gesture Enables 4,000 Children, Teachers to See Session

For the first time in the history of theatre television, Fabian's Brooklyn Fox united with the Ford Motor Company, the Columbia Broadcasting System and members of the stagehands and projectionists' unions to present a telecast of the United Nation's General Assembly to some 4,000 Brooklyn Junior High School students in the auditorium of the Fox Theatre.

The broadcast, which was offered without cost to either the students or the board of education, tapped in on the 12th such UN telecast sponsored over CBS by Ford and was brought to the theatre over RCA's large-screen theatre television.

The experiment, unique in the fact that it is one of the few efforts made by theatres anywhere to perform a service of educational value by converting a theatre into a giant classroom and by making use of facilities beyond the ability of the majority of schools to procure, was met with mixed reactions.

Noisy to Interested

Students ranged from noisy to interested, teachers for the most part considered it of educational value with the intimation that future attempts would have to be modified with the classroom in mind, and Fabian Theatres, which presented the event, were satisfied with the result as an experiment and indicated they would try again.

Presenting this last view, Sam Rosen, one of the Fabian partners, said he considered the event a success, despite difficulties in student attention which interfered with the program and some technical bugs which marred the telecast.

Termed Public Relations

"This," he remarked anent using the theatre as an auxiliary help in schools, "is public relations. To me it is a success even as it is. I believe this is the kind of thing theatres should do and that there is a big future for it. We lost a little time on our opening show, but we're happy to do this as a public service."

Rosen declared that he thought a mistake had been made in the age groups of the students which ranged from 14 to 18, because the program was "adult."

"I would like to try it again with high school seniors," he said, adding that he had plans now to attempt that.

The viewpoint of teachers queried in connection with the show is probably best expressed by Phil Finkelstein, an instructor in Cunningham Junior High School, part of the Brooklyn system.

"It has an educational value," he told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW of the experiment. However, he added that he thought there was too much talk in the telecast and that for classroom use it would be better if informational background material were cut into some of the debate.

The student reaction itself ranged from dissatisfaction to a high decree of interest and intelligent discussion. One girl told CBS, which took wire recordings of opinion, that "I didn't get nothing out of it." Her classmates, all of whom had left before the telecast was completed and had been held up in the lobby by a school representative, agreed. The representative advised reporters quietly that the opinion was not typical of the school system since the students in question came from schools in an underprivileged area.

Too Long-Winded

Other students reacted differently. All seemed to agree that the United Nations speakers were too long winded. One girl said there would be more interest if they used more brevity. Another wanted to hear more speakers. A boy in a wind breaker favored a 25-minute maximum on all UN speakers.

Asked by the interviewer: "Do you think you would sit still that long?" he replied:

"I guess so, if they were interesting."

Another boy remarked that most of the UN delegates seemed bored.

The telecast itself got started after an address to the students by Rosen and Ruth Bryan Roade of the United Nations as well as a representative of the Board of Education. Unfortunately this was followed over television by an address from a UN spokesman which made the talk run rather long and started the students to talking. Shots of the Assembly itself in "action" quieted them down for awhile, but then another interview with a member of the committee on Free Speech started off another burst of talk which did not die down throughout the telecast.

For the most part the static quality of the Assembly did not provide sufficient interest to hold the students, especially with the talk that continued, and at points the definition ran haywire, at one time blacking out altogether.

However, despite the noisiness and inattention of many, the kids seem to have had a good time. Some booed Vishinsky, cheered Israel, and the questioning at the end of the program proved that some even had been observant.

Not Even a Mouse?

Clyde Cooley of Omaha's International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes asked exhibitors in that area this week to think it over whether it wouldn't be a good idea to close all houses on the night before Christmas to give employes a break?

No New Licenses Declares FCC

No further authorization will be granted for large-screen theatre television broadcasts, excepting as part of long-range research and experimental programs, the Federal Communications Commission announced in Washington this week.

The Commission said its ruling was handed down to preclude any possibility of misunderstanding on the part of the public or the motion picture firms "contemplating investment in the proposed service."

The FCC pointed out that several film organizations have requested hearings on the establishment of commercial theatre video operation and have asked for the assignment of specific channels. For this reason, the Commission said, the granting of new authorizations for special broadcasts before a final decision is reached on whether or not to license theatre video might be "misleading."

The recent FCC ruling on television licenses in no way affects the present status of theatres now operating large-screen television experiments, Gael Sullivan, executive director of the Theatre Owners of America, announced Wednesday.

Sullivan, after studying the ruling, said further it did not affect the issues now before the commission with regard to granting special licenses for theatre video, a matter now being studied by the FCC.

You Can't Win

Albert Levin, manager of San Francisco's Alexandria, thought he was doing pretty good when he managed to find a lost earring out of the pile of stuff left on a theatre floor over night. But when he turned it over to the lady's husband, he found that irate gentleman demanding an apology as well. It seems, said Mr. Spouse, that Levin had told his wife she had "long ears" when the lady had called up about the earring. What Levin, had actually suggested was that she drop down and see if he had found the "wrong earring." Misunderstanding did the rest, converting "wrong" into "long."

Press Club Help For Wrather Film

The Overseas Press Club has set up a liaison committee to work with Producer Jack Wrather and Eddie Golden on their forthcoming story of Cardinal Mindszenty's trial—"Guilty of Treason"—Wrather told a trade press conference in New York Tuesday.

The Club, which Wrather said owned a piece of the picture in addition to having sold its book, "As We See Russia", to the producer as inspiration for the film, appointed a committee consisting of Gabe Pressman, who covered the Mindszenty's trial for The New York Times. Craig Thompson, former Life Moscow correspondent, and Bob Considine of International News Service.

Wrather said negotiations for a distributor on the film would begin shortly but that he and Golden would probably not release it until after holidays or until the United Nations acted on its review of the Hungarian prelate's trial.

The former Texas oil man turned film producer declared that he had brought in "Guilty of Treason" for $600,000 in association with Golden at Enterprise Studios. During a recent European visit, Wrather called upon Pope Pius XII and presented him with a copy of the Emmett Lavery screenplay.

This unprecedented advertising campaign for the first time utilizes in the selling of a motion picture the highly successful techniques used for other types of products — as in the launching of a new model of an automobile or a special merchandising scheme for razor blades. The secret is this: Create a desire through a coordinated, concentrated magazine and newspaper barrage. Then make it possible for everybody to satisfy that demand when it is at its height. That's why over 500 prints will be working on "Prince of Foxes" during the Holiday season. Cut yourself in on it by booking "PRINCE OF FOXES" NOW!

White Hands

The new Coronet Theatre in San Francisco, managed by Walter Chenoweth, instituted a policy of handling their customers only with "white gloves." Members of the usher staff instead of utilizing clumsy flashlights now guide patrons to their seats with specially treated semi-luminous white gloves preventing any districting flashing on the walls or glare in the patrons eyes.

Attack Atlanta Censorship

ture "Pinky" with a few cuts. However, when the censor persisted in denying "Lost Boundaries" the right to show, he joined deRochemont in filing suit.

United Artists, with the support of the Motion Picture Association of America has challenged censorship of "Curley" in Memphis because it showed whites and Negroes in the same group, but this is a state court suit and not one involving the federal guarantees of freedom of speech. The possibility of such actions being taken against censorship was suggested by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW back in May, 1948, when it was pointed out that a passing remark in the opinion rendered by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Government anti-trust suit, might be basis of action. This remark read:

"We have no doubt that moving pictures, like newspapers and radio, are included in the press whose freedom is guaranteed by the First Amendment."

An earlier attempt to fight censorship through the federal constitution in the days of silent pictures, failed.

Contains Ideas

In his petition, deRochemont told the court:

"Although the motion picture was produced and is being distributed primarily for entertainment to theatre audiences, it presents serious ideas on the subject of intergroup relationships and tolerance which plaintiffs have a right to express and convey to all residents of the United States who are willing to pay admission to see the said motion picture. This right of plaintiffs is protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States against infringement by the United States, and by the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment against infringement by any State or political subdivision of a State. Plaintiffs have been deprived of this constitutional right solely by the action of defendants pursuant to the unconstitutional sections of the Code and the unconstitutional Censorship Ordinance referred to above."

No Dollar Increase In Sight, Briton Bluntly Warns U. S.

Harold Wilson, president of the British Board of Trade, bluntly served notice on the United States film industry in New York last Saturday that there would be no increase in the $17,000,000 of film rentals which it is now allowed to take out of his country annually in dollars, even under possible future revisions of the Anglo-American film agreement.

The youthful Wilson, who holds a post in the British Labor Government equivalent to that of the U. S. Commerce Secretary and as such negotiated the Anglo-American agreement with Eric Johnston and John Mulvey, avoided questions as to whether the British would seek to cut the $17,000,000 when an extension of the agreement comes up for discussions. But when openly asked if the amount of frozen rentals remittable in dollars might be increased, he said:

"The answer to that is no."

Not Here on Films

Wilson declared that his visit here was not to negotiate any film matters, but to travel through sections of the United States to see what could be done toward increasing British industrial exports and to attend National Agricultural Conference in Washington, D. C. Asked if he would do anything towards getting greater playing time for British films, he replied:

"It will always be our desire to increase the showing of British films over here. Our Government, however, recognizes that it can only be done on the basis of quality films," he added, stating that he thought Rank "made a mistake in trying to bring everything over."

In several comments during the press conference he held in the offices of the British Information Service in New York, Wilson indicated that he was not in accord with J. Arthur Rank on many points. The first indication came when he told correspondents that British production was far from dead and that independent production could take up the slack caused by the curtailment of Rank's plans following a year of heavy losses. Paying tribute to Rank for what he had done for British production, Wilson said:

"I think it's a great mistake to regard Mr. Rank as the British film producers."

Going to Independents

Wilson could not say "offhand" how much of Britain's production Rank had furnished but declared that former Rank producers—such as Pressburger-Powell—were going to the independent fold.

"It's certainly a fact that more than half of the films produced in Britain are being produced by British Lion and other independent producers."

Queried on the implied criticism of the government film policies in the Rank report to Odeon stockholders, where the admission taxes, the ad valorem tax and the quota were discussed, Wilson said that he would have something to say on Rank's report and the condition of the British film industry in the House of Commons if the question were to come up for debate.

The British Board of Trade chief refused to discuss the quota, pointing out that while he was required by law to fix the amount of playing time a British theatre had to give a British picture, the reopening of the question did not arrive until next month, and that it was a question for Parliament to decide.

In reply to a question as to whether the quota had not failed because of the exemptions granted, he said it had never been intended to enforce the quota 100 per cent and pointed to the diversity of opinion within the industry on the point, stating:

"The exhibitors recommended a quota of 25 per cent. The distributors, led by Mr. Rank, recommended a quota of 50 per cent—in fact, Mr. Rank supported 60 per cent. I took an intermediate figure."

Disappointed

Wilson expressed disappointment over the amount of American production in England, stating that it had not lived up to expectations. He regarded co-production as healthy. He left over the weekend for Washington where he met Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, where it was anticipated that he and Johnston would discuss the possibility of setting a date for the conference which would study the extension of the Anglo-American agreement. Johnston also gave a luncheon in Wilson's honor Wednesday and had him as a guest at the opening of the MPAA's swank screening room Tuesday night.

Rank Losses Still Studied

The result of the J. Arthur Rank losses and comments continue to keep things boiling along the film row front in Britain, with the question coming to the floor of Parliament and the Rank balance sheet continuing to inspire close study both in financial circles and in the industry itself. The picture, as cabled this week by JOCK MacGREGOR, STR London Correspondent, follows:

While nothing is less popular at 38 South Street than mention of the production situation, the publication of the Rank balance sheet continues to inspire all and sundry. Newspapers have offered their solutions, questions have been asked in Parliament and other film men have used it to bring the spotlight on themselves.

Sir Alexander Korda has preached a sermon, the underlying theme of which is "How right I've been"! He maintains quality and not quantity is the answer and backs up his claim by saying his pre-war pictures which include "Private Life of Henry VIII," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Four Feathers" have earned £1,760,000 since 1945.

Illuminating

This is illuminating. It reveals the enormous value of old pictures, but hardly justifies the producer anticipating the reissue potential when planning a new offering. One hopes there will be no recurrence of the ad valorem duty or any law which puts new films in short supply and encourages revivals.

Furthermore, history does not look like repeating itself. Korda's postwar record is not impressive. "The Winslow Boy," "Fallen Idol" and "The Third Man" are outstanding but weighed against them are costly flops like "Bonnie Prince Charlie," "Anna Karenina" and "Ideal Husband." The reissues will have to be enormous to recoup the investments.—Jock MacGregor

MGM Raises Releases

MGM has set 14 pictures for national release during the four months starting Dec. 1, or 2 more than were released during the same period last year.

24 Releases Set For December

Twenty-four new features will be put into release during the holiday month of December, a check of the booking guide of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW revealed this week.

This marks a drop compared to November when 35 releases were put on the market by 13 companies. Production, however, continued to compare closely with last year. Pictures that went into production during the first 11 months of 1949 totaled 276, which compares favorably with the 281 of the same period in 1948. Inventory moved up slightly with 252 in process of being completed or in the vault for the 11-month period ending in November, 1949 compared to 250 for the same period in 1948.

Wiley Voices Tax Protest

First voice to be heard this week demanding reduction of excise taxes, among which are included amusement taxes, is that of Sen. Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.) who called upon Congress to put in a cut.

Wiley served notice that he would "insist" upon the enactment of his own bill, that of Sen. Edwin Johnson (D., Colo.), or some sound substitute that would lower what he termed the "nuisance taxes."

Claims Loss

To back up the need for tax cuts, he cited that that there would be "hundreds of millions of dollars" loss in purchasing power through the steel and coal strikes which would be reflected in reduced Christmas buying and a decreased business volume. Elimination of "nuisance taxes" would not only serve to decrease this, but would not necessarily mean less revenue, Wiley argues, because it has been proved that removal of burdensome taxes tends to increase spending for goods. Wiley further points out that Congress raised the "nuisance taxes" as a war measure promising a repeal at the end of the war.

LONDON observations
by Jock MacGregor

Few Hollywood pictures have justified a more brilliant premiere than that accorded MGM's "The Forsyte Saga" (released in the U. S. under the title "That Forsyte Woman"), chosen for this year's Royal Film Performance. Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon and Errol Flynn, who received a great hand for their screen portrayals, also provided some of the brighter moments of the stage presentation which is a major feature of these great shows.

Jock MacGregor

The "live" part was on the long side, and rather disjointed. Several artists who are stars only in their employers' eyes could have been omitted. Memorable moments were the Rosalind Russell, Gregory Peck and Michael Wildings' cross talk act, Ann Sothern and George Murphy dancing and Jean Simmons' Cinderella. Ben Lyon was in terrific form as the compere and the artist's speech of loyalty was delivered with great sincerity by Anna Neagle.

But the really great moment of these shows, seen only by the privileged few, is the presentation of the artists to the Royal Family. This year it took place in the foyer and Their Majesties and the Princesses chatted with them for nearly forty minutes with the stars delightfully surprised to learn how much they knew about their work. "That's most generous," was all I could heard Rosalind Russell reply to the Queen when she complimented her on her comedy singing on the stage and suggested she should do more of it in films.

Before his departure for the continent, Variety Clubs' London Tent ran a party in honor of Charles Skouras. There was a big turn-up with the American contingent strengthened by the presence of John H. Harris, George Murphy and MGM's "sales experts."

Skouras, incidentally, has become an international figure and a butt for cartoonists. His hunting outfit caused a stir in conventional old England and there are some who believe he only shot 105 Hampshire pheasants because the birds, used to Mr. Rank's more conservative guests, came up for a closer look.

Happiest man about town is William Kupper, who is proudly showing the gold cigarette case given by his associates to mark his "30th Anniversary with 20th."

Since 20th-Fox are to film "The Mudlark," that delightful best-seller about the little boy who all but reorganized Windsor Castle in Queen Victoria's day, the natural choice for this role would seem to be John Howard Davies, who made such a hit in "Oliver Twist."

Projectionist R. E. Barret of the Regal, Walham Green, loves exhibitions and was the first to arrange a display of new projection equipment in the foyer before its installation in the booth. Now with the aid of Relief Manager F. A. Smith and Assistant Manager R. Lamb he has organized a display of studio equipment.

Defend Columbia On Rental Terms

Two more defenses of Columbia's right to decide its rental terms for "Jolson Sings Again," were voiced this week. They came from Ellis Arnall, president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and Gunther Lessing, board chairman of the same organization.

Arnall, apprised of the Theatre Owners of America position that the Columbia terms compelled exhibitors to raise their rentals, asked:

"If an exhibitor bought a top picture for only 10 per cent, would he feel that compelled him to lower his admissions?"

The SIMPP President acknowledged that he might seem prejudiced but declared that the producer was the important man in the motion picture scene, since without product the industry would be nowhere.

"What we need," he declared, "is more fair play. I mean fair play for all three branches—the exhibitor, the distributor and the producer."

Cites Fox West Coast

The SIMPP President indicated that the terms the exhibitor demanded were not always fair and cited an alleged situation in Fox West Coast Theatres contracts, where he said the right to pull a picture remained entirely with the exhibitor and the producer or distributor had no sayso or a control figure to protect him.

SIMPP Board Chairman Gunther Lessing, asked about the "Jolson" situations, told STR:

"I have not briefed the matter and do not have all the facts available, but it is my personal legal opinion, that Columbia is entirely within its legal rights. The courts have decreed, and it has long been the law of the land, that there should be no price fixing between seller and buyer. This does not mean, however, that the seller cannot ask a certain price for his product based on his costs, overhead and reasonable profits. It is the same whether for wearing apparel, hot dogs, or motion pictures."

Christophers Offer $10,000 for Best Script

The Christophers, Catholic organization which tries to interest men of ability and goodwill to work for the solution of world problems, this week announced a second prize contest which will include $10,000 for the best motion picture script. The contest, which runs from Nov. 21, 1949, through Nov. 1, 1950, also offers $5,000 for the best play script and $15,000 for the best novel.

Gillham Heads SRO Advertising and Publicity

Robert Gillham, formerly eastern advertising and publicity director for Selznick Releasing Organization and Vanguard Films, this week stepped up to the post of national director of advertising and publicity for both companies. He succeeds Paul McNamara, resigned.

Hire Secretary

The Motion Picture Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois has hired Myra Stroud, formerly with Fanchon & Marco, as full-time managing secretary. Offices are to be opened on Film Row.

'EDUCATE, INFORM.' Declaring that films should function more "in the world of information," Dore Schary (above), MGM vice-president in charge of production, told his audience at a Town Hall lecture forum last Friday (18) in New York that beyond entertainment motion pictures "have an obligation to educate and inform."

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Star 'Personals' Are Paying Dividends, Paramount Finds

Personal appearances of actors hand-picked to increase interest in a particular picture and to lure "lost" audiences back to the movies, have paid dividends in so far as Paramount is concerned.

It has paid off so well, in fact, that the company's experiences after touring Gloria Swanson in behalf of "The Heiress," Corinne Calvet for "Rope of Sand," Marie Wilson for "My Friend Irma," Bill Demarest for "Red, Hot and Blue," and Henry Wilcoxon for "Samson and Delilah," is making bigger plans for more of same. Next on the projected extension of p.a. activity is a plan to send Miss Swanson on a tour for "Sunset Boulevard," Bob Hope over a mid-west itinerary in behalf of "The Great Lover," Lizabeth Scott for a twenty-town junket in connection with "Paid in Full" and Nancy Olsen to do a dual job for "Sunset Boulevard" and "Mr. Music."

This is impressive evidence that the Paramount pressure people, headed by Max Youngstein, are pretty content with the lot they drew on recent p.a. enterprises. To listen to them tell it, there is strategy behind every move. As explained by Exploitation Manager Sid (Mr. Rabbit) Messibov, the idea consists of intriguing public interest via press interviews and radio time which take the story about stars' visits out of the dramatic sections and put them on the news pages. The Paramount brains argue that the untapped audience is probably not an avid reader of what goes on the movie pages, but may read on from a headline about a film star in the regular news section, even if it concerns only such matters as that Miss Swanson claims she was the first film star to go in for motherhood.

Selects Stars Carefully

Paramount, Mesibov explains, selects stars carefully and with a view to exhibitor acceptance. In fact exhibitors have been called upon for ideas and opinions, because, Paramount says, the exhibitor has "to live in the town 52 weeks a year." So everything is worked out ahead of time to avoid any bad reaction after the star leaves town.

"First of all," he says, "the person has to be equipped to do a job—somebody who can talk about many things, not merely pictures. The idea is that these are real people; that they live normal lives, thus counteracting hostile preconceptions by actual example, not just plain talk."

To carry out the plan, Paramount's ambassadors at large do not confine appearances to theatres. The major part of the effort is directed to women's clubs, civic groups, parent-teacher bodies, luncheon clubs, etc. And the major effort is to make stories that will get into the news sections of the paper—not just the drama pages. Sometimes the plan works and they even make Page 1. Sometimes a tough news desk tosses the yarn right back to the drama page. But still the idea is clicking so far as Paramount is concerned.

Attempts by STR to find out what exhibitors thought were not very successful. The average exhibitor is ready to go along with anything that may help him. But a modicum of success was obtained by going to civilians in whose area Paramount's fabulous press agent and actor-at-large, Henry Wilcoxon, conducted his "Samson and Delilah" discussion groups.

Sample Replies

Two sample replies represent honest and slightly different views.

John Hall Jacobs, librarian of the New Orleans Public Library finds that Wilcoxon "undoubtedly made a fine impression in our community.

"I have heard," he remarks, "several favorable comments about his visit and a reference on his talk at one meeting which I attended.

Tom Waller Forms Public Relations Firm

Tom Waller, former New York office information director for the Motion Picture Association of America, and prior to that publicity manager for United Artists, this week formed Tom Waller and Associates, public relations firm, which will handle both institution and industrial accounts. Waller has been associated with the motion picture industry in a publicity and trade press executive capacity for the past 25 years.

Morrison Top Winner In 'Joe Young' Contest

Melvin F. Morrison, manager of the Strand Theatre, Dover, N. H., has been named first prize winner in the exploitation contest held by RKO Radio in connection with the New England premiere of "Mighty Joe Young." R. E. Morris, manager of the Colonial, Laconia, N. H., takes second prize, with the third going to George W. Pugh of the Rialto, Glens Falls, N. Y.

Note the wise use of stills in the setpiece. Lobby board at left announced personal appearances of the film's stars, Dorothy Hart and John Russell. (Story on Page 15.)

A good suggestion is gleaned from Newsviews, publication of Fox West Coast Theatres. Seems that in many cases where window cards are used, there are frequently a number left over. What to do with them? Well, Newsviews suggests that "school boys driving strip-downs and jalopies will find a place for them on their cars, in return for a guest ticket, almost any time." The cards can be scotch-taped on or wired on. The stunt is good for almost any picture you could name, but we think it would be especially appropriate for "The Big Wheel." As Newsviews sums it up, "such a stunt gets you plenty of coverage around town."

Down in Miami, Fla., Wometco Theatres have staged quite a campaign on "Jolson Sings Again" under the direction of Sonny Shepherd, advertising and publicity chief. An exploitation meeting was held during which every phase of showmanship in connection with the picture was discussed. With Shepherd presiding, the managers were addressed by Harry K. McWilliams, Columbia's exploitation manager. To our desk has come a "work assignment schedule" from Shepherd, which contains many of the ideas brought out at the meeting. Wish we could list all of them here—there are plenty of them, but we'd like to report on one or two that could be profitably employed by other showmen who will play the Jolson picture. Arrange with a restaurant for a two-sided sign to be placed on tables, with this copy: "Reserved for Al Jolson—See the rest of the Jolson story, etc." This is also good for night clubs, bars, clubs, etc. Arrange for camera gag with girls supposedly taking pictures of people and handing them a card: "I didn't take your picture—but if you want to see the best one in town, see 'Jolson Sings Again'." Arrange with leading used car lots to display this sign on one or two cars: "This car must be sold. I need money to see 'Jolson Sings Again'." Or: "'Jolson Sings Again'—and so will you in one of our used cars." How about it? Surely you can use all three of these stunts.

The magazines Scholastic and Boys Life have each awarded the "Movie of the Month" citation to MGM's "Battleground" as the outstanding picture for November. Whenever a picture is so cited, why not arrange tieups with newsdealers for cards calling attention to that fact? Perhaps you could place inserts in the magazines making the citations. And you can mention the honor in your newspaper advertising and on your lobby display boards.

During the first ten days, run of Paramount's "The Great Lover" at the New York Paramount, ten men are wandering the streets of New York, each of them carrying a box of Johnston's candy under his arm. The first girl to identify a candy-carrying embassador from the court of Bob Hope with the words, "You Are 'The Great Lover'," automatically rates one of the boxes of chocolates. Better mark this down among your "Great Lover" exploitation notes and put it into practice in advance of your playdate.

Atlanta Journal's Movie Selling Plan

A newspaper merchandising package for motion pictures, consisting of advertising, publicity and point-of-sales marketing, was outlined to distributors and the trade press by Advertising Manager Louis G. Johnson, of the Atlanta Journal's Sunday magazine section, at a series of luncheons held in New York last week. The plan has been used for four films with enviable results.

The wheels are set in motion when the distributor takes a full-page ad in the magazine. The next step is to ascertain the playdates of the film involved throughout the area and to list in the ad every theatre and its playdate. In the case of "It Happens Every Spring," the list embraced 116 theatres and 15 dates over a four-week period. All Georgia is covered and occasionally parts of neighboring states. The per town rate is said to be a great saver of cooperative advertising costs.

The publicity consists of a story-in-stills preview in the magazine a week before the first Georgia showing and a follow-up to the regular review in the black-and-white sections of the newspaper.

The Journal advises circuits and independent theatres of the ad break and urges them to get in on its benefits by booking the picture. Copies of the ad are sent to exhibitors for blow-up lobby displays.

Other films that have benefited from the "saturation promotion" plan are "My Friend Irma," "Champion" and "I Married a Communist." Among its endorsers is President J. H. Thompson of the MPTOA of Georgia, who credits it with improving grosses 30 to 35 per cent.

'Foxes' N.Y. Bow To Aid Hospitals

The New York premiere of 20th Century-Fox's "The Prince of Foxes" on Dec. 22 at the Roxy Theatre will be held under the auspices of the United Hospital Fund, it was announced this week by Roy E. Larsen, president of the Fund. All proceeds from the first showing, to be attended by society and civic leaders, diplomats, government officials and stage, screen and radio stars, will go toward support of New York's 86 voluntary hospital members of the United Hospital Fund, which is now conducting a campaign for $3,367,000.

Showings of the film abroad were among the most brilliant social events in 13 world capitals from Rome to Cairo. In the Italian capital members of Roman society and the diplomatic corps attended the first showing, while crowds jammed the streets in front of the Capranica Cinema where the film was shown. In Cairo, all members of the royal family, as well as the American ambassador, attended the premiere.

DeMille Interviews, Preview Start Nov. 28

Critics, amusement editors and feature writers of newspapers in New England and other important eastern cities will be in New York next week, starting Nov. 28, to preview Paramount's "Samson and Delilah" and interview its producer-director, Cecil B. DeMille.

With the exception of the New England contingent, which numbers 23, the visiting newspapermen will participate in individual interviews, with more than an hour allotted to each.

Gets an Editorial

Harry Goldsmith likes to point to the editorial he got in the Lockport, N. Y., newspaper on "Not Wanted." Summing up the unwed-mother problem dealt with in the film, the editorial concluded that "Hollywood has made a sensitive movie" and noted that it "starts tomorrow at the Palace Theatre."

Berle Comedy Bow Aids Runyon Fund

Warner Bros.' Milton Berle comedy, "Always Leave Them Laughing" was world premiered Tuesday night at the New York Strand Theatre for the benefit of the Damon Runyon Memorial Fund for Cancer Research. Berle appeared in person at the special performance as well as at all performances on Wednesday, opening day.

The comedy star also led the Macy Thanksgiving Parade on Thursday, dressed as Father Knickerbocker. This event was covered by newsreel press and radio, and Macy's took large ads in the New York papers mentioning the Berle parade appearance and crediting the picture.

"Always Leave Them Laughing" has been getting good space in all newspapers, including breaks in the Winchell and other syndicated columns. It is also being plugged on the large Bond Electric News Sign at Times Square and has been plugged heavily on several radio programs.

Pine-Thomas Off on Tour of 15 Key Cities

With New York as their first stop for conferences with home office executives, William Pine and William Thomas, Paramount producing team, were scheduled to leave Hollywood this week for a three-week tour of 15 key cities in advance of their latest production, "Captain China."

While details of the itinerary are to be set at the meeting, it is understood that Pine and Thomas plan to spend at least three months each year on an intensive tour of the field in order to obtain national publicity for their pictures and at the same time keep abreast of the changing trends in the public demand for entertainment.

AP to Syndicate Tom, Jerry Comic Strip

MGM has completed arrangements with the Associated Press for syndication nationally of a Tom & Jerry comic strip featuring the MGM Cartoon stars. The strip will make its appearance in newspapers around the first of next year, and will be launched with an extensive promotion campaign in which MGM and AP will jointly participate.

Fred C. Quimby, executive producer of MGM Cartoons, came east to close the deal with Associated Press Assistant General Manager Charles E. Honce.

New England Veterans To Aid 'G.I. Joe'

Veteran organizations throughout key New England situations have pledged their cooperation in Eagle Lion's regional "premieres" of its reissue, "The Story of G.I. Joe." The pattern to be used in New England follows closely the pre-tested campaign for engagements of the film throughout Pennsylvania and Ohio, with veterans' groups cooperating.

Star 'Personals' Paying Dividends

He was gracious, tactful and charming to all people to whom I have spoken about the occasion.

"To be frank, I should mention that several have mentioned that his visit was entirely promotional in nature. I grant that he made a valiant effort to point out the educational aspect of his trip, but the commercial aspect prevailed nevertheless. Also a few people have indicated that his visit was so far in advance of the actual showing of the film in New Orleans that people are somewhat resentful.

"In answer to your direct question about the value of the trip to the prestige of the industry, I would say that Mr. Wilcoxon has contributed to the prestige of the industry. If the two negative points mentioned above could be de-emphasized, then such a plan would work out much better."

Another comment is from Mrs. H. O. Hale of the Nebraska League of Women Voters. Mrs. Hale finds that Omaha is still impressed by Wilcoxon's lecture trip. She finds also as a result that there is an impression that "Samson" offers more than the average picture in historical and educational information and that Wilcoxon's favorable impression had not been dissipated weeks after he left Omaha.

Asked if she thought such trips as that made by Wilcoxon tend to increase the prestige of motion pictures in her community, she replied:

"I would say so. And I might add that the character of the movies offered needs to be improved. I don't mean spending more money on productions but higher caliber pictures—that is, more of the finer things of life and less of the sordid."

Hart, Russell At 'Molly X' Premiere

Climaxing more than a week of advance promotional activity by Dorothy Hart and John Russell, its stars, Universal-International's "The Story of Molly X" had its world premiere at the RKO Palace Theatre in Cleveland last Thursday (17).

It was a "homecoming" for Miss Hart, who is a native of Cleveland, and there was a round of civic events to honor her. Premiere day was Dorothy Hart Day by proclamation of Mayor Thomas A. Burke.

During her stay in town Miss Hart was interviewed by the newspapers and made numerous radio appearances. She participated in a class reunion at the Shaker High School where she was once a student. She was one of the guests of honor at the Page One Ball of the Cleveland Newspaper Guild, being welcomed by Ohio Governor Frank J. Lausche. And she was a featured guest at the Shaker High School-Lakewood High School and the Cleveland Browne-Buffalo Bills football games.

Both Miss Hart and Russell visited the nearby Veterans Hospitals.

18 Hollywood Stations Plug 'Battleground'

Eighteen Hollywood stations will plug the opening of MGM's "Battleground" at the Egyptian Theatre on Dec. 1 with 300 announcements up until opening day.

Confessions of An Advance Man

"I Boosted the B.O. 'Take' With Action As My Keynote"

By E. M. MILBURN
United Artists Representative

The other day I wrote Julia "Dudzie" Smith, manager of the State Theatre, Waterbury, Conn., congratulating her on her 25th anniversary as the first woman manager of a theatre in Connecticut. In her reply she wrote, in part:

" . . . it seems only yesterday we 'got together' on the picture, 'A Star Is Born' . . . and we did put it over . . . most of the young newcomers are disappointing when it comes to getting action . . . take it from one who knows."

That word "action" intrigued me. I got to thinking: a banker gets action in his business, a farmer in his planting and a woman in her home. Then I wondered just how many people realize the action required to make a picture click at the box-office. How much action had I accomplished in the motion picture field?

Large Clock Sign

Let's go back several years to the opening of "A Star Is Born" in Waterbury, Conn. On my arrival ten days in advance of playdate I contacted the Waterbury Clock Co. and, with their cooperation, erected a large sign consisting of clocks showing the correct time in different time zones of the world. This was suspended under the theatre marquee. A "Beautiful Baby" contest was run in one of the daily papers. Both of these stunts helped to get box-office action.

In other communities I specialized in private screenings several days in advance of the opening of "Rebecca," inviting a selected audience to see the picture. That got action—the "word-of-mouth" comment that benefits the box-office.

Insured the Film

While working on exploitation for "Hurricane" at some theatres I insured the film for $100,000 against a hurricane ruining the print during its run, and also flew above marquees U. S. Government Storm Signal flags.

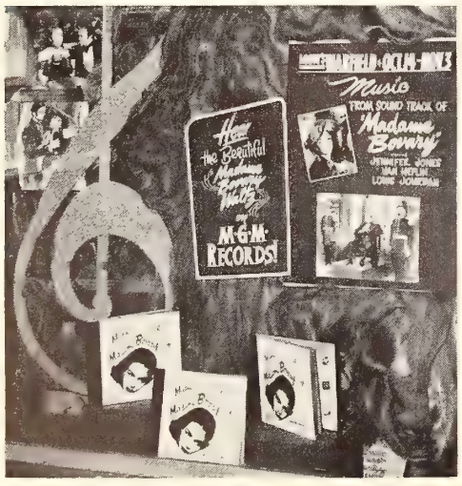
On my travels ahead of "Stagecoach" I obtained old stagecoaches to parade the streets and greet the mayors of the towns I visited. In Springfield, Ill., I managed to obtain a miniature stagecoach which was drawn through the streets by six Shetland ponies. That got plenty of action.

When "The Outlaw" opened in several situations the crowds were so large that the theatres were unable to seat all the patrons. This resulted from campaigns in which elaborate western parades were arranged, bathing suits signed "Jane Russell" given to winners in national contests, and theatre parties given for crippled soldiers.

Two One-Dollar Bills for One

Before the opening of "Strange Woman" I placed on the streets and in department stores women dressed a la Lamarr offering to exchange two one-dollars for only one dollar to anyone who would accept the offer. Full-page perfume advertisements also helped get action.

New jeeps were placed on the streets in advance of "Carnegie Hall" with 12-foot signs over the tops reading "Official Car—Carnegie Hall." A national voice contest was also part of the exploitation program.



A local man made up to resemble Groucho Marx rode a trick white mule through the business section for "Love Happy." He was interviewed for broadcasts in front of the theatre for several days in advance.

Stunts Paid Off

As advance man for "Champion" I arranged long-distance telephone calls between Kirk Douglas and local newspaper critics. Bannered Studebaker Champion automobiles were on the streets ahead of playdate.

Over a thousand lines of cooperative advertising appeared in the newspapers of one city alone on "Black Magic." Hypnotist Howard Klein joined me on this picture and demonstrated his gift in store windows by hypnotizing people who came in off the street.

Action was the keynote of all these stunts—and they paid off. The success of an advance man necessitates close application and study, plus quick action and footwork in order to make important contacts. I work in close cooperation with the theatre manager and keep in close touch with my boss in New York. My first thought on a campaign is newspaper breaks and radio broadcasts, then ballyhoo and cooperative ads. In any case, the use of the press book is a "must."

Catholic Group Sponsors 'M. Vincent' for LaFarr

The possibilities of the French prize-winner "Monsieur Vincent" were demonstrated in Ogsdensburg, N. Y., by Jim LaFarr of the Pontiac, who worked hard on the Catholic appeal of the film. The pastor of the French Church proved enthusiastic, promising to contact all other priests and nuns in the territory and urging members of his parish to see it. The church also got out a special mimeographed letter and furnished a mailing list of 500 persons. LaFarr further promoted special write-ups in the North Country Catholic, a newspaper.

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

Hard-hitting sensationalism seems to keynote the press book advertising and exploitation campaign on MGM's "Border Incident." Such punchy catchlines as "Astounding Drama!" and "Bold! Breath-Taking" are in nearly every ad, and there are such other eye-catchers as "Dramatic Thunderbolt Strikes!" and "Exposed!" The Angry Uncensored Story!" Exploitation angles are designed to appeal to action lovers. Incidentally, the press book has been revised, and exhibitors are advised to destroy the earlier campaign manual issued on the picture.

Warners' press book on "Always Leave Them Laughing" is designed, in its ad and exploitation sections, to start them laughing. The catchlines in the ads are, in many instances, of the gag variety. For example: "Everybody Loves the Milton Berle Picture —Especially Mrs. Berle, N. Y. Daily Berle, Sat. Eve. Berle." Again: "Hey, Warner Bros. What Have You Done to Me? All My Best Gags! You Made Me Steal 'Em for My Own Picture." Needless, to say, Berle is outstanding in every ad layout, but there's also plenty of appeal in the bathing suit illustrations (in most cases) of his co-star, Virginia Mayo. In the exploitation department there's a gag caption contest, another contest for the best gag-lines, wanted posters, laugh-provoking lobby displays, etc. And there are also tieup stills and national tieups.

Having received much critical acclaim, "The Heiress" gets lots of review quotes in the Paramount press book—three pages of 'em. They're from New York critics, syndicated columnist, national magazines, film personalities, trade press, fan magazines and a stage star. Exhibitors would do well to sprinkle these quotes liberally in their advertising. "Greatness" is in large type in practically every ad layout, and one of the chief illustrations is that of a man pounding on a door—the dramatic climax of the picture. The stars and director are featured in an arresting series of teasers, while large "love scene" illustrations of Olivia de Havilland and Montgomery Clift may be found in other ads to excite feminine interest. There is a wide variety of layouts to fit the needs of any situation.

SWELL 'KISS' STUNT. I.M.P.S. Member Ralph G. Tiede, manager of the Palace Theatre, London, Ontario, had a humdinger on Warners' "Kiss in the Dark." Tiede promoted a mannequin and some candy kisses, then arranged the setup shown above. Patrons thought it was a live girl behind the curtain, and local wolves sheepishly took a candy kiss after pulling back the curtain. This ought to be good on other "Kiss" pictures, too.

I.M.P.S. Member Report

Barrel of Keys for 'Secret Garden'

A clever key stunt was put across to far above normal publicity results by I.M.P.S. Member Sidney H. Kleper, manager of Loew's College Theatre, New Haven, Conn., for "The Secret Garden." Having access to a "Secret Garden" hut and a barrel of keys, Kleper combined them into one promotion stunt. The hut was set up in Eli Moore's store on a main business street. Then through newspaper ads, lobby, radio and window exploitation an award of $50 in merchandise was announced to the first person who unlocked with one of the keys in the barrel the door of the Secret Garden hut, with a second prize of $25 in merchandise. Spectators crowded in front of the store window as various persons selected a key and tried to unlock the door. All expense connected with this stunt was borne by the store.

Brother Kleper utilized many other avenues of publicity. Classroom announcements were made in the city's 43 public and six parochial schools, plus 5,000 heralds distributed through the school system. Displays were made in public and lending libraries, including the distribution of 2,000 bookmarks in the public libraries. A coloring contest was run in the Corriere Del Connecticut; 5,000 shopping, shoe and hosiery bags with credit imprint were given out; die-cut arrows—"This way to the Secret Garden"—were posted; die-cut keys were hung on auto handles; streamers on Secret Garden soda were posted at various fountains; 100 hats for newsboys were imprinted; flowers were promoted for the first 100 women attending. There were Margaret O'Brien merchandising tieups; radio and newspaper publicity; three window and counter displays on children's clothing.

A thorough and result-getting campaign in which Manager Kleper had the help of Assistant Ray Flynn and staff members Jack Brassil and George Perlroth. An STR salute to the quartet.

Cool 'Key Largo' Angle Beats British Heat Wave

The Florida keys are usually swept by sea breezes even on hot days, and Manager A. A. Owen of the Prince of Wales Cinema, Lewisham, England, seized upon the "coolness and the "key" in the title, "Key Largo," as a means of beating the heat wave that plagued British theatres and moviegoers throughout the summer. He tied up with a store specializing in cool clothing. Special art cards were provided for a window display, bearing such legends as "The key to coolness is in these clothes. The key to excitement that will freeze you in your seat is 'Key Largo' at . . ." (etc.) Star photos, stills and posters of "Key Largo" were used plentifully in the window display.

Stevens, Jessel Tour Neighborhood Theatres

Mark Stevens, star of "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" and "Dancing in the Dark," the latter due Dec. 2 at the Roxy, and Producer George Jessel, who produced both Technicolor musicals, made a 35-theatre personal appearance tour of New York metropolitan neighborhood mavie houses on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. The producer and star visited the Skouras, RKO, Randforce, Century and Joelson circuits, including the newly-built Century Meadows Theatre in Fresh Meadows, L. I. Two appearances were made at the Roxy.

YOU SHOULD BE ABLE TO DO THIS, TOO. With the cooperation of the Chadwick Studio, a local dancing school, Georgia Theatres City Manager P. E. McCoy, in Augusta, Ga., borrowed six student ballet dancers to serve as hostesses at the Imperial during the engagement of Eagle Lion's "The Red Shoes." Naturally this created interest in the picture among their parents and classmates, and the good word spread from there. If you're playing this picture soon, why don't you make the same kind of arrangement with the dancing school in your town?

If the question arises whether pictures that might be termed "class" fare—those that play in the so-called art houses of the larger cities—have any place in smaller cities, harken to the experience of "The Red Shoes" in Augusta, Ga. When the Imperial in that community of 60,000 scheduled the British ballet film, City Manager P. E. McCoy of the Georgia Theatre Co. gave it the strong campaign that "different" films may require and that this one merited.

He didn't miss the special screening angle that works so well with high quality films. Representatives of radio stations, newspapers, civic clubs, dancing and music studios and shops—in short, those who could put the public on the scent of what they want, a good film—saw "The Red Shoes" two weeks in advance of playdate. The results: numerous favorable radio comments, newspaper features using art, a highly favorable editorial in one paper and repeated impressive reviews in the Chronicle and the Herald.

McCoy also used a nice variation of this oldie. Having tended to the opinion makers he had another advance showing for ordinary guys—in this case the ever popular and often copy-worthy newsboys and their mothers.

Tie-ins may come more easily after these screenings. Impressive tie-ins there were, at any rate, often with ticket tidbits to bait the reluctant customer. Radio station WRDW interviewed several times daily during the engagement a "Miss Augusta Red Shoes," who announced where she would be to grant passes to those who could answer certain questions about WRDW shows. A shoe store offered a $54 pair of ballet slippers for the best "Why I liked the picture" letter. A dance studio mailed out announcements and sent students in ballet attire to act as opening night hostesses. A department store gave two tickets with each $12 "Red Shoes" compact and a drug store featured a "Red Shoes" sundae and window and store displays. More tickets were awarded by a mystery man who dropped by occasionally to favor the sundae eaters.

Letters offering a limited number of discount admissions were sent out to industrial and civic groups and 5,000 postcards were mailed to leading citizens of surrounding communities. The theatre itself was not to be neglected, of course, and a large front with an eye-arresting red background was erected.

What was the experience of this "class" film in a smaller city—at advanced prices, note you? Due to his strong campaign, business was very good, says McCoy, and many letters were received commending the management for bringing such an attraction to town. Looking ahead, moreover, he feels certain that the efforts in selling the picture at advanced prices will pay dividends when it is released at popular prices.

Money Dates for December

Unless the coal and steel and other strikes are settled (let's hope they are by the time these words appear in print), the traditional two-week pre-Christmas slump may slump even lower in many situations. Add unemployment to the economic picture and prospects appear even worse. But don't despair. Smart showmanship has survived such conditions in the past, and it will continue to do so. Experienced theatremen who have found by trial and error through the years that losses can be considerably reduced by utilizing activities tieing-in with the Christmas season, should redouble their efforts to bring patrons into their theatres. And those who are more or less new to the game will find this year's pre-Christmas period a fitting time to initiate themselves into the activities that keep grosses above water. Many of the ideas below will help.

DEC. 7—PEARL HARBOR ATTACKED, 1941. Contact any service men's defense organizations and suggest they observe the occasion in some manner. Offer use of theatre, if desired by them, and collaborate in every way possible.

DEC. 12—MARCONI's FIRST SIGNAL across the Atlantic in 1901—the birth of wireless, now called radio. If obtainable, display in lobby early models of radio sending apparatus plus a present one. For school essay contest: Great inventors and discoverers in radio, including radar; on Marconi and his inventions. Small radios might be promoted for leading prizes.

DEC. 12—WASHINGTON MADE FIRST SEAT OF GOVERNMENT in 1800. Try for a newspaper-school history class contest on how the capital's site happened to be chosen, and Jefferson's part in it, or on why there is agitation at present for changing the capital site to a more central location, and the reasons advanced for such a change.

DEC. 15—BILL OF RIGHTS DAY, first enforced in 1791. Have a copy of the bill printed in large type and display it in the lobby, and ask libraries and book stores to display copies of it. Get a prominent citizen to talk briefly on the bill and what it means to our democracy; newspapers would devote space to such a speech. Seek cooperation from a local radio station, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Parent-Teacher Ass'n, school heads and women's clubs.

DEC. 16—BOSTON TEA PARTY, 1783. Promote tea from a dealer and give a tea party at the theatre, with prizes for patrons having the best Indian get-ups. As a variant of this hold a kid Indian costume contest, with promoted prizes. A school history class essay contest on the causes leading up to the party is worth trying for; newspapers and radio stations wou'd cooperate, and writers might earn school credits.

DEC. 17—WILBUR WRIGHT'S FIRST FLIGHT, 1903 (which is also American Aviation Day). Newspaper-school essay contest on 46 years' development in flying; on the development in the various types of airplanes, including jet planes and fighters; a drawing contest of Wright's Kitty Hawk airplane and/or a giant modern one. Sponsor a toy plane-making contest and display the entries in the lobby with promoted building tools as the prizes. Contact airplane training schools, airports and travel bureaus for some observance of the day, and to cooperate in the model plane contest. If there is a nearby airport, arrange for a plane to drop heralds, some containing theatre passes, over the city.

DEC. 25—CHRISTMAS DAY—Christmas presents have been opened. Christmas dinners eaten, and school children on holiday will want some place to go. Make that place the theatre by offering a comedy and cartoons—anything to make patrons relax and enjoy themselves and forget the holiday tax on the wallet.

DECORATIONS: Give marquee, lobby, interior and light fixtures a festive appearance with festoons, holly wreaths, pines. If a large bell is obtainable, place it in lobby, have it rung, not tolled, at intervals. Erect an imitation fireplace in lobby with cutout Santa Claus stuffing stockings with gifts (or a live "Santa," if preferred). Another attention-getter from kids: a miniature house with Santa climbing down the chimney—or with Santa and his reindeers on the roof. Place lighted and decorated Christmas tree in lobby, with theatre's card of greeting to patrons.

MUSIC: Music furnishes a large part of the seasonal jollity. Hold a Christmas carol party with singers from choral societies, schools, churches; promote prizes. Get loan of a phonograph and records from dealer and give morning concerts in lobby, using carols and Christmas songs and music. If there's any sort of community service offer use of theatre in mornings, with Christmas and religious songs.

SPECIAL SHOWS: Give them during the week before Christmas. A free show for kids with Santa Claus distributing promoted gifts will earn theatre goodwill and probably new patrons. Offer special rates for theatre parties from commercial and other establishments; many business, fraternal and civic concerns sponsor such parties as Christmas gifts to their employes. If there are a number of such parties stagger them on different days. For a mid-week children's matinee hold a Santa Claus contest and promote prizes for the youngsters having the best costumes.

CHARITY: Pass on some of the seasonal good feeling to inmates of orphanages, homes for the aged and for shut-ins by giving one or more free shows for them, promoting transportation in return for credits. Press and radio will publicize it. Set aside one performance when all those bringing gifts for charity are admitted free (limit it to kids, if desired); get mothers' clubs, fraternal and religious organizations to cooperate and designate the charities to benefit. Garments might be sent to schools to be given to needy pupils. Volunteer to help in any charity drive, especially in the collections of baskets of food and clothing for the underprivileged.

MERCHANTS: Merchants are desirous of pushing their holiday sales. Tie up with them by giving them tickets at reduced rate to be given to their customers who buy goods to a specified amount, with the merchants advertising the theatre's features and holiday activities. Make use of the promoted lobby Christmas tree by promoting gifts from the merchants to be hung on the tree and given to children. Give a midnight show for last-minute Christmas shoppers provided enough merchants will cooperate. A Santa Claus workshop in the lobby has been found valuable by various theatres; get merchants to underwrite such a shop and give the services of an employe to impersonate Santa Claus making or mending toys. Have peep holes through which children can watch, or give an air of mystery by covering the peep-holes with special reducing lenses. Promote from dealer or restaurateur a perfect dinner table, with phony but realistic food, to be set up in the lobby; place cards might bear the names of the players in the current feature film. Hold giveaway night of live poultry for Christmas dinner, with dealers donating the fowls. Promote a bang-up restaurant dinner for the winner of some contest—the fattest man, the man with most children or anything else that occurs to the mind.

SERVICE: As a community service and goodwill builder offer the public free checking service for their holiday purchases. Advertise it with cards and in newspaper ads. Arrange to sell postage stamps in lobby—the post offices always being jammed just before Christmas. Advertise the Christmas programs of churches, fraternal and other organizations (with theatre's program included in any calendar of events); organizations should help defray the cost. Giving away Christmas wreaths in lobby has been found a swell way to make friends. Use Christmas seals; sell them in lobby. Insist on courtesy and kindness on the part of all theatre personnel.

HELP SANTA: Post a Santa Claus in the lobby to listen to the kids' requests for specific gifts, and then phone the requests to the parents; or, have kids phone from a booth in the lobby with a staff member as Santa Claus at the other end of the wire who later gets in touch with parents. Be sure to get names and addresses. Try the letter-to-Santa Claus stunt in cooperation with a newspaper.

MISCELLANEOUS: Invite persons born on Dec. 25 as theatre's guests. A toy electric train in lobby will draw in the kids. Use advance trailer urging patrons to shop and mail early. Tie up with Western Union, in return for theatre credits on telegram blanks, urging the public to wire their Christmas greetings. Hold fashion shows, auction nights for charity; sell blocks of tickets at special rates for Christmas gifts.

DEC. 31—NEW YEAR'S EVE. People are out for a good time and business should be of a nature to warrant a midnight show, picking a broad comedy as the feature. At close of show have patrons sing Auld Lang Syne. Have an old man with long white beard and an appropriately garbed child to represent the old and the new year, with the child reciting some new year resolutions—one of them to see the good pictures booked for the theatre. The manager, in person or off stage as a voice, should pronounce theatre's resolution to book the best pictures obtainable. Print a card of new year's resolutions, including that of theatre manager to book the best pictures he can get for the coming year.

20th-Fox's 'Doll for Every Orphan' Tieup

A tieup designed to "put a doll in the arms of every orphan" for Christmas has been entered into by the New York Journal-American, R. H. Macy & Company and 20th Century-Fox, with distribution of the dolls, donated by the city's children, being made through the Welfare Department. This promotional activity for "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" is an appeal to children to help spread Christmas cheer to underprivileged children. The first 5,000 to take their dolls to the collection depots—the Roxy Theatre, the 66 Skouras theatres and the five Macy stores in the metropolitan area—will be given passes to attend one of two special showings of "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" at the Roxy Theatre.

The doll-collecting stunt is being publicized by the Journal-American in its pages and on its trucks, in Macy's advertising and store displays and by lobby cards in all participating theatres. The dolls will be picked up at the collection points by 20th-Fox and the judges will make their selections on Dec. 16, when the contest ends, before turning the dolls over to the Welfare department for distribution.

Three grand prizes for the "Most Beautiful Dolls" will be "Toni" or "Baby Coo" dolls, doll dresses, sets of dishes, etc., and permission to select any item in Macy's toy department. Merchandise donated by Macy's and the Ideal Toy and Novelty Company will be awarded to runners-up.

Multiple-Star P.A.s For 'Johnny One-Eye'

Multiple-star personal appearances in various parts of the country will be made by Pat O'Brien, Wayne Morris, Dolores Moran and six-year-old Gayle Reed, stars of United Artists' Benedict Bogeaus production of Damon Runyon's "Johnny One-Eye," in national publicity promotion for the picture.

Miss Moran will open her tour in New York on Dec. 10, with interviews, radio and television appearances; O'Brien's itinerary will include San Francisco, the midwest, Boston and New England, while Morris will cover the southwest and Gayle Reed the south, starting in her home city, Atlanta, where city officials are expected to proclaim a special Gayle Reed Day for its baby star.

Chain-Break Gimmick Effective on 'Pinky'

For the opening of "Pinky" at the Fox Theatre in San Francisco, the local 20th Century-Fox exploitation representatives followed the radio chain-break gimmick employed in New York, Boston and Los Angeles with good results.

The policy is to purchase as many spot announcements from all stations as possible, proclaiming: "Due to the unprecedented demand for seats, 'Pinky' will start at 8:30 A.M. at the Fox Theatre."—SF.

Rural Rouser

Programs fully paid for by merchant advertising are being used by Schine's Bud Sommers to bring in the rural trade around Richmond, Ky., to the Madison and State theatres. Sommers did not overlook freshman registration week at Eastern Kentucky State College, tossing out a "Welcome Class of '53" in a box in a recent program.

Theatre Management

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Pointers on Projection and Sound

Keeping screen curtains closed at all times except when the picture is actually being shown will help prolong the life of the screen by protecting it against dust. It is especially important to keep the curtains closed at night when the theatre is being cleaned and dust is stirred up into the air.

Managers, who may be compelled to entrust their show to strange projectionists without warning when the regular projectionists are away because of sickness or any other reason, should authorize and insist on neat and systematic arrangement of every detail of the projection suite. The strange relief men will be able to do a better job if all switches are properly marked, all fuses kept near points where they may be needed, spare parts stocked neatly and in logical order, all special operating procedures that may be needed indicated on the bulletin board, etc. If the projection room is not in such shape, whatever time is needed to get it and keep it in such condition should be authorized.

The slight dust raised by walking on concrete floors is highly abrasive and bad for the life of motion picture equipment. Projection room floors should be kept covered —with linoleum if local codes permit; if not, then with paint renewed promptly as often as it shows signs of wearing away.

Managers can help their projectionists do a better job by providing cue markers. The projectionist can't deliver a good show if the cue marks are missing; he has only the choice between making sloppy changeovers or else putting on hand-made cue marks that will be glaringly visible every time that reel is run again. Cue-markers put Hollywood-type cues on the film. They are extremely inexpensive and last indefinitely.

The patron pays you for the temporary use of one of your auditorium chairs; and you don't like the patron whose carelessness leaves the chair unfit for the next user. You pay the exchange for the temporary use of their film. Does your carelessness about the condition of your booth machinery leave that film unfit for the next user?

Projection machinery must make some noise and projectionists must communicate with each other, but it is not necessary to annoy balcony patrons. Glassing in projection room ports is a standard procedure.

In making repairs on electrical equipment, mistakes are avoided by tagging every wire before disconnecting it. Small price tags can be used, or bits of court plaster. It is especially important to "waste" time doing this when the repair is an emergency, made under pressure, because that is just when mistakes happen.

Phonevision and Theatre Protection

With television talk creating mixed feelings of awe and fear in theatremen, and the question rife in all quarters "What do you think of television? Will it help or hurt?", I turn back the pages of my memory book some 8 years to a dismal fall evening.

Jack Barry, former personnel director of Paramount Publix, and the writer were standing at the corner of 43rd and Broadway talking television. It had begun to sleet a bit and that blond girl who tells me what to eat and where to buy it was trying to protect the trimmings of a new sky-piece. She was pretty disgusted with a couple of guys who could ignore the ice shavings, to say nothing of the prospects of damage to the new fall bonnet, and before either of us could ask for "just another minute" she had stalked down the street leaving us to solve the problem of air pictures and what they presaged for the motion picture industry.

Si Fabian's remarks about his experiences with the television baby at his Fox in Brooklyn during the recent Arkansas-Tennessee-Mississippi M.P.T.O. Convention in Memphis set my personal TV tubes to perking and I began digging for some dope sent me a few weeks ago from Chicago. It was a page from the Chicago Daily News of Sept. 29 that brought back the vision of Barry and I in the sleet, because it appears that Zenith is doing with its new child, Phonevision, exactly what Barry expounded as being the kind of protection theatres would need when and if the staggering air images ever got settled to the point where a teetotaler could watch 'em without thinking someone had spiked his water with gin.

Theatres Would Be First to Tie-in With Telephone Company

Barry predicted that theatres would be first to make arrangements with the telephone company or in some manner manage the broadcasting of films playing their establishments to the homes of set owners in return for some stipulated fee that would assure added revenue in the cash till. He drew me a verbal picture of a theatre-operated switchboard to which Jim Jones, who owned a TV set, would call in and request the time of showings, make arrangements for his set to be tuned to the picture being exhibited at a certain time, and pay the bill when presented.

As Barry saw it, there existed two methods by which the theatre could protect itself. Either the telephone company would set up a system for handling the picture through their lines or the theatre could arrange for a particular wave length subject to use only at the discretion of the management. The set owners would either have to arrange for credit, pay in advance or accept the charge when presented on their monthly phone bill, according to the method adopted. Of course neither Barry, nor anybody else, for that matter, ever considered the idea that producers who made their fortunes in theatre exhibition, and personalities who owed all of whatever fame or acclaim they possessed to theatre exhibitors, would ever leave the fold and take to their breast a competitive form of entertainment.

As the Chicago report has it, President E. F. McDonald of Zenith is doing exactly what Barry predicted. The only difference is that theatre owners have no place in his scheme of things. It is claimed that some 300 sets will be tested in the Chicago area early next year; that the Federal Communications Commission, whose approval is essential before the plan can be set in operation, is looking with favor on the proposed practice; that Hollywood producers are enthusiastic over the idea and promise complete cooperation, and that the telephone wires will be used for transmission at fees ranging from 75 cents to $1 per attraction. As in Barry's scheme, all the set owner has to do is call the telephone operator who will send the picture impulses over the wire and tab up the bill for presentation at the regular period.

According to the reports, a special channel is being set aside for use by the Zenith Company. This is to preclude "theft" of the exhibition by set owners who fail to "lay it on the line." It is said that there will be no exact privacy to the Zenith broadcast, but that set owners not making arrangements with the phone company will get pretty dizzy watching the distorted "bootleg" images. Kinda like reading the funnies while sitting in a Mexican saddle chasing cows. The only way the distortion can be removed is by calling the phone company and agreeing to "ante up" for the privilege. The article goes on to mention another possible method

COAST TO COAST: Must be the holiday spirit in the air or something but theatres this week were rolling up their sleeves and getting ready to show their appreciation for one thing or another to their respective communities. Over in Bridgeport, Ill., the Frisina Capitol had gotten under the wire slightly with an "Appreciation Night," held by Manager Glen Dale earlier in the week, while at Ferguson, Mo., the Fred Wehrenberg Savoy was instituting a Youth Cinema Club, which brings the total of these units up to 13 in the St. Louis Area. . . . And out in Salt Lake City, that live go-getting "Uncle Charlie" Pincus is planning a 29th birthday party with cake for the Intermountain Utah with Dec. 4, date upon which the house first opened, set for the event.

Quite a party—the Fourth Annual St. Louis Week dinner held this past week with Spyros Skouras as guest speaker who told the hearers that if they "lose the children, you will lose other patrons" and urged them to work for the kid trade. . . . The Frisina Roxy at Springfield is getting a face-lifting job which will increase capacity from 1,000 to 1,500 seats. Burglars were active again this week, this time getting $318 from the cash box of the New Lake at Rib Lake, Wis. and the weekend receipts from Eddie Brumler's Metropole at Chicago. . . . The Alhambra at Campbellsville, Ky., has joined the Kentucky Association of Theatre Owners. . . . The Dixie, Negro house at Louisville, Ky., is planning to reopen after a two-year sleep. . . . When Loew's takes over the Warfield in San Francisco Dec. 1 the house will drop duals for singles, Manager Boyd T. Sparrow says. . . . Mary Hennessey, who used to write publicity for Fox West Coast will take over as the house's press agent. Vancouver got its March of Dimes' drive going at the Capitol on Nov. 24. . . . Those old jalopy nights at the Alliance State in Chicago are proving quite a draw, almost as good as the Old Timers night which features square dances and barbershop quartets from the stages of several Windy City houses. . . . Ottawa got its first look at television last week when the Famous Players mobile unit put on a show.

MANAGEMENT: Eugene Hedge is the new manager of the Varsity, Carbondale, Pa., succeeding John Nolan who quit to work in St. Louis. . . . Jack Lightness has been named manager of the Orpheum, Terre Haute, Ind.; Robert Trublood is the new chief at the Alliance Mars, Chicago. . . . Loew's Cleveland Division Manager Orville Crouch has been shifted to Washington to replace Carter Barron on leave to help Pres. Truman on the Columbia Sesquicentennial Celebration. . . . Loew City Manager Frank Murphy has been subbing for Barron to date. Edward Selette, formerly of Warner and E. M. Loew's theatres, has joined Walter Reade as Manager of the Perth Amboy, N. J., Strand. . . . Ben Rivers has resigned as manager of the Lackhart, Fla., Ri-Mar Drive-in with Jack Martin succeeding.

OPENINGS: The Glenn at Joplin, Mo., the Lakeside at Oklahoma City, Maurice Easterling's 627-seat, complete with special lamp-approached booths for cripples, at Mexia, Texas.

Century has opened its new 2200-seat Fresh Meadows Theatre in the Queens area of New York with Charles J. Call, manager.

CLASS AND COMFORT keynote the Academia, new $125,000 71-seat screening room erected as an annex to the Motion Picture Association of America's Washington, D. C., headquarters. Attending the opening Tuesday night were President and Mrs. Truman, cabinet officers, industry chiefs and Harold Wilson, president of the British Board of Trade.

Theatre Newspaper Covers 3 Counties

Down in North Carolina the operators of the Spartan Theatre, Sparta; Pastime, Boone; Appalachian, Boone, and Parkway, West Jefferson, are doing a swell job with their three-county newspaper which they call "Tri-County Theatre News."

It's fashioned like a tabloid and contains not only news and pictures of current and coming attractions but also an institutional column, other interesting items and merchant advertising.

The paper carries two slogans, "Boost Your Home Town Merchants" and "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Year 'Round Entertainment."

Contest Being Conducted

Currently a contest is being conducted for the best conclusion, in 25 words or less, to this statement: "You can't beat motion pictures for your best year 'round entertainment because . . . " (Bet the winning answers would make swell advertising copy.) Anyway, contestants are to submit entries to their favorite theatre, and the winner in each case wins a pass to that theatre.

Incidentally, the manager of the Spartan is R. C. Houser; of the Pastime, Russell Swift; of the Appalachian, J. W. Beach; and of the Parkway, J. V. Caudill, Jr.

TOYS FOR NEEDY. With the cooperation of the local Lions Club and the Fire Department, I.M.P.S. Member Dick Peffley held a free children's show recently at the Paramount Theatre, Fremont, O. Children brought new or used toys which were turned over to the Fire Department for repairs and Christmastime distribution to underprivileged children. Newspaper stories were plentiful, and ads were promoted from local manufacturers. That's Manager Peffley (left) with the mountain of toys received from the youngsters who attended.

'Million Dollar Days'

Theatre managers cooperated with Salt Lake City merchants during the recent inauguration of "Million Dollar Days," arranged as the greatest sales effort in the city's history. The special event went over so well that it is now planned to take place annually. During the two-day sales theatres, department stores, restaurants, etc., reduced their prices.

of removing the distortion, but that requires an investment of approximately $17,000, so let's not go into it.

The disturbing angle, from a theatreman's viewpoint, is that Zenith promises "the newest pictures" and declares: "The movie producers are enthusiastic over the possibilities of Phonevision and are cooperating with the tests." That part ain't so good, because the possibility looms that there will be loud and raucous calls to Uncle Sam for clearance edicts if the films to be shown are the same that appear on the regular releasing schedules of distribution companies. And, unless some producer has gone completely nuts, it seems unlikely that any other kind of feature film attraction will be available for Phonevision use.

If and when Phonevision gets under way—and the news report indicates a practical cinch—theatre attendance is certain to be affected. Zenith plans the movie to be a supplement to the free advertiser-sponsored entertainment of television. It contemplates having a station show three or four movies a week via Phonevision in addition to its regular schedule of sponsored shows. The revenue dollar is to be split between the producer, the station and the phone company, with the Hollywood end staked at a full 50 per cent. While there is the possibility that stage productions and the larger sporting events will be similarly broadcast, all tests to date have been made and are being made with feature films.

From another source I gather that Zenith has formed a special subsidiary to handle Phonevision, to be known as Theatrical Enterprises Corp., with capitalization of $1 million. The venture is described as "the cornerstone of a national theatre," so far as Broadway plays are concerned, and declared as holding potential for the cure of artistic and economic headaches of producers and investors. These latter are growing pretty scarce around the big stem, the cost of "angeling" a Broadway show having gone up some 400 per cent since prewar years.

The possible added revenue from Phonevision would be mighty welcome in legit circles where any added business does not materially affect the revenue of the few houses engaged in presenting "live" talent. But the owner of the movie house is in an entirely different situation. Just about every picture theatre in the land is hard pressed to garner sufficient patronage to chalk black figures consistently on the profit-and-loss statement. If any new megig come along that promises to lift a chunk of current patronage, it must be viewed as an enemy and treated as such.

Certainly this Phonevision could not have grown to proportions warranting an 8-column banner in the Chicago Daily News without some of the upper-bracket authorities of the motion picture industry being aware of its plans for the presentation of feature film attractions. And, such being the case, it is equally certain that those in the know should take steps to protect any and all existing theatres from the threatened competition. If they haven't done so to date, it's high time they got busy.

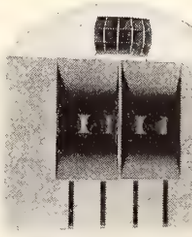
Television, as pointed out in this column several months ago, holds promise of being anything other than a boon to theatres. As we wrote at that time, there exists great need of establishing some protection to prevent the televising of Hollywood attractions that will be in competition with theatre exhibitions. At the time this writer talked with the program arrangers of several TV broadcasting stations, it was determined that an average of 70 reels each week would be needed to augment the existing array of "live" talent. This was more than a year ago. That the need for movies has risen to keep pace with the increase in TV stations must be conceded.

In response to the article mentioned I received a couple of rather lame excuses and some information as to the barricades existing against the enforcement of any workable "taboo" against the ether photos. These included the bromide about copyrights having been sold without TV protection, etc. Since then, I've learned from actors taking part in such pictures as are being and have been shown on TV that the Guild is taking steps to secure payment for services from TV stations using the films.

If these steps are successful, it is certainly possible to prevail on actors to forbid the use of films in which they appear over TV. I know that it seems like a difficult way to poison the cat, but when an outfit with a million dollars behind it and already possessing favor with the powers-that-be declares its intention of raiding your private customer barrel, it's time to grab any and every weapon in sight to keep him at a distance. Of course, it's still possible to give the producers who happen to be currying favor with Phonevision their choice between the new gadget and the established theatre as an outlet for their artistic effort.

Television, even in its present imperfect state, is an imposing competitor of theatres. If we are gullible enough to fall for that smooth line about it being a new source of scouting the world for movie talent, that it offers us the opportunity of getting our trailers into the very homes of a new field of prospective patrons, we're downright silly. Television is talking pictures being shown "for free" in competition with theatres charging admission. It must be viewed as such.

If it intends to scout the world for talent to appear in movies, let it keep hands off the talent that movies—supported by the many advertising dollars of theatre owners everywhere—have built to proportions that magnetize box-offices. It just makes sense that no thinking person will pay for the privilege of witnessing in a theatre that which can be seen without charge in the privacy of his own parlor.



If the Hollywood producers declared by McDonald as being "enthusiastic over the prospects of Phonevision" are sincere, why shouldn't the distributors insist that such films as they make for Phonevision be forever withheld from theatre release?

Phonevision must have merit or it couldn't attract a million dollars. Let's wish it every success. But not the kind of success that will scratch shingles off the roofs of theatres. As a newcomer it deserves every opportunity but should be willing to pay its own way through the expensive fields of experiment and not ride the prize horse or horses of a competitor who has, and is, footing all the bills.

Organ Programs Draw

When the Capitol Theatre in Salt Lake City was remodeled recently, Organist Gus Farney was heard at the 1,200-pipe Wurlitzer on the opening program. Since then, to bring in added business, Manager Nevin McCord occasionally has Farney preside at the organ. "Community Sings" add to the popularity of these occasions.

The Ballad of Dolores

(Spanish Dialog—English Titles)

Lux Film Drama with Music 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Highly romantic plot and gay music, but nothing to take it out of the "Spanish language" category.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Better than average for Spanish-speaking audiences, with Imperio Argentina name helpful.

Cast: Imperio Argentina, Enrique Diosdado, Amadeo Novoa, Ricardo Canales, Manolito Diaz. Credits: Produced by Lux Film in Argentina. Producer, Ricardo Nunez. Director, Benito Perojo. Scenario, Francesco Madrid. From the play by Manuel Acevedo. Photography, Antonio Merayo. Music, Maestro Breton. English adaptation, Clare Catalano.

Plot: A "good" girl is seduced by a cad, repulses him later when he will not consider marriage. He spitefully writes a calumnious ballad and, trying to blackmail her, is killed by a young theological student who loves her. The student goes to prison and she, to escape her shame, roams desolately until she marries a kindly old man. She remains faithful to him when the student unexpectedly returns.

Comment: This product of the Argentine is a better-than-average entry for Spanish-speaking audiences, especially since the name of Actress Imperio Argentina carries some weight, but otherwise it can be termed a lesser Lux. In addition to a highly romantic and convoluted plot it offers a number of songs and dances, some of them by the leading lady in her gayer days. The photography is notable, as it has been in some previous Spanish-language films, and the English sub-titles are quite adequate.

Disillusion

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

C. & B. Film Dist. Drama 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Acting is good but leisurely; long plot is in need of cutting.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A possibility for strictly foreign houses.

Cast: Ruggero Ruggeri, Belia Starage Sainati, Enrico Clori, Germana Paoleri, Roberto Villa, Luisella Beghi, Maria Mercader, Nino Crisman, Giulio Donadio. Credits: Production director, Valentino Brosio. Director, Mario Bonnard. Scenario, Oreste Biancoli, Mario Bonnard, Akos Tolnay.

Plot: A retired baggage master in Le Havre thinks his son in Paris is studying hard to become a lawyer. The old man is disillusioned when he learns of the wastrel's heavy indebtedness to a gambler. The proud father shields the son's reputation, assumes the debts (going back to his heavy work) and sends the boy to sea. The gambler meanwhile gets his come-uppance and the son comes back from his voyage a better man.

Comment: Though the acting is good there's little stimulating in a very leisurely plot unaccountably stretched out enough for two movies. The natural end to the story of disillusionment seems to fall with the father's noble assumption of the son's debts and the latter's retreat to sea. If it were not the son's weakness but the gambler's cadishness (he's called a cad in one subtitle) that chiefly concerned the scenarists, the disillusionment background should have been sketched in briefly, if at all, so that the emphasis might fall solely on the gambler, the boy and the women they knew and through whom the former met his death. If one will be satisfied with the disillusionment part, extensive cutting should solve the problem with little difficulty. The work as the father of Ruggero Riggeri, a leading Italian stage actor, supports the superior claim of this part. The other parts, though executed well enough by Roberto Villa (the son), Enrico Clori (the villain) and others, are mere caricatures. This first release of the C. & B. Film Distributing Co. is a possibility, depending upon what is done with it, for strictly foreign houses.

Tough Assignment

Lippert Prod'ns. Drama 64 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) The general audience should find this picture swiftly paced and actionful, its subject interesting. The fights are frequent and realistic.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This is typical low-budget action fare, tailored for the second spot on a double bill. It is well up to standard in its category, and its subject, motorized cattle-rustling, offers good exploitation possibilities.

Cast: Don Barry, Marjorie Steele, Steve Brodie, Marc Lawrence, Ben Welden, Michael Whalen. Credits: Producer, Carl K. Hittleman. Director, William Beaudine. Photography, Benjamin Kline. Original story by Carl K. Hittleman. Screenplay by Milton Luban.

Plot: Investigating the bootleg beef racket, a reporter finds that the mobsters are operating from a ranch, using an airplane and stock trucks in their wholesale business. The state troopers arrive at the ranch in time to save the reporter's life and capture the crooks.

Comment: As typical low-budget action fare, slanted at the neighborhood houses and smaller communities, this film delivers very satisfactorily in its category. Good scripting and well-paced direction should make it suitable, also, for second spot billing in larger situations. The terrific shellackings taken and administered by Don Barry, as the reporter, are frequent and realistic enough to fulfill the requirements of the action houses. Marc Lawrence, Steve Brodie, and Ben Welden are sufficiently menacing in their tough guy roles. The story, which is well handled and believable throughout, offers good exploitation possibilities. The picture should give a good account of itself in the market for which it is tailored.

Whirlpool

20th-Fox Drama 97 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) With considerable suspense and a good women's angle, uneven direction keep this from being as good as it might have been.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Advance selling angles should help it spin along satisfactorily with general audiences.

Cast: Gene Tierney, Richard Conte, Jose Ferrer, Charles Bickford, Barbara O'Neil, Eduard Franz, Constance Collier, Fortunio Bonanova. Credits: Producer-Director, Otto Preminger. Screenplay, Ben Hecht and Andrew Solt. From a novel by Guy Endore. Photography, Arthur Miller. Music, Alfred Newman.

Plot: The wife of a successful young psychiatrist has a secret kleptomania through which she is manipulated by an astrologist-hypnotist into an incriminating position in a murder case while he provides for himself a nearly airtight alibi. Shortly before the killing he undergoes a serious operation. As finally revealed when he tries it again to cover up some evidence, he inured himself to the forbidding pain by self-hypnosis, left the hospital and committed the crime himself. Hemorrhage finishes him the second time out.

Comment: With two such established screen stars as Gene Tierney and Richard Conte and the well-publicized appearance of stage luminary Jose Ferrer, this picture has a good head start. Its bizarre plot, moreover, can be cleverly exploited. While considerable suspense is created, however, the direction is uneven; there are cliches and abrupt developments which may irritate the discriminating patrons drawn by the Ferrer name. He, further, cannot be said to benefit by the script, though his peculiar villainous role is an exploitable one, nor can Conte, out of his usual tough guy category as the psychiatrist. Miss Tierney, on the other hand, is perfectly cast as the wife; she looks her part, which is to say exquisite, and delivers her lines convincingly. Her difficult and central position in the plot, which involves marital fidelity as well as kleptomania and murder, gives the film a good women's angle. Charles Bickford is solid as a police lieutenant. "Whirlpool," with the impetus of its advance selling points, its suspense and its women's angle, should spin along satisfactorily even though it's less than it might have been.

Bagdad

Univ.-Int'l Adventure Drama 82 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An average-audience offering with lavish backgrounds, colorful costumes and Technicolor photography for the eye, and a musical background and songs for the ear. But there is little excitement or suspense in the story.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The title and the O'Hara and Price names, as well as the type of picture, lend themselves to exploitation that should insure better-than-average returns on initial openings.

Cast: Maureen O'Hara, Paul Christian, Vincent Price, John Sutton, Jeff Corey, Frank Puglia, David Wolfe, Fritz Leiber, Otto Waldis, Leon Belasco, Ann

Pearce. Credits: Produced by Robert Arthur. Directed by Charles Lamont. Screenplay by Robert Hardy Andrews. Story by Tamara Hovey. Photography, Russell Metty. Technicolor color consultant, Robert Brower. Miss O'Hara's songs, Frank Skinner and Jack Brooks. Musical direction, Milton Schwarzwald.

Plot: When Maureen O'Hara returns to Bagdad from England, she learns that her father, an Arab potentate, has been murdered by the Black Robes, a band of desert marauders. Believing Paul Christian to be their leader, she seeks revenge, and is aided by Vincent Price, Bagdad military governor, and John Sutton, who is the actual leader of the Black Robes working in cahoots with Price. However, she eventually learns the truth and finds happiness with Christian, but not before she nearly loses her life at the hands of Price and Sutton.

Comment: The lavish backgrounds, colorful costumes and Technicolor photography make "Bagdad" a treat for the eye, and the musical background, as well as a couple of songs sung by Maureen O'Hara, make pleasant listening. But there is little excitement or suspense in the story, which meanders along with only a bit of action now and then to relieve the tedium. Miss O'Hara is lovely to look at but she, along with Vincent Price, Paul Christian, John Sutton and Jeff Corey, is beset by stilted dialog and numerous cliches. Wherever moviegoers are not too discriminating, "Bagdad" should get by with few complaints. It's an average-audience offering that will serve to support a stronger feature in the larger situations while topping a weekend "action" program in many of the smaller communities. The title and the O'Hara and Price names, as well as the type of picture lend themselves to exploitation that should insure better-than-average returns on initial openings. Charles Lamont directed for Producer Robert Arthur.

Always Leave Them Laughing

Warner Bros. Comedy 116 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Milton Berle, of television fame, gets a chance to show his bag of tricks to movie audiences throughout the country. Here is surefire entertainment for everyone, a comedy that should be of particular interest to those who have heard about him but have never had a chance to see him entertain. And, of course, the Berle fans will want to see it, too.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The Berle name, and the quality of the production, gives this picture a selling angle that should turn it into a top box-office winner.

Cast: Milton Berle, Virginia Mayo, Ruth Roman, Bert Lahr, Alan Hale, Grace Hayes, Jerome Cowan, Lloyd Gough, Ransom Sherman, Iris Adrian, Wally Vernon. Credits: Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Screenplay by Melville Shavelson and Jack Rose. From a story by Max Shulman and Richard Mealand. Musical numbers staged and directed by LeRoy Prinz. Photography, Ernest Haller. Produced by Jerry Wald.

Plot: This is a fictionized conception of the tough struggle Milton Berle had to go through to get to the top.

Comment: Although this is not the first time Berle has appeared in motion pictures, it does mark the first time he has been given free rein to display his own particular brand of comedy. Until production of "Always Leave Them Laughing," Berle's talents were restricted to his exceptionally popular television show, which has made his name a household word to those who own television sets. Many people have heard him on the radio (where his rating has not been too high—for he should be seen as well as heard), and he has wowed 'em in night clubs and other public appearances. Now, thanks to this new comedy, the antics of the comedian will be seen by movie audiences throughout the country. And they'll like 'em, too, for this picture is surefire entertainment for everyone, a very funny comedy, a perfect vehicle for Berle's varied talents. It should be a box-office winner, since it gives millions the opportunity to see "Mr. Television," who clowns, sings, dances, goes dramatic and even romantic, all effectively. Excellent, too, are the supporting players, with Virginia Mayo lending her talents and sex appeal to the role of another entertainer, and Ruth Roman doing the romancing. Bert Lahr, who also has been long absent from the screen, does very well here, and there are a number of other fine entertainers in the cast. The whole idea of this Jerry Wald production is to take advantage of Berle's popularity and to play up him and his bag of tricks, and this is done to the hilt by the wise choice of material and a most capable cast under the skillful direction of Roy Del Ruth.

'Fame Is the Spur'

This British film, drawn from the well-known novel by Howard Spring and apparently based on the life of Ramsay MacDonald, has the quality, seriousness and controversy to be talked about. It's the story of the rise of an underprivileged boy in leftist ranks and his eventual compromise with party politics, beautifully acted by Michael Redgrave, Rosamund John and others but often crude in cinema technique. The political factor—STR's London representative (STR, Oct. 4, 1947) said it "panders to the labor government . . . making the opposition virtually villains"—may be an issue for individual showmen to consider, but art houses especially should find "Fame Is the Spur" quite a good thing. Produced by John Boulting with F. Del Giudice in charge. Released by Oxford Films and Edward L. Kingsley. 98 mins.

The Spider and the Fly

(Reviewed in London)

Rank Drama 95 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) This crisp, enthralling thriller about a cracksman released from prison to do a special job for the French secret service packs a terrific punch and should do equally well with art house and popular patron alike.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Light on star names, this is superbly acted and expertly directed. The technical excellence backed up by finely maintained suspense values should insure valuable word-of-mouth publicity.

Cast: Eric Portman, Nadia Gray, Guy Rolfe, Edward Chapman, Maurice Denham, George Cole, John Carol, and others. Credits: Original story and screenplay by Robert Westerby. Produced by Aubrey Baring. Directed by Robert Hamer. A Setton-Baring "Mayflower" production presented by J. Arthur Rank. Canadian Distribution: Eagle Lion. UK: GFD.

Plot: Eric Portman, chief of the French police, is determined to catch Guy Rolfe, expert gentleman safecracker. While he sets many traps for him, inwardly he likes him and respects his skill. In some exploits, Rolfe is aided by Nadia Gray, but when her use is finished he drops her and Portman falls in love with her. This romance is ended by Rolfe falling back on her love for him to establish an alibi. Portman later catches him and he is sent to jail for five years. World War I breaks out and in 1916, when a secret dossier of French traitors, known to be in the safe of the German legation in Berne, is desperately wanted, Portman, now in intelligence, suggests Rolfe for the job. In return, he demands his pardon and with Portman's aid he gets the information only to discover that Nadia is on the list. Completely crushed, Rolfe joins the French army as a private and gets sent to the battlefront of Verdun.

Comment: Here is an excellent thriller which should appeal to the art house and popular patron alike. This story of a gentleman cracksman who is enrolled in the secret service so that his skill can be used to the advantage of the community, for a change, is both ingenious and enthralling. Director Robert Hamer, with skillful handling, has gotten the utmost from every incident and player, and the suspense of some sequences is almost unbearable. Even when a film cliche is introduced it is only brought in to heighten the effect of a later incident. The performances are excellent. Eric Portman has rarely been better than as the detective who inwardly admires the skill and elusiveness of the cracksman, though he never wavers in his efforts to trap him. Guy Rolfe is both credible and likable as the nonchalant, smooth-working thief who will not let his feeling for a woman interfere with his attaining his objective. He has a strong personality and can act. Since practically all the leading males are English, though they portray French characters, it seems unnecessary to have brought over Nadia Gray, who is not known in Britain, when several London actresses could have played the part as well. It should be stressed that this is not a war picture in the accepted sense but a first-class suspense thriller which has every indication of being a box-office sleeper.

Port of New York

Eagle Lion Drama 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A hard-hitting and powerful story of the search for narcotics in New York harbor, with many tingling sequences and fast action that will hold the youngsters and most of their elders fast to their seats till the final flicker.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good for first-runs in smaller towns and neighborhoods, but should be dualed with a comedy in big-town first-runs. Word-of-mouth will draw action devotees despite lack of marquee names.

Cast: Scott Brady, Richard Rober, K. T. Stevens, Yul Brynner, Arthur Blake, Lynn Carter, John Kellogg, William Challee. Credits: Produced by Aubrey Schenck. Directed by Laslo Benedek. Screenplay by Eugene Ling, suggested by a story by Arthur A. Ross and Bert Murray. Photography by George E. Diskant.

Plot: A large shipment of narcotics for a medical firm for legitimate use is found to be sand when the Florentine docks in New York, bringing the agents of the Customs Bureau and the Narcotics Squad into action. Head of the dope ring is finally captured after he has killed his "girl" who had aided in getting the narcotics off the ship, the discovery of the body of her accomplice, an assistant purser, and the murder of a member of the Customs Bureau.

Comment: A hard-hitting and powerful story of the search for narcotics arriving in the Port of New York, with many tense and tingling sequences and fast action that will hold the youngsters and most of their elders fast to their seats until the last flicker. Production is excellent; also the photography, and Director Laslo Benedek has hewed straight to the dramatic line throughout, getting some very good performances from his players. Scott Brady as the Customs man who

Urges Closer Producer-Exhibitor Relations

"The days when an exhibitor could isolate himself are over," declared Robert Fellows, Paramount producer, whose latest picture is "Let's Dance," starring Betty Hutton and Fred Astaire. "In order to operate his theatre in these changing times, he must keep abreast of all facets of the industry."

"And we on this end have an equal responsibility," he added. "The producer should not confine himself to the limits of Hollywood, but should get out into the field. In the present market each picture must stand alone on its own merit, and the exhibitor must know the range of available product to buy intelligently. On his part, the producer will have to make pictures that can be counted on to play profitably for the exhibitor."

Robert Fellows

Fellows presents his ideas against a broad background of accomplishment. "The Spanish Main," which he made for RKO, is that studio's biggest grosser to date, and his current Paramount "Chicago Deadline," starring Alan Ladd, is doing top business in all key city bookings. His record shows that the producer evidently has a keen sense of "what's wanted."

Continuing, he said, "I believe these days of keener competition will benefit the industry. Pictures will be better and more diversified. The makers of small-budget pictures should begin to make use of the mass of story material available in the public domain, and turn out a variety of good original films, rather than weak imitations of more impressive productions."

Burkett having delivered the final print of "Young Daniel Boone" to Monogram, half of the company's four special Cinecolor productions on the 1949-50 schedule have been completed. is murdered and Richard Rober as the Narcotics Squad man who completes the search for the dope ring head, and nearly gets murdered, give clear cut and persuasive performances. Yul Brynner as leader of the narcotics smuggler makes the part that of a hard-boiled killer who will stop at nothing to get the huge profits the drug will bring. K. T. Stevens as his "girl" acts her role capably. Others give good support. Action in and around the New York harbor is picturesque and the scenes there add to the suspenseful drama. Exhibitors, having no patron-pulling names for the marquee, should base their exploitation on the drama of the narcotics hunt and the good acting of a not very well known cast. Word-of-mouth will give them first aid. Good for first-runs in smaller towns and neighborhoods, but should be dualed with a comedy in big-town first-runs.

Ranger of Cherokee Strip

Republic Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) One of Monte Hale's best, with the customary action and several imaginative fillips.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A good series western entry.

Cast: Monte Hale, Paul Hurst, Alice Talton, Roy Barcroft, Douglas Kennedy, George Meeker, Frank Fenton, Monte Blue, Neyle Morrow. Credits: Associate Producer, Melville Tucker. Director, Philip Ford. Screenplay, Bob Williams. Story, Earl Snell. Photography, Ellis W. Carter.

Plot: The land by treaty with the United States governed by the Cherokee Nation is being usurped by unscrupulous cattlemen. The opposition of one young half-Cherokee has landed him in jail on a murder frame-up. When he escapes to help his people, a sheriff (Paul Hurst) and a ranger (Monte Hale) chase him, become convinced of his innocense and, when he is framed on still another murder charge, manage to get the evidence on the real outlaws.

Comment: That more imagination was lavished on this than on most series westerns—and not at the expense of a full complement of the basic ingredients for such production—makes it one of the best efforts in the Monte Hale line. Big Monte slugs, shoots and rides while his customary sidekick, capable actor Paul Hurst, makes with the wry humor. To those essentials creators Tucker and Ford have added the role of an ex-actor who imitates the voice of another character, a confessional scene enlivened by a hangman's noose and a threatened grave, and some efficient conflagrant stampede stemming on the part of Hale. "Ranger of Cherokee Strip" is a good series western entry.

The Return of the Eagle

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

Lux Film Melodrama 113 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Has melodrama and action elements, though overlong and obvious.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Satisfactory melodrama entry for foreign and grind houses. Brazzi and Cervi names known. From Pushkin novel about court of Catherine the Great.

Cast: Rossano Brazzi, Irasema Dilian, Gino Cervi, Harry Feist, Angelo Calabrese, Paolo Stoppa, Rina Morelli. Credits: Producer, Distributori Indepententi Director, Riccardo Freda. Scenario, Braccio Agnoletti. Photography, Rodolfo Lombardi. Music, Franco Casavola. Settings, Impresa Cinti. English titles, Clare Catalano.

Plot: When his family is cheated of its lands by a new overlord, a young officer gives up his career to pursue revenge. He becomes a feared bandit, known as the Black Eagle. Eventually he introduces himself disguised as a timid tutor into the fortress home of the overlord, but the love that develops between the Eagle and the overlord's daughter hinders the revenge until the father tries to force the girl into a morganatic marriage.

Comment: Though it is overlong and obvious, this film does have melodrama and action elements and should be a satisfactory melodrama entry for foreign and grind houses. The fact that it was taken from a novel by Alexander Pushkin about the lusty court of Catherine the Great is a selling line and the names of Rossano Brazzi, who plays the handsome Eagle, and Gino Cervi, who performs well as the tyrannical overlord, are among the more familiar in Italian films here.

There's a Girl in My Heart

Allied Artists Comedy with Music 82 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A comedy-drama with music and dancing of the 1899 period that is pleasantly entertaining and capably acted and should appeal to the family trade.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Dualed with a drama or action picture, the film should draw well in neighborhoods and smaller situations. Marquee names will help some and word-of-mouth should build up patronage appreciably.

Cast: Lee Bowman, Elyse Knox, Peggy Ryan, Ray McDonald, Gloria Jean, Joel Marston, Iris Adrian, Lon Chaney, Lanny Simpson, Ludwig Donath, Paul Guilfoyle, Richard Lane, Irene Ryan, Martin Garralaga, Lee Tong Foo, Robert E. Keane, Kay Ann Nelson. Credits: A Sandre Production. Produced and directed by Arthur Dreifuss. No author or scenarist credit given. Photography by Phillip Tannura. Assistant producer, Leonard Shapiro. Assistant directors, Mack Wright and Robert Farfan.

Plot: A New York (1899) picayune politician, Lee Bowman, befuddles Lon Chaney, lessee of a music hall-saloon-restaurant, into becoming his partner in a sports arena which will oust many tenants and shop keepers. They scheme to get the music hall cheaply from the widow who owns it, Elyse Knox. She turns out to be young and pretty with stage ambitions and refuses to sell. She becomes the star attraction and business jumps. Both men are charmed by Elyse but Bowman continues to try to get control of the hall. He finally accepts Chaney's challenge to fight for Chaney's option to buy. Bowman wins, but tears up the option. There will be no sports arena. He convinces Elyse they are two of a kind and belong to each other.

Comment: A comedy-drama, with some old-time songs, that tells a pleasant and plausible story and furnishes a fair amount of entertainment with some amusing characterizations and situations. Producer-Director Arthur Dreifuss did well with a loosely conceived and written script. Photography is adequate. Sets and costumes and the songs were of the story's period, holding a nostalgic interest in themselves because of that fact. A stage number or two, some dances by Peggy Ryan and Ray McDonald give zest to the production as does the singing of Gloria Jean, now nearly grown up and having a temporary suitor in Bowman and a permanent one in the doctor, Joel Marston, in whose office she is a nurse. Her choir solo of Ave Maria is the musical highlight of the offering. Bowman, Miss Knox and Lon Chaney give good performances in keeping with the characters they impersonate. While the story is no great shakes, it is yet pleasantly entertaining.

Nothing is more important to all of us in this business than the development of personalities. This is a tough job for producers, and can only be accomplished with the help of exhibitors.

Exhibitors can and should cooperate by properly spotting the pictures in which new personalities appear and by properly exploiting these pictures. It is then that substantial progress is made in the development of new personalities.

Shelley Winters, who has been widely acclaimed and publicized in the press as a new box office star, will justify this prediction in her forthcoming picture SOUTH SEA SINNER.

I personally urge all exhibitors to screen this picture and see for themselves what a wonderful job Shelley Winters does.

SOUTH SEA SINNER is a fine box office picture. If every exhibitor gives it the kind of booking and promotion it deserves, I am convinced the public will readily accept Shelley Winters as a new star.

And that is a big accomplishment.

Financing the PR Program

In Washington early this month the next sessions of the industry's Public Relations group will swing into action to carry out the mandate of the Chicago meetings which ratified the program.

It has long been a problem as to how the PR program would be financed if it were to be successful. In this connection we offer to the Washington meeting the following:

Each theatre to contribute a sum equal to one per cent of its film costs with the distributors contributing a like amount.

Part of the basic program should be a localized radio and newspaper campaign specifically designed to attract patronage to the picture theatres. This would mean that such a program would not only be national, but local as well, since it would reach into every section of the country through the two mediums generally accepted as most practical to achieve such an objective.

In connection with this type of activity it is pertinent to quote the following from a New York newspaper: "Deposits in savings banks have increased 94 per cent during the eight years in which the savings banks of New York State have cooperated in an advertising and promotional campaign. . . . "

The financing plan we offer for the consideration of the delegates is one that was arrived at only after careful study of the problems involved. It is our contention that this method would achieve the desired and necessary requirements—which are an equitable arrangement for participation by all branches of the industry without saddling any of them with too heavy a burden in carrying out an adequate Public Relations program.

We hope the representatives of the industry will give this suggestion their serious consideration and that they may recognize in it a basis for the solution of a problem which, admittedly, can become very difficult.

A Bow to the Prize Baby

National Screen's current trade ad carries the following as part of its text: ". . . . there is a clear track ahead for honest-to-goodness salesmanship and showmanship. . . ."

Although we have been shouting the same thing for years, we rather liked the way the Prize Baby phrased it and so we have taken the liberty of quoting.

On many occasions, this page has cited examples of outstanding showmanship effort. We have endeavored through the years, to emphasise that there was a generally slowing down of show-selling activity. A lack of originality and agressiveness. Too many theatremen appeared to be laboring under a delusion that the boom days would be back again soon. They seemed to refuse to acknowledge that the "gravy train" (another quote from the NSS ad)—had stopped running in the vast majority of situations around the country.

Here we are at the beginning of a new show season and on the credit side of the ledger is the undisputed fact that there is a large volume of good product being delivered. To allow these fine attractions to shift for themselves would be nothing short of criminal and those guilty must, sooner or later, step aside to make room for the kind of showmanship brains that will sell pictures locally to the hilt.

And as this page has stated frequently, sell your theatre as well as your attractions. If you are operating a good movie theatre, talk about it in your ads, in your lobby and on your screen. Let them all know that in addition to fine screen fare they are also buying comfort and relaxation through the medium of a good theatre.

Showmanship in Advertising

Some ten years ago it was our privilege to sponsor and publish Bill Hendricks' "The Encyclopedia Of Exploitation." It is now in its fourth printing and probably the book with the largest circulation in the motion picture industry. There are few theatremen who do not own and treasure their copies.

This week, as announced in this issue, we are presenting another book, "Showmanship In Advertising," written by Bill Hendricks and illustrated by Monty Orr.

This new volume represents many years of research and study of a highly important subject which, to our knowledge, has not heretofore been adequately covered in any one book. Both Hendricks and Orr are to be congratulated for the very able job they have done. The few advertising executives who were privileged to look it over in manuscript form were loud in their praises.

It will take its place alongside the Encyclopedia on the desks and bookshelves of theatremen all over the world. As its publisher we are grateful for the opportunity of introducing it to advertising men and theatremen.

WHAT'S NEWS
In the Film Industry This Week

GENERAL

Not so long ago, Rep. J. Parnell Thomas had some very important people in the motion picture industry worried as the House Un-American Activities Committee, of which he was chairman, launched an investigation into alleged Communism in Hollywood, an inquiry which ramped all over the lot but neglected to take the challenge which Hollywood gave: Look at our pictures and see if there is any Communist propaganda in them. This week the same Rep. Thomas threw himelf on the mercy of the court, uncontesting the charge that he had defrauded the federal government by padding payrolls for employe services which were said to be nonexistent. He can get as much as 32 years in jail and fines of $40,000.

In Kansas City the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen elected Charles Dortic president and ratified a new contract which gives them a minimum salary of $75 weekly—a $5 raise, as well as other benefits.

In New York United Artists Executive Vice-President Arthur Kelly saw an increase of joint production in England to use up impounded American money, while Harold Wilson, president of the British Board of Trade, announced in Washington that MPAA President Eric Johnston would go to England in January or early February to discuss a new Anglo-American deal. In London J. Arthur Rank renewed his attack on box-office taxes.

LITIGATION

Divorce continued to be a worrisome word for the theatre-holding defendants in the Government anti-trust suit—Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox and Loew's (MGM). This week the Big 3, who don't fancy the idea of giving up their theatre properties, came up with their version of what the decree in the anti-trust suit should be with a document which would enable them to retain some of their theatres at any rate. It calls for divorce, but provides that divorce can be suspended if by giving up some theatres, adequate competition is provided. It also would allow the Big 3 to play their pictures on their own terms in any theatres in which they had a proprietary interest.

Meanwhile the "lawyers' paradise," as dapper Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America calls it, was pretty active. Harry and Herman Stahl of the Nuluna at Sharon, Pa., filed a $1,500,000 anti-trust suit against Warner Bros., Loew's (MGM), Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Film Classics and Warner theatre operating companies, charging that they could not get first-run film due to an alleged conspiracy. National Allied reportedly furnished the Justice Department with exhibitor statements that Columbia or its employes had demanded increased admissions for "Jolson Sings Again"—a statement which Columbia has denied repeatedly. Theatre Owners of America called on the Justice Department in Washington over the same question. And down in New Orleans the Gulf States Allied was denouncing distributors for going to court with "fanfare" over alleged fraud suits, without first trying quiet, out-of-court settlements and calling upon them ot get rid of Attorneys Sargoy and Stein.

In Pennsylvania the censor board appealed a federal court decision which denied them the right to censor films appearing over television because this reportedly was an encroachment on the rights of the Federal Communications Commission. In New York trade circles were pretty certain that the Motion Picture Association of America, which is supporting an attack on censorship in Memphis, would carry its case to the U. S. Supreme Court. In Albany, N. Y., Paramount incorporated a new $4,000,000 distributing company and a new $4,000,000 theatre company to take over if and when divorce comes about.

EXHIBITION

Federal admission taxes for the month of September totalled $35,072,207, or well above the $32,136,111 collected for September, 1948, the Treasury Department revealed this week as both the Theatre Owners of America and national Allied were marshaling their forces for an all-out attack on the box-office levy when Congress reconvenes.

This question of admission taxes meanwhile was causing more and more worry in various sections. Yonkers, a short train ride from New York, was organizing to fight a proposed five percent municipal tax, the Ohio Drive-in Association was warning its members to watch the municipalities in their areas for any move by which they might seek to take over any amount of box-office tax that the federal government might give up. The real fear in the exhibitor mind, however, is that he will have additional taxes slapped on his box-office without getting federal relief.

Meanwhile in California United Artists Theatre Circuit was preparing to take over 17 houses which will fall into its lap as a result of the divestiture provisions of the Government anti-trust suit, and in Baltimore the same company reelected all its directors, which include such notables as Joe Schenck and George Skouras. Out in Winfield, Kansas, the Sullivan Independent Theatres have leased the Regent formerly held by Fox Midwest, and in Madison, S. D., Paramount's Minnesota Amusement Company, taking another step in divestiture, has sold the Lyric property to a non-exhibitor—J. F. Stahl. In Boston, RKO will drop vaudeville at its Boston Dec. 7 and will return to duals. Reason: $20,000 weekly grosses could not cover the nut of a house which has to gross $27,000.

DISTRIBUTION

MGM is withdrawing "Gone With the Wind" Dec. 31. Jerry Jernigan taking over Realart for Memphis. Louis R. Brager stepping into Film Classics' exchange operations captaincy, succeeding Albert Mannheimer, RKO appointed Herbert Horn to handle its German distribution, and John M. Whitaker resigned as an RKO vice-president.

Salesmen Win Wage Boost, Elect Dortic

The Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesman closed its two-day convention in Kansas City last Saturday and Sunday by electing Charles Dortic of Albany, its first vice-president, to the presidency and by ratifying a contract for improved wages and working conditions reached with nine distributors.

The new contract, reached prior to the convention but subject to the approval of that body, calls for a minimum of $75 weekly, the same welfare benefits which the companies offer other employes, and a notice varying from four to eight months when the company planned to substitute its own automobiles for those of the salesman for transportation. The contract, retroactive to Oct. 18, runs till April, 1951 and covers Paramount, Loew's (MGM), Monogram, Republic, Columbia, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal, Warner Bros., and RKO. Still to be negotiated are contracts with United Artists, Film Classics, and Eagle Lion, Colosseum Counsel David Beznor declared.

Organization business, which was conducted during the two-day session, included the budget with Dortic declaring the organization was sound and had a membership of 1,030.

Cincinnati Selected

Cincinnati was selected for the 1950 convention. Other officers elected are Vice-Presidents Harry Wynn, Atlanta, and William Warner, Los Angeles; Treasurer Thomas McKean, Oklahoma City; Reelected was Executive Secretary N. Provencher. Ed Golden, president of the Kansas City Loge and Morton Truog, its secretary, hosted the convention.

Watch City Tax, Drive-Ins Warned

Members of the Ohio Drive-in Association were warned this week to watch any attempt by city governments to step into the amusement tax field as the result of any possible reduction in the tax rate by the federal government.

The warning was issued in view of the advice in that direction by the American Municipal Association of Mayors. President Frank Nolan has also appointed the following committees:

Daylight savings—Chairman, J. D. Dempsey, Jack Armstrong, Horace Shock; Activities—Chairman, Thomas Wasson, Ken Veach, Barton Cook; Insurance—Chairman, Paul Swinger, J. B. Steadman, J. D. Dempsey; Taxation—Chairman, Ethel Miles, Frank Yassenoff, C. I. Snook; Technical—Chairman, Carlos Crum, Al Boudouris, Charles Mosser; Traffic and highways—Chairman, Milton Yassenoff, George Kaler, F. E. Price.

Theatre Video Sees Answers In Football

By BILL SPECHT (News Editor)

Post mortems on the World Series theatre television showings up to now do not seem to have added much to the sum total of what exhibitors are trying to find out about televising big events, but post mortems on the more recent telecasting of the Notre Dame football games seems to be providing a key to some very interesting answers.

For the third week of these showings last Saturday at the American Theatres' Pilgrim in Boston, and the first of the butting and battering games at Fabian's Brooklyn Fox, displayed results which dovetail neatly.

At the Boston house, the management was all grins. It not only sold out the house at regular admissions, admitted 250 standees which is the maximum number permitted by the Hub City's fire department, but turned away over 500 more. For the first game, the management reported a "good" house, but one which was far from a turnaway.

Equally interesting is that while the first football telecast at the Pilgrim was satisfactory as far as attendance is concerned to the management, the second week's had built up and the third had sold out. Apparently word got around that the football telecasts were good and worth seeing and since the Pilgrim did not do any extensive advertising, that old factor in show business that can make you or break you—word of mouth—must have done the trick.

Comparison

Now take this showing made by the Boston Pilgrim and compare it with the Brooklyn Fox and more interesting facts may be deduced. The Fox barely got under the wire with the game—its first football broadcast—last Saturday. Negotiations with DuMont for the right to broadcast were apparently held up to the last minute with the question of price being a hurdle. When both sides got together, it was too late to do much advertising, so the Fabian house practically opened its Notre Dame game cold.

The results were that attendance was better than the usual for Saturdays but far from a sellout. The indication is again that an important factor in connection with these large-screen telecasts is not only the initial advertising done by the house and the proper time to do a job with it, but the build-up that is given by patrons who saw it and talk the event up until others hear that the show is good and want to see it too.

Regular Admission

Incidentally in both houses the Notre Dame game played at regular prices as an added attraction to a double feature.

Going Up

Admission taxes reported by the U. S. Treasury Department for October, 1949, which reflects the amounts paid at the box-office in September, totalled $35,072,207, or well above the $32,136,111 collected in the same period of 1948. The latest report also showed that the taxes paid by Mr. and Mrs. America during this September were almost equal to those which they paid in August, 1948, when the take was $32,287,207.

Justice Dept. Gets 'Jolson' Report Charging Higher Admission Demand

National Allied Wednesday filed a report with the Justice Department in Washington, D. C., which was said to indicate that Columbia or its employes had demanded increased admission in connection with engagement of "Jolson Sings Again."

Allied General Counsel Abram F. Myers, when queried about the report, refused to say how many exhibitors had submitted complaints of the alleged pressure made by Columbia in what, if proved, would be a violation of the U. S. Supreme Court ruling in the Government anti-trust suit that a distributor may not fix an exhibitor's admission prices.

The Allied action is apparently in reply to Columbia General Sales Manager, A. Montague's repeated denials that his company sought any increased admissions and his challenge for exhibitors to produce proof, first sent to the National Allied convention in Minneapolis, (STR, Oct. 29, p. 5).

The Allied complaint followed one made by Theatre Owners of America Executive Director Gael Sullivan and General Counsel Herman Levy to the Attorney General in Washington. At the time the TOAites discussed specific cases and promised to furnish documented evidence.

Big 3 Seek Divorce Escape In Anti-Trust Suit Proposals

The Big 3—Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM)—this week formally presented to the New York federal statutory court their proposed decree in the Government anti-trust suit which, if accepted, would enable them apparently to escape divorce of exhibition from production and distribution.

The proposed decree would also enable these theatre-holding defendants to acquire theatres without court approval, in order to replace those lost by "physical destruction, conversion or non-theatrical purposes" or through expiration of leases.

And in apparent line with the thought that divorce may be avoided, it would enable any of the Big 3 to rent films as they saw fit to theatres in which they had a proprietary interest or indirectly. This clause, Section V, reads:

"Nothing contained in this decree shall be construed to limit, in any way whatsoever, the right of each distributor-defendant to license, or in any way to arrange or provide for, the exhibition of any or all the motion pictures which it may at any time distribute, in such manner, and upon such terms, and subject to such conditions as may be satisfactory to it, in any theatre in which such distributor-defendant has a proprietary interest, either directly or through subsidiaries."

Divorce Escape

The divorce escape clause appears in the third paragraph of Section IV of the Big 3 proposals—a section whose first two paragraphs set out to provide for separation of exhibition from production-distribution.

Paragraph 1 of this section calls upon the Big 3, within one year after the decree is handed down, to furnish a plan for divorce and give the Justice Department six months in which to object. Paragraph 2 calls upon the Government to furnish a divorce plan within a year after the decree is handed down and gives the Big 3 six months to object. But Para-

Trade Sees 'Curley' Censor Fight As Slated for U. S. Supreme Court

Possibility that the Motion Picture Association of America-sponsored fight against Memphis censorship would be carried to the U. S. Supreme Court if the Tennessee high court upholds a lower court decision against United Artists and Hal Roach in the "Curley" case was seen in trade circles this week.

The possibility gained the strength of a near-certainty when a spokesman for the MPAA, which is backing the "Curley" fight, in answer to a question, asserted that the law permitted an appeal direct to the U. S. Supreme Court from the state Supreme Court.

The "Curley" case, filed by United Artists and Hal Roach after Memphis Censor Lloyd Binford had banned the film because it showed white and Negro children together, lost out when the court questioned the right of United Artists to sue on the ground that it was not a corporation licensed to do business in Tennessee. The court also, according to a spokesman for the MPAA, which is backing the fight, upheld the validity of the censor ordinance.

The MPAA spokesman added that the original petition in the suit had challenged censorship among other reasons, as being violative of the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the U. S. Constitution. A news story in SHOWMEN'S Nov. 26, had credited the "Lost Boundaries" case, and attacking censorship in Atlanta, as being the first to invoke the constitutional amendments.

Pa. Censors Appeal Video Knock-Out

Pennsylvania's censor appealed to the third U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals this week against a federal court decision which knocked out their power to censor films used over television.

The issue was raised by Pennsylvania video stations when the censor board attempted to extend the powers it now has over films shown in theatres to those shown over television. As a result, Federal Judge William H. Kirpatrick ruled that the censors' action encroached on the powers of the Federal Communications Commission. The issue of the right of films to freedom from censorship under constitutional provisions for free speech was not raised, as they have been in the "Lost Boundaries" suit against Atlanta censorship.

Big 3 Propose Trust Decree

graph 3 provides that divorce can be suspended "at any time after three years" from the entry of the decree, if the actual surrender of theatres by the Big 3 in that period has made divorce unnecessary. The full text of this paragraph follows:

"At any time after the three years from the entry of this judgment any defendant which has submitted a plan pursuant to . . . (the divorce" providing paragraphs) of Section IV of this judgment may petition the court to suspend the effective date of such plan or the taking of any steps to effectuate it upon the ground that actual divestiture of theatre interests during such period has made such plan unnecessary, in whole or in part, to provide adequate competition in the distribution and exhibition of films. Upon the filing, in good faith, of such a petition, an appropriate order suspending execution of the plan shall issue as of course and be in effect until the court shall have heard and determined the merits of the petition. The court may thereafter enter an order revoking, modifying or affirming said plan, in whole or in part, or substituting such other relief as may be warranted by its findings as to the competitive conditions then prevailing in the industry."

The proposed decree additionally permits voluntary arbitration.

Accompanying the proposal for a decree, the Big 3 submitted, is a bulky series of "objections and corrections" to the Justice Department "new proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law."

The challenges for the most part seem directed at softening findings and conclusions on monopoly and monopolistic practices, which might prove expensive to the Big 3 later if these Findings become official. In which case they could be used as evidence in suits filed by exhibitors against any of the Big 3.

One challenge is directed at the Government's attempt to include findings arising out of the Paramount and RKO Consent Decrees on the ground that neither of these companies is now party to the present suit.

Government figures on theatre holdings, vertical integration and monopoly are also challenged and strangely enough, the Big 3, who have at one time or the other favored arbitration, serve notice upon the court that they do not wish the impression conveyed that "merely by not objecting" to arbitration they "are binding themselves to establish or support any arbitration system."

To Jan. 17?

Hearings on the Government anti-trust suit decree may be postponed to Jan. 17 from the scheduled Dec. 6, it was reported this week. One of the three Justices who sit on the case—Judge Henry W. Goddard,—is at present sitting on the Alger Hiss perjury trial, which will hardly be concluded in time for the original date set on the anti-trust suit.

Not Fantastic

Manager Florence Kipp of the Paramount, Cincinnati, is one girl who can remember when and who doesn't miss bets when it comes to selling tickets. Finding the young folks like to dance, she has set up a juke box in the lobby and holds Saturday night dances in which any ticket holder can participate.

Taken for a Ride?

Exhibitors of Columbus, Ohio, are really worried that the bus companies are taking them for a ride in more ways than one as the result of an increase in fares from five tickets for 25 cents to seven tickets for 50 cents. They fear it will affect all houses depending upon "transportation trade."

No First-Runs, Ask $1,500,000

Charging that they had not been able to get a single major first-run film for their Nuluna Theatre in Sharon, Pa., since they took over the house in 1935, Harry and Herman Stahl this week filed suit under the anti-trust laws in federal court for triple damages amounting to $1,500,000 against two Warner Bros., theatre companies and seven distributors.

All first-runs in Sharon, the brothers contended, were given to the Warner Bros. theatres, a move which they assert is part of a nation-wide conspiracy by the large distributors to grant a monopoly to their own theatres or to fellow distributors who own theatres.

Defendants, in addition to Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation and the Stanley Company of America, are: Warner Bros., Loew's (MGM), Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists and Film Classics.

UA Circuit Adds 17 Theatres

United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., will add 17 California houses to its chain of theatre holdings shortly as a result of the divestiture and partnership termination rulings in the Government anti-trust suit, it was revealed in Los Angeles this week.

First three houses to pass under the banner of the corporation, which in recent years has been more of an investment than an operating outfit but is now returning to active operation, will be the Egyptian on Dec. 1, in Los Angeles followed by Loew's State in Los Angeles and the United Artists in Pomona, on Dec. 2. Other houses which are eventually to come under the corporation's operating division are:

United Artists in Berkeley and Capitol in Glendale, the United Artists in Inglewood, the Long Beach and United Artists in Long Beach, the United Artists and Four Star Theatre in Los Angeles, the United Artists Theatre in East Los Angeles, United Artists Theatre in Pasadena, United Artists Theatre in Pomona, Alhambra Theatre in Sacramento, Varsity Theatre in Palo Alto, California Theatre in Richmond, Mission Theatre in San Jose.

United Artists Corporation, the president of which is Joseph M. Schenck, is an outfit with widespread stock holdings in several corporations, including Metropolitan Playhouses which owns the Skouras circuit in New York, and a corporation which owns part of the Robb and Rowley circuit in the south.

Rank's Davis Due, May Talk Production

J. Arthur Rank Managing Director John Davis is due in New York this week to discuss routine business with Universal and Eagle Lion and the possibility of joint production with Paramount, informed sources reported this week. Paramount remained silent on the joint production question.

Kelly Sees Joint Production Jump

Increase of joint production in England by American producers or distributors with frozen funds was seen in New York this week by United Artists Executive Vice-President Arthur W. Kelly, recently returned from abroad.

Kelly bases his view on the fact that there are but few ways the Americans can use their frozen funds inasmuch as the average producer is not going in for hotel or travel agency buying —one of the uses permitted assumably under the Anglo-American agreement. The practical uses, he said, were joint production, production in England, and buying British pictures for American distribution.

This last, he declared, is limited by the "quality of British pictures" suited for United States distribution, though David O. Selznick seems to have done very well, he pointed out by swapping his "Paradine Case" for British distribution to Sir Alexander Korda, who in turn gave Selznick the United States rights on "The Fallen Idol."

Those Pounds

Asked about joint production, Kelly remarked:

"You've got to get rid of those pounds. . . . We have a lot of money in England that belongs to our producers and they're finally waking up to the fact that they've got to do something about it."

Kelly declared United Artists was not buying any English theatres and that "you can't buy an important circuit or a theatre that will do you any good."

The United Artists' executive confirmed a report that his company had closed a deal for world distribution rights on from four to seven pictures to be made by the British Anatole de Grunwald with the first for delivery in April 1950 and the last in January 1951. He has also closed for world, but not United States rights for two Artiste Associate releases in Italy—"Volcano" and "The Marshes under the Skies." Three more, he said, may come from France, one made in English under a proposed deal which would give UA world rights and leave it optional whether the company would take United States rights.

Kelly also reported that he had made franchise deals in Germany, Austria, and the Saar for 10 pictures, which were now being selected and under which part of the expense in handling would be borne by the ECA.

Johnston to London In January—Wilson

Harold Wilson, president of the British Board of Trade, returned to New York this week, after advising the press in Washington that Motion Picture Association of American President Eric Johnston would go to London in January or early February to discuss renewal of the Anglo-American agreement.

The agreement, reached between that part of the America film industry represented by Johnston and James Mulvey, member of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and the British Government now permits American producers who are part of the agreement to receive up to $17,000,000 yearly in dollars of the frozen film rentals their films accumulate in England. The burning question at the moment is whether the British won't ask for a reduction in dollar remittances, though the cards are not altogether in their hands due to the need of British exhibitors for American films.

'Mercy'

Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (nee Feeney), who as chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee of the House of Representatives, conducted an apparently inconclusive investigation of Communism within the film industry, Wednesday threw himself on the mercy of the court in connection with defrauding the Federal Government. Thomas was charged with receiving kickbacks from fictitious employes whom the Government paid on his authorization. Maximum penalty for the offense is a fine of $40,000 and 32 years in prison.

Lux To Dub, Says President Gualino

High quality dubbing will be pushed by Lux Films Distributing Company in an effort to get wider distribution in the United States for its Italian-made product. Dr. Renato Gualino, president of Lux Films, S. A., of Rome, declared in New York last week.

Renato Gualino

Two of the imports which will be dubbed — "Seven Years' Hard Luck" and "The Captain's Daughter" — are part of an import program which may reach 10 features in 1950, Dr. Gualino said. He also declared that he would seek the advice of the Motion Picture Association of America on ways to get fair distribution for foreign films in the United States. Presumably this is in line with MPAA President Eric Johnston's repeated declaration that if we want to export films we must be prepared to accept imports and to assist fine foreign films.

Co-Production

Dr. Gualino also revealed a plan for "cooperative production" between France and Italy provided certain Italian legislation is passed by Dec. 31. Under this proposed plan French producers would make probably as many as six pictures in France with the Italians furnishing at least 30 per cent of the financing. Then Italians would make six different films in Italy with the French furnishing at least 30 per cent of the financing. The films made in each country, under the proposal, would then be admitted into the other country as domestic films under the quota which could recover reimbursement of the admission tax, which in Italy amounts to 22 per cent of the gross, and would further be free of dubbing tax.

Lux also has a joint production plan with John Sutra's Orlux Company in England by which it made two films with English and Italian versions which will be admitted into England as British quota pictures, Dr. Gualino declared. Dr. Gualino saw no immediate prospect of unfreezing American film rentals in Italy. He anticipates Italian producers will make 100 pictures this year, approximately 25 of which will be suited for American import. Also he finds Italian production costs have risen but slightly due to American production projects in his native land.

Brager Joins Film Classics

Louis R. Brager this week took over as exchange operations director for Film Classics, succeeding Albert Mannheimer.

Color Is Star of the Moment, Dual Bills Find from Survey

Technicolor is the star of the moment and what the public wants along with it is good action pictures, the dual Bills—Bill Pine, Bill Thomas—declared in New York Tuesday before starting another cross-country tour to see what exhibitors think is best for the screen and what are the best terms they can get for Pine-Thomas productions.

"We find that they (the public) want adventure, action adventure, romantic adventure and they like color," declared Bill Pine, holding the interview floor in relays with Partner Thomas who is not tongue-tied. "Technicolor is the star."

"The public will buy Technicolor . . . they like Technicolor. Maybe that won't hold up but now it's good." The "good" angle, insofar as the producing team is concerned, is that they've found that color can take the place of a big name.

Not Even Peanuts

They've also found, as a result of their exhibitor-visiting jaunts, that many a name which Hollywood's Brown Derby thinks is tonic for the box-office won't bring in enough, inferentially, to permit the exhibitor to buy his wife's brother a Coca-Cola. In addition, they've discovered that exhibitors think a lot of actors whom Hollywood won't even lift an eyebrow over.

"That's why," explained Thomas, "we started to use John Payne." Payne, they learned, was plum duff to the exhibitor's profit-calculating mind.

Changed Their Thinking

"Listening to the exhibitor has changed our whole thought and paid off—definitely it has paid off," put in Pine. Both partners explained that after they had made "Albuquerque," exhibitors asked for another and they obliged with "El Paso." And then on another go-round when Republic's "Wake of the Red Witch" was making money, exhibitors asked for sea pictures, so they obliged—they hope—with the forthcoming "Captain China."

Asked by a reporter whether the opinion of exhibitors who had success with "Albuquerque" and wanted another like it and those who made money with "Red Witch" and wanted more sea pictures, if accepted, would not lead to the same monotony which the exhibitors themselves denounce, the dual Bills replied that they sifted exhibitor opinion for their reaction on box-office. Further, they said, the total opinion would not "change the thinking" of the two producers working as one, altogether.

"At least you can find out what they don't want," pointed out Thomas.

Part of the motive behind their trip, both are frank to acknowledge, is to get the best deal they can from exhibitors through "additional merchandising." Pine declared he could go to exhibitors whom he knew and say "Give me a break" and get it.

"We just have to take in more money in order to exist," he said, speaking of the industry generally. "This may not be necessary a year from now when the foreign thing, which is a cancer in our business now, is over, but it is now."

Where It Doesn't Show

The partners agreed that economy had to be accomplished in what did not appear on the screen and not in sets, photography or acting details. They claimed they pay a disproportionately high amount of their budget for scripts, because "if you've got a good script you have a chance of getting a good picture; if you haven't a good script, you can't get a good picture, no matter who's in it." Besides the careful planning of the script saves shooting time.

"What you can do," declared Thomas on economy "is to save a lot of dough in preparation, consulting your production managers, your director" ("and your cameraman," interpolated Pine) "and make the picture practically in your office."

Pine-Thomas have three planned for 1950 production—"Tripoli" in March; "High Venture," June; "New Guinea Gold," September. Releases scheduled for the year are "Captain China," "Eagle and the Hawk," "Outrage."

And they won't sell their pictures to television, Pine made it plain.

Bonanza in Vet Selling—Cowan

Using veterans to peddle tickets for the reissue of "The Story of G. I. Joe" in various cities has proved a bonanza both at the box-office and in goodwill, Producer Lester Cowan and Eagle Lion General Sales Manager A. Montague declared in New York Wednesday.

Under the veteran plan the ex-service men sell the tickets at box-office price for a 40 per cent commission. So far, Cowan claims, they not only have boosted the house gross way above normal, but in publicity breaks. The idea has been so fruitful in fact Cowan himself will take the road shortly to explain the plan to veterans' groups.

The producer explained that he would put into practice a pattern developed in Boston where the picture after two weeks at the Pilgrim broke day-and-date in 21 Boston neighborhood houses plus 100 New England dates later.

Iowa Tax Shows Grosses Are Down

Box-office receipts for Iowa's theatres were approximately $1,500,000 off during the second quarter of 1949, compared to those of the same period one year ago, figures of the state tax commission revealed this week. The commission reported that the tax take on the box-office for April-May-June was $116,366 this year compared with $146,961 during the same period in 1948. On the basis of these figures, this would mean that theatres took in $5,800,000 for the 1949 three-month period compared to $7,300,000 a year ago.

Maybe Thomas Could Help

No Communists have been found to date within the ranks of the National Film Board, the Hon. R. H. Winters, Canadian Minister of Reconstruction and Supply, declared this week, during an investigation which is being made by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The check was prior to production of secret military films by the board.

LONDON observations

by Jock MacGregor

Jock MacGregor

It is ironic that in all the song-and-dance over the crisis and closing of studios, the British producers have overlooked the excellence of their recent offerings. Of the last twenty I have seen, the majority have maintained a high standard and some are even world beaters. Properly handled they can help to clear the overdrafts.

Carol Reed's "The Third Man" should be a top grosser in any country. In France, it won the Cannes Festival Award and is hanging up records in two Paris cinemas. At home, it has missed in some spots, but its overall gross will be one of the year's largest. In Birmingham, it has been retained for a fifth week in a cinema which normally changes weekly.

Despite having played the entire London suburbs, it continues in the West End playing to capacity, thereby making movie history.

Though Joseph Cotten, Valli, Orson Welles and Trevor Howard are the stars, the artist to create the most interest is never seen. He is Anton Karas, who provides the fascinating zither music accompaniment. His "Harry Lime" theme has swept the country through radio and dance band alike and his gramophone records are sold out. His playing was the hit of the Royal Film Performance and packs the exclusive Persian Room each night.

Another worthy hit is "The Hasty Heart" which proves what the Associated British team can produce in their new studios and establishes Richard Todd as a major discovery.

Rod Gieger and Edward Dymtryk have also turned out a quality offering in "Give Us This Day," which can be exported without fear.

As neat a thriller as any country can provide is "The Spider and the Fly." Here Director Robert Hamer combines artistic integrity with honest-to-goodness entertainment values.

On the lighter side, "Run for Your Money" tells of the pitfalls which beset a couple of young Welsh miners in London for a football match. It has the earmarks of being just right for the art house patrons who likes to see life as it is in other lands.

"The Romantic Age" is another potential winner while "Under Capricorn," "Chiltern Hundreds," "Train of Events," "Obsession" and "Madness of the Heart" are others to prove at the box-office that Britain has ended the run of "indifferent films."

New York-bound in December will be C. J. Latta on his first visit home since his appointment as managing director of the vast Associated British Picture Corporation.

In these days of dreary publicity, a dash of showmanship is most welcome and full marks go to Jack Dawe of Grand National for their latest batch of trade show invitations. Instead of the usual "Request the pleasure . .. admit two" cards he has sent a black eye mask with elastic band for "The Masked Pirate" ("Pirates of Capri"), a Pan American air ticket for "Miss Pilgrim's Progress" and an imitation juror's writ for "Matter of Murder."

Paramount Forms 'Divorce' Units

Paramount got ready for divorce this week by incorporating two new companies in Albany, N. Y., each capitalized at $4,000,000 with stock issued at $1 par value. The two new companies are: 1) A production-distribution company which will be known as Paramount; 2) a theatre operating company to be known as United Paramount Theatres.

Incorporators for the picture company are Paramount Legal Vice-President, Austin C. Keough, Clinton Combes and Fred Morhardt. Incorporators for the theatre company are Leonard H. Goldenson, now head of Paramount Theatres, Walter W. Gross and Robert H. O'Brien.

Watch 'Speed' Traps, Theatre Screen Warns

When it comes to offering a public service to his patrons, there's nothing slow about Manager Walter F. Yeinger of the Watersedge at Dundalk, Md. Between each show he is running a trailer, warning the public against "speed traps." What the Police Commissioner will think of the trailer, which Yeinger said he prepared at the request of patrons, may possibly be gathered from the copy, which follows:

Commissioner Beverly Ober of the Baltimore Police Department is operating

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Newsreel Initiative

If Movietone News issue No. 95 has an exclusive this week on the freighter Andalucia going aground off the northwest coast, it's due to the initiative which Staff Cameraman Parris Emery showed in not only getting there but getting back there—and sticking out lousy luck. Emery flew out on a tip from Seattle that the Andalucia was afire. The ship wasn't afire, so he flew back. Then word came the ship was aground. This time he went out bucking waves with the Coast Guard. But the Andalucia was a stubborn ship. She waited till nightfall to break up when he couldn't get a shot. Nevertheless he stuck it till morning and got a shot of the two halves of the ship drifting apart with the loss of a million dollar lumber cargo.

Longhair Stuff

Spyros Skouras, patron of the arts and philosophies, this week was trying to do another public service via the Fox-controlled Roxy in New York. Negotiations are under way to get the New York Philharmonic Orchestra to play on the stage there, presumably for five shows daily, after its summer Lewisohn Stadium concerts. Dimitri Mitropoulos might conduct. While this would be a novelty to the present Roxy, if the deal goes through, since its stage has been devoted to cavorting lovelies and le jazz moderne, it probably will bring benign smiles from whatever Vallhalla the late Roxy Rothafel may be occupying for he used to put the giant Roxy orchestra of his day on the stage every Sunday morning for symphonic concerts.

Little Ones Out of . . .

Fox West Coast this week took over the 2,627-seat Loew's Warfield in San Francisco but seems to have made up for it by taking another house right next door—the tiny 352-seat Newsreel which has been operated during the past few years by the Goldberg circuit. Fox owned the building but had leased it to Goldberg on a month-to-month basis. What policy they will use for the midget house was not announced.

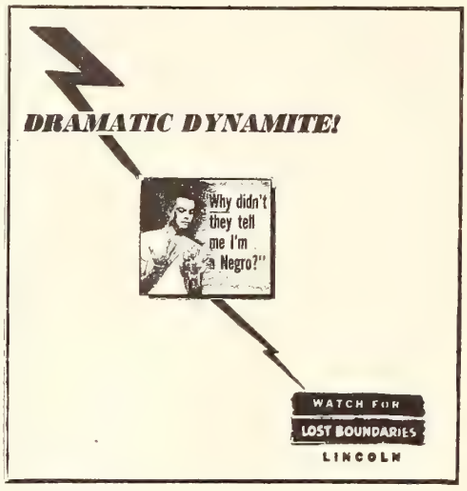
News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

3 Fox Premieres For the Holidays

Major premieres in different sections of the country will launch three 20th Century-Fox productions during the Christmas and New Year holiday season. John Ford's comedy "When Willie Comes Marching Home" will have its world premiere at three theatres in Miami on Dec. 30. The other films scheduled to open with fanfares are Darryl F. Zanuck's "Twelve O'Clock High" in Los Angeles and "Prince of Foxes" in New York.

In Miami "When Willie Comes Marching Home" will be given a rousing sendoff through the personal appearance of Colleen Townsend, co-star of the picture, who has been selected from hundreds of entries as "The Sweetheart of the Orange Bowl." Miss Townsend will participate in the gala round of events preceding and during the playing of the famed Orange Bowl football classic which takes place on January 2.



The star will arrive in Miami on December 26 to attend the North-South college all-star football game sponsored by the Shriners, where she will be introduced as "Sweetheart of the Orange Bowl" to 55,000 people attending the game.

On December 28 she will crown the 1950 Orange Bowl Queen at elaborate Coronation ceremonies, and on the following day will be guest of honor at the Orange Bowl kickoff luncheon. She is also slated to participate in

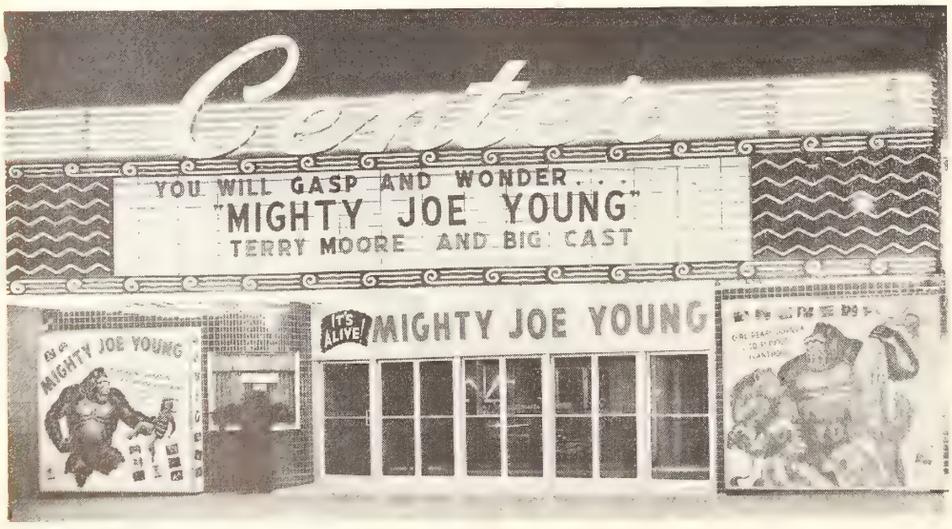
Circus Press Agent to Hit Road for 'Samson'

Frank W. Braden, top advance man for the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey circus, stepped into a new role this week—as advance drum-beater for Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah." Braden will be assigned to cover cities on the early playdate list for the DeMille opus.



IRRESISTIBLE is this advance teaser ad on Film Classics' "Lost Boundaries," used by Bill Hoyle at the Lincoln Theatre, Washington, D. C. Reduced above, the ad actually measured four columns in width, eight inches deep. Hoyle has utilized white space to advantage, and the lightning flash takes the eye right down through the message.

Director to Cover Eight Cities Plugging 'Arizona'

Samuel Fuller, who directed "The Baron of Arizona" for Lippert Productions, will make an eight-city tour in behalf of the picture, giving press interviews in each city. His tour will start in San Francisco on Dec. 15 and end in New York.

'Brave' Firearms Lobby

A lobby display of army firearms was obtained from the National Guard by Manager Steve Brady of the Oswego, Oswego, N. Y., for "Home of the Brave."

EXPLOITORIALS

The Paramount studio will make its huge assembly stage available for the annual U.C.L.A. Junior Prom on Dec. 10, with Bob Hope and a galaxy of screen personalities as honored guests. The event has been designated "The Great Lover Ball," and an estimated 3,000 students are expected to attend the formal affair, which will be staged in motion picture premiere style. The celebration will also include a special showing for students only of Hope's new comedy, "The Great Lover," at the Bruin Theatre in Westwood the evening before the ball. Now we've been thinking it over, and it seems to us that you could put on a similar event in your own community. The high school or college students often hold fraternity or sorority dances. Why not tie-in with them on a "Great Lover Ball"? Of course you probably won't be able to have Hope or other stars in person, but you could, for example, arrange in advance for the students to hold a "Great Lover Contest" and then honor at the dance the student who gets the most votes. Or, perhaps better still, you might have the boys choose the four or five girls (or more, as you choose) who they feel would inspire them to become "great lovers" and have the winning girls reign as "The Great Lovers' Favorite Objects of Affection" (or something like that) at the ball. Large blowups of Hope and stills from the comedy could be used as decorative material. The orchestra could feature the "thousand violins" song from the picture. If student tieins for this project are not available, then how about tieing-in with a lodge or club, or just making it a community affair?

For a stunt that makes for goodwill and human interest copy, we turn again to Newsviews, house organ of Fox West Coast theatres. It's good for practically any picture. Through the newspaper conduct a search for the oldest man or oldest woman in town, or youngest—and present them with a "lifetime" pass. Dress up the presentation with a bouquet or a box of candy.

In connection with Warner Bros.' Milton Berle comedy, "Always Leave Them Laughing," you could get the newspaper to cooperate with you on a letter-writing contest for humorous experiences in the contestants' lives. For those which the judges feel would "always leave them laughing," promoted prizes could be awarded. You might also get the public's opinion on which way Milton Berle leaves them laughing most frequently—through the gag-style comedy of his television shows or the spontaneous situation style that occasionally crops up in his newest comedy. Reasons should be given. Of course, a stunt of this nature is best suited to those communities where the picture would have a fairly long run so that the contest could be conducted during the playdate and thus attract patrons interested in competing.

Marines to Help Promote 'Iwo Jima'

Authorization for 700 units of the United States Marine Corps throughout the country to give full cooperation to Republic and exhibitors on the promotion of "Sands of Iwo Jima" followed a meeting in Washington this week at which Republic President Herbert J. Yates and Director of Advertising and Publicity Steve Edwards discussed promotion plans with General Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps.

Yates tendered a luncheon in honor of General Cates and his staff at the Willard Hotel, where he outlined plans for premieres of the film at San Francisco and San Diego. The San Francisco opening is set for the Fox on Dec. 14, while the San Diego premiere the following day will embrace the Fox, State and Loma theatres.

Following the luncheon, plans were outlined for the picture's premiere in Washington on Jan. 25 at the Warner and Ambassador theatres.

George Crouch, Warner Theatres zone manager, and Frank La Falce, local director of advertising and publicity for Warner Theatres, were also in attendance.

Shane Promotes 'Doll' Contest in Omaha

Promoting Christmas dolls for doll-less Omaha girls was the goodwill-building stunt that Manager Donald Shane of the Paramount, Omaha, envisioned as a good exploitation plug for "Oh, You Beautiful Doll." He went to the executives of the Omaha World-Herald with his idea, and received immediate cooperation when it was explained that the dolls contributed in the contest would be turned over to the World-Herald Good Fellows for Christmastime distribution to needy girls in the city.

The newspaper at once got busy with publicity, announcing that boys and girls under 16 could submit dolls in one of three divisions, with major prizes going to the winners, and that every one of the first 1,500 entrants to contribute dolls would receive a guest ticket to see "Oh, You Beautiful Doll." Manager Shane next arranged with the toy department of the Brandeis department store to be a collection agent for the dolls, which might be left either at the store or at the Paramount Theatre. The stunt immediately aroused widespread interest among the girls and boys of the city.

'Foolish Heart' to Get 2-House Xmas Premiere

Samuel Goldwyn's "My Foolish Heart" will get a two-theatre Christmas day premiere at the United Artists and Four Star in Los Angeles, the producer announced this week. The premiere marks a change in policy for the Four Star which up till now has not run day-and-date with any other house. Goldwyn is said to be putting in an early run to meet the Academy Award rule that a picture must play at least one week before the end of the year to qualify for entry.

'Required Seeing'

A special screening of "Lost Boundaries" at the Madison, Richmond, Ky., for churches, civic clubs and Eastern College resulted in one of the college's instructors making the film "required seeing" for his students. Ken Carter is manager.

DANDREA KEEPS XMAS BUSINESS IN TOWN. With the support of the local Merchants Association, which he heads, Manager Dan Dandrea of the Stanley Theatre, Bridgeton, N. J., will keep holiday business in town by permitting those who purchase their Christmas gifts from local merchants to participate in the opportunity to receive articles of merchandise donated by the dealers. Display of the merchandise—and there seems to be plenty of it—is shown above in the lobby of the Stanley. Dandrea is doing his Christmas showmanship early.

Dandrea Keeps Christmas Business In Town Through Merchant Promotion

Again the merchants of Bridgeton, N. J., are indebted to a theatreman for promoting their year-end holiday business, as they were last Christmas, through a bonus coupon arrangement whereby those purchasing their Christmas gifts from local merchants, instead of spending their money in out-of-town department stores, will have an opportunity to win prizes from the $5,000 worth of articles donated by Bridgeton merchants. That theatreman is Dan Dandrea, manager of the Stanley Theatre. With the active support of the Merchants Association, which he heads, he has again put across his free Christmas bonus gifts and donated the use of the Stanley lobby to display the hundreds of prizes, redeemable through bonus coupons received for purchases from local merchants.

One whole side of the lobby is devoted to displaying the articles, among which are deep freezers, gas ranges, refrigerators, bicycles, chests of silverware, electric heaters, electric mixers, radios, television sets and many other household articles. The big first prize is a two-door sedan of a popular make which stands in front of the theatre. Only mention the theatre gets is a line in the lobby and store posters that the prizes are on display at the Stanley.

But that is overlooking the recognition Manager Dandrea and his theatre are accorded for the goodwill they have won from merchants and citizens alike through participating in civic, religious and welfare undertakings in the community, in a column-long editorial in the Bridgeton Evening News.

"Merchants Association Has a Real Leader" is the heading of the editorial, which goes on to say, in part:

"The Bridgeton Merchants Association under the aggressive leadership of Dan Dandrea has met the challenge once again of 'out of town shopping' during the holiday season. . . . The individual efforts of Mr. Dandrea . . . have been greatly responsible for the unification and enthusiasm displayed by the Association since its formation.

"Mr. Dandrea has demonstrated his faith in Greater Bridgeton. And to that end he has given unselfishly of his time and has made the Stanley Theatre available to all worthy enterprises as a part of our community life. While asking for no personal accolades, Mr. Dandrea has endeavored to secure the cooperation of the people in spreading goodwill and a progressive spirit into every project. . . . The Merchants Association can take pride in its aggressive leadership."

Manager Dandrea recently increased his popularity with the high school students and citizens of Bridgeton by holding a football rally in the Stanley before the local game with Collingwood (STR, Nov. 5).

NOT SO HAPPY. The sign says "I Was Framed by 'Johnny Stool Pigeon'," and the doorman seems none too happy about it. Anyway, this lobby stunt on the Universal-International film was used at Springer's Triangle Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., by Manager Murray Spector. The frame drew much attention and laughs galore.

Take Drive-In's P.A. Plugs for Police Call

When Manager Charlie Poorman of Rowland and Schumacher's new Pottsville, (Pa.) drive-in plugged "Belle Starr" over the underskyer's public address system, using the police call to touring autos, a number of patrons thought they had accidentally picked up a police call through their in-car speakers. This gave them something to talk about with their friends.

British Showmen Find Advertising Films Pay

High Quality Production Breaks Exhibitor Prejudice; Stringent Code Set Up

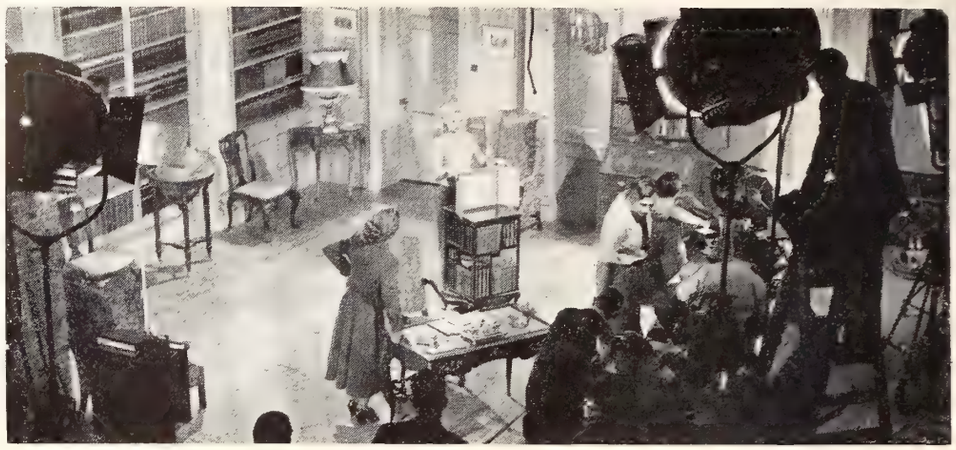
By JOCK MacGREGOR

High quality production which insures against loss of prestige has broken exhibitor prejudice to screen advertising in Great Britain. Within recent years nearly all cinemas have started using it regularly. Rank's CMA Circuit uses it everywhere, save the West End show houses.

The Association of Specialized Film Producers, working with the Advertising Association and the Cinema Exhibitors Association, have drawn up a stringent code stipulating the type of copy to be used, production contracts, and general standards for distribution and exhibition.

Many national advertisers, in consequence, now regard the cinema as second only to the press as a medium. In some campaigns, it is given pride of place. A case in point is Drene shampoo. Leading British stars like Margaret Lockwood appear in the films. In turn, they are featured in newspaper and magazine layouts, posters and window cards.

In many instances sponsors arrange extensive local campaigns to coincide with screenings. Special advertising is placed in the papers and billboards utilized. Stockists arrange window displays. In each case the cinemas are mentioned, thereby giving the manager considerable exploitation without trouble or cost.



Mastered the Market

This re-birth of national screen advertising has been largely brought about by Langford & Co., under the energetic leadership of Ernest and Dickie Pearl. After extensive audience and advertiser study they have mastered the market so that it is the exception rather than the rule not to see a sponsored film at the local cinema on a week night.

They produce the films and arrange the screenings. From experience they have drawn up rigid rules to which their clients must adhere or forego screen advertising. Each "Solus" film runs two minutes. Although aural and visual mentions of the product are limited by clever technique, the advertising value maintains a high level. Each picture has to pass a viewing panel which includes two of the industry's top bookers.

Quality is the keynote of the Langford salesmanship. The Pearls insist that an advertising film must be of a standard to compare favorably with any item on the program. Consequently, a top production unit has been built up for this specialized work and most of their films are made at the Denham or Pinewood Studios.

Some forty films are handled annually; about a third are in Technicolor. As much as $25,000 has been spent on a 2-minute film and as many as five elaborate sets have been used. The big advertisers appreciate the fact that a good picture holds the undivided attention of the audience, and if it is not up to standard the campaign is wasted.

ADVERTISING FILM PRODUCTION UNIT AT WORK. With well-dressed sets and production values that would do justice to a high-budgeted motion picture, a complete Technicolor unit is shown at work in England on an advertising flash for Lyndale coats.

The Pearls screened a number of their new releases for me and each maintained a high level both from the technical and entertainment viewpoints. Some are virtually visual demonstrations and have been designed to hold the interest. In others, the merchandise is brought in as a last-minute twist. Some advertisers favor series which are played at regular intervals.

Technicolor is often used to stress a special point. In the Prestige Cooker film, it shows that vegetables retain their appetizing color. Peter Pan clothes for children use it to put over the quality of their fabrics. A particularly striking effect is gained in a black and white reel by the product being shown in the final shot in color. Certain advertisers, such as Esso, plug for color cartoons.

Stars in Off-Set Shots

Off-set shots of the stars using the product are featured by some advertisers. I saw Margaret Lockwood using Drene, Jane Hylton giving her undies a daily dip in Dreft and Petula Clark drinking her nightcap of Ovaltine. In some instances, shots from actual films are included.

Distribution depends on several factors, the most important of which is the market to be reached. Once this is fixed, normal film practice is generally followed. The picture will start with a North West London release, as with a feature, and in no case will it play a subsequent-run house before one which would normally bar it.

Langfords confine each film to one advertiser only and allow one advertising film to be featured in each program. They do not buy screen space for Sundays. They take space for a season and the selection of subjects is theirs. The exhibitor is advised where to provide two-minute screen time in each program. Payment is based on seating, location and other such factors. No film plays for more than 6 days.

Another form of advertising which has been extensively used in Great Britain is the glass slide. As a result of considerable research, Langfords have devised a method of replacing them with color filmlets. Each is an 18-ft. strip which permits the use of live action or animation. Both local and national firms are featured in each reel, and again the total running time is two minutes. This guarantees the advertiser his correct time and insures against broken or cracked slides, but allows him to change his clips as frequently as desired.

None Rivals Langfords

While there are other screen advertising agencies, these concentrate mainly on the straightforward magazine type reel for nationals and slide for locals. None rivals Langfords for size or scope.

The Pearls have brought this market to a fine art and offer the exhibitor not only an addition to his program which he can show without fear of annoying patrons or losing prestige, but one which bolsters his revenue.

In short, British showmen have found it pays to run advertising films.

'Just a Little Theatre Party'

A check for 90 orchestra seats for "The Red Shoes," with the amount left blank for the manager to fill in, was in the mail of the manager of the Wilson Theatre, Fresno, Calif., one morning recently. The check was signed by Mrs. C. L. Ould and a note said that since she didn't know the price of orchestra seats on the opening night, she left it for the theatre to fill in the correct amount. Scenting a newspaper story, Eagle Lion Exploiteer Paul Perez phoned Mrs. Ould and asked for the name of the organization for which she had bought the seats.

"They're not for any organization," she stated. "They are just for Mr. Ould and me. We're having a little theatre party for our friends."

15 Merchants Take Co-op Ad on 'Everybody' Idea

The title of "Everybody Does It" furnished the angle with which Reade Circuit City Manager Harry Burke in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., got 15 merchants of that city to take a co-op ad in the local paper, the Saratogian, plugging the film's showing at the Community Theatre. The theme of his approach to the merchants was that "everybody" used their particular wares. The ad ran a day prior to the film's opening.

4-H Club Air Plugs

The 4-H Club in Watertown, N. Y., went on the air to publicize the showing of "The Green Promise" at the Olympic Theatre. Manager Irv Neuwirth also got Sears-Roebuck to give him a full window and a 4-H Club exhibit on the store's main floor.

'Bagdad' Ballyhoo Covers 3 Cities

Intensive promotion campaigns in Chicago, Buffalo and Baltimore highlighted the Thanksgiving week bow of Universal-International's "Bagdad."

Spearheading the Chicago world premiere campaign at the RKO Grand Theatre were newspaper and radio promotions. A drug store chain featured special "Bagdad" Sundaes on its menus.

The Buffalo campaign tied-in with the U. S. Army's recruiting drive. Original costumes from the picture were exhibited in David's, while the Sattler department store featured a tieup and devoted newspaper advertising space to the film's opening at the Lafayette Theatre. A man dressed as a sheik toured the streets in advance of playdate.

'Bagdad' Delight Soda

In Baltimore a bannered sound truck helped to promote the opening at Keith's Theatre. A drug chain featured a "Bagdad" Delight soda in special streamers, and newspaper and radio contests were used—oriental song (for radio) and coloring (for newspapers.)

The Chicago campaign was handled by Harold Butchin, U-I field representative, and Jerry Shinbach and Ansel Winston, RKO representatives. In Buffalo Abe Bernstein of U-I worked with the Lafayette's George MacKenna, while in Baltimore Bernstein worked with Fred Schanberger, Jr.

Greenway Uses 'Garden' Angle for O'Brien Film

Seizing upon the garden idea in the title of "The Secret Garden," Manager Fred Greenway and Assistant Bob Gentner of Loew's Poli Palace, Hartford, Conn., sought tieups on seeds and tools for gardening. First they promoted 100 packages of seeds as giveaways to the first 100 persons attending on the opening day. A coloring contest with a seed distributor yielded plants as prizes. A treasure chest in the lobby, with 1,000 keys, only 10 being master keys to open the box, were distributed through hardware stores. Prizes were gardening tools for those who could open the chest.

Parent-Teacher Associations plugged the picture; libraries and book stores the book on which the film is based. The Margaret O'Brien dresses were promoted through Hartford department stores. Fifty flowers were promoted from a local florist to be given to the first 50 women attending the opening evening performance. Department store sales bags were imprinted with "Secret Garden" credits. Vials of perfume, labeled "Secret Garden," were promoted from a cut-rate drug concern. Practically all phases of the "garden" idea were played up, garnering publicity that reached a large proportion of the city's inhabitants.—HFD.

Varied Costumes at Palace Halloween Party

A wide range of imaginative costumes was in evidence when an estimated 2,000 children jammed the Odeon Palace Theatre in Hamilton, Ontario, for a Good Deed Halloween Party. Costumes ranged from Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny to Frankenstein and Mighty Joe Young. Following the difficult judging of costumes, the children were treated to a special kiddie show. Event rated a three-column cut and caption in the Hamilton Spectator, local newspaper.

SHOWMANSHIP AWARD. Allen A. Grant, manager of Century's Kingsway Theatre, Brooklyn, receives from Executive Vice-President Fred J. Schwartz (left) and Executive in Charge of Theatre Operation Leslie R. Schwartz (right), the A. H. Schwartz Showmanship Award for 1949. The award is made annually to the Century manager who, in the opinion of all the circuit's district managers, department heads and executives, has done the best overall job in theatre management.

Rope, Sand Used In Sorkin Campaign

I.M.P.S. Member Sol Sorkin, city manager for RKO Keith's Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., used plenty of rope in his campaign on "Rope of Sand," and he hung up—not himself—but good grosses on the picture. And, incidentally, he didn't forget the sand, either.

The rope was used by a boy who took a section of it out on the street and spelled out the name of the picture. Not bad, eh?

As for the sand, well, don't get it in your eyes. Another boy went out with a bucket of it, stopped at busy street intersections, dumped it out on the sidewalk, then wrote the film's title with his finger. Crowds gathered around him, thus stopping pedestrian traffic.

Sand was also used in a jewelry window tieup, with diamonds imbedded in it.

'Stable' Previewed By Massena Clergy

Nuns and priests in Massena, N. Y., attended a special screening of "Come to the Stable" before it opened at Schine's Massena Theatre. This gesture, arranged by Manager Les Coulter, was good for an article in the local gazette plus the potential influential word-of-mouth. Coulter also sent 1500 cards to Catholic and public schools advertising a special matinee, used a page from a Catholic paper in composing a 40 x 60 for his theatre front, and got the local radio station to credit the theatre and playdate and plug the film tune, Through a Long and Sleepless Night, on a record program.

Woman-to-Woman Angle Used by Bill Straub

The cashier of the Colonia in Norwich, N. Y., was set by Manager Bill Straub to calling the members of th business women's club "woman to woman" about "Not Wanted," the unwed-mother film. Bill also distributed a handbill ("Ladies, here is a story that you never expected to see"), had his candy girl push a "Not Wanted" baby carriage around town and persuaded the Boy Scouts to make a collection of "Not Wanted" magazines and newspapers for a worthy cause.

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

The return of Rosalind Russell to comedy "with a BANG!" keynotes Columbia's press book for "Tell It to the Judge." No chance is overlooked to suggest its comedy angles and the laughs to be had from it. Pictorially and in text alike the prepared ads are designed to give newspaper readers the firm impression that they are in for a hilarious time. Who, yearning for entertainment, wouldn't be intrigued by the often-used catchlines: "The most riotous honeymoon a bride ever shared with two husbands;"—"The three-on-a-honeymoon howl of the year!" and "She should have known from their first honeymoon what crazy things would happen on their second!"? One of the fun-suggesting cuts employed in the ads shows Rosalind falling prone, arms and legs extended in the air, the other showing her flat on her back in a rowboat, feet in the air, with Robert Cummings smugly watching her from another boat. The posters use the same laugh-provoking illustrations. Many of the newspaper articles in the press book suggests the film's appeal to the risibilities, and there are also several suggested exploitation tieups along that line.

Allied Artists approaches "There's a Girl in My Heart" from the romantic angle in its press book. Ad illustrations play up the romance, the singing and dancing angles, "Sparking with song hits," "Loaded with love an' kisses," "Crammed with cuties." The main, oft-repeated catch phrase is "It's a sweetheart of a show." Story's action taking place in the late '90s, there is a nostalgic appeal in the listed oldtime songs and in the costumes worn by all cast members. Posters and lobby display cards pictorially serve as "come-ons" for the film's romance and nostalgia. The "leg art" appeal of the "cuties" receives a play in the scene cuts for newspaper publicity as well as in the ads and posters. Entire appearance and message to the public in the press book is that they will have a romantically enjoyable time when they see "There's a Girl in My Heart" and that was the intention.

An unmarried woman on the prowl for a rich husband is the theme of RKO's "Bride for Sale" and likewise the theme to which those in charge of the press book hew close to the line. Their task was to promote, through ads, posters and other accessories, the expectation in moviegoers that, by seeing the picture, they would treat themselves to an hour and a half of relaxing and restful laughter. And that idea has been handsomely put across. "Just for laughs" is the big-type headline over a number of the ads, posters and cards. Other catchlines that promise to increase the number of laughs per reel are: "She'd love to say yes to a man with a million,"—"Take our word for it . . . any resemblance between this picture and insanity is absolutely intentional." Pictorially, the ads and the posters make good use of the oldtime and surefire laugh-getter, the prattfall. Angles to appeal to the women are the romantic love interest suggested by all the publicity media, and the money-bags that erupt in hearts and dollar signs.

A Play for Italians

With the Italian picture, "Outcry" as his coming feature, Manager Bill Hurlbert of the Hippodrome, Gloversville, N. Y., made a play to attract patrons from the 10,000 Italian families living in the community through window cards in Italian stores, trailers in Italian and a bid to the members of the Italian-American Veterans Club.

'Jubilee' Premiere Week-Long Party

An all-out community celebration for one week highlighted the recent world premiere of Lippert Productions' "Square Dance Jubilee" in Fresno, Calif. Mayor Gordon C. Dunn made it official by proclaiming the week as "City of Fresno Square Dance Week." First-night showing of the variety musical took place at the Esquire, Starlite and Motor-In theatres.

Radio appearances and interviews featuring Les Gotcher, champion square dance caller, helped to maintain interest and enthusiasm. There were broadcasts from the three theatre's stages; 15-minute morning and afternoon radio interviews; an "on the street" interview with Gotcher in connection with Community Chest street dancing; two interviews on the "Lunch at Zombie Village" program, and a radio description of street dancing in front of the theatres.

First ticket to the premiere was presented to Mayor Dunn, and pictures of His Honor signing the "Square Dance" proclamation were prominently displayed in the theatres in advance of the premiere.

There were numerous promotional tieups. Merchants' window displays utilized stills. Shoe stores featured square dance shoes and western boots. Music stores cooperated with western record specials. Dress shops advertised square dance dresses, and there were displays of farm material in one store. Wire recorders and phonographs were displayed in the theatres, and four-minute recordings were made for Drive-Ins to take the place of trailers.

Books on how to square dance were distributed to members of the Folk Dance Council within a 25-mile radius of Fresno and to school kids.

U-I to World Premiere 3 Films in Jan.-Feb.

January and February will embrace the world premieres of three Universal-International productions, "South Sea Sinner," "Francis" and "The Kid from Texas." The company's studio publicity director, Al Horwits, planed out Sunday for St. Louis to complete arrangements for the debut there of "South Sea Sinner. National Exploitation Director Charles Simonelli and Midwest Exploiteer Ben Katz will join Horwits in St. Louis.

Simonelli and Horwits will then go to New Orleans to confer with David Stern, author of the novel, "Francis," on arrangements for the premiere there of his screen adaptation. Their next port of call will be Dallas where "The Kid from Texas," will have its debut. Horwits will then proceed to Washington and New York to confer on future openings of U-I pictures before returning to the coast studio.

Military Parade Marks 'Battleground' Premiere

A full scale military dress parade, first on Hollywood Boulevard since the end of World War II, preceded the West Coast premiere of MGM's "Battleground" at the Egyptian Theatre on Thursday night. The marching column of 600 men was headed by a 100-piece Army Band and color guard, and was reviewed in front of the theatre by ranking officers representing the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force, guests of Louis B. Mayer and Dore Schary.

The premiere was attended by a distinguished audience, including representatives of the four armed services, heads of civic and state organizations, and leaders and stars of the motion picture industry.

WEATHER WINS. The damsel above was supposed to wear lighter attire in Manager Eddie Miller's ballyhoo stunt for Paramount's "My Friend Irma." But, baby, it was cold outside when playdate arrived, hence the fur coat. Just the same, the stunt drew attention to the showing of the film at the Center Theatre in Buffalo.—BUF.

3 Fox Premieres For the Holidays

the Caravel, famous marine pageant, which takes place on Biscayne Bay.

On December 30 Miss Townsend will head a huge parade to the Miami Theatre where her picture premieres. She will be accompanied by the Orange Bowl Queen and take part in numerous radio interviews at the theatre. She will make a number of personal appearances at the Miami as well as the Miracle and Lincoln theatres, which are playing day-and-date in the city. She will also take part in other activities: guest of honor at the exclusive Surf Club Ball; Grand Marshal of the gigantic New Year's Eve Parade; and presentation of the football in the Orange Bowl game to the two captains of the teams engaged in the gridiron battle.

"Prince of Foxes" will have its American premiere Dec. 22 at the Roxy in New York under the sponsorship of the United Hospital Fund. "Twelve O'Clock High" will open in Los Angeles late next month, with plans for the opening currently being set on the picture.

Nurses to March for 'Foxes' Hospital Benefit

A parade of Army, Navy and civilian metropolitan hospital nurses will precede the gala benefit performance of "Prince of Foxes" at the Roxy Theatre Dec. 22 for the United Hospital Fund.

The nurses will lead a line of march from the island at Times Square to the doors of the Roxy, where kleig lights, radio broadcasts and television coverage will herald the American premiere of the 20th Century-Fox film starring Tyrone Power, Wanda Hendrix and Orson Welles. The nurses will be welcomed by several Hollywood actors and actresses in the Roxy lounge.

All proceeds from the initial showing of the picture will go toward the support of New York's 86 voluntary hospital members of the United Hospital Fund. The group is now conducting a campaign to raise $3,367,000.

Clough Promotes Sane Halloween

I.M.P.S. Member H. S. Clough, who manages the Chimes Theatre in Oakland, Calif., came in for some well-deserved publicity on his excellent work in promoting a sane Halloween among the children on College Avenue and vicinity.

"Mr. Clough, manager of the Chimes Theatre," said a front-page account of the evenings activities in the Claremont Press of Oakland, "served as general chairman of the Club's (College Avenue Commercial Club) Halloween committee, and upon him devolved the major responsibility of working out details of the big Fete." He was aided in the work by the club's president, Henry Morrill.

For a year, Brother Clough reports, he had been trying to get the community together on a campaign, following the lines for a sane Halloween he had tried out five years ago at the Lorin Theatre, and this year saw the fruition of his labors. Effectively aided by the College Avenue Commercial Club, he arranged with merchants to have 300 of their windows calcimined with pictures of Halloween ghosts and goblins, pumpkins, etc., by students of the Technical and Junior high schools. Actually but 276 of the 300 windows received the festive decorations, but many of the artists won one of the 40 prizes which the merchants had contributed. The Claremont Press devoted an entire column on its front page to the crowds which thronged the streets to view the paintings and the costume parade that followed. It devoted four columns on the same page to a picture of four girls painting two windows and a two-column cut to the junior high winner.

Children in Parade

Unable to get a band to head the parade, Brother Clough decided late in the afternoon to use a sound truck instead. The parade started, with about 15 children in costume following the truck. They called upon others to join them and by the time the procession had covered four blocks the paraders had lengthened out to cover two blocks. There followed dancing in the streets for which the music was furnished by a public address system. Public and individual comment indicated that the affair was highly successful.

"I hope next year," says Brother Clough, "to have a bigger and better Halloween Festival."

With his energy and friendly civic standing in the community there is no doubt that it will be bigger and better.

'Samson' Canadian Premiere Dec. 28

Canadian premiere of Paramount's "Samson and Delilah" will be held Dec. 28 at the Victoria Theatre, Toronto, with government dignitaries, leading figures of the press, radio and pulpit, stars and exhibitors in attendance. It will be an invitational affair.

A campaign similar to that under way in New York for the world premiere of the Cecil B. DeMille Technicolor film on Dec. 21 at the Paramount and Rivoli theatres, will be launched in Toronto. Max E. Youngstein, Paramount national advertising, publicity and exploitation director, was in Toronto recently laying plans for the premiere with Gordon Lightstone, the company's Canadian general sales manager, and J. J. Fitzgibbon, president of Famous Players Canadian.

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Pointers on Projection and Sound

Whenever a new screen is installed a piece of the same material should be set aside, if possible, and kept in a dark and dustless place. Thus protected, it will neither soil nor change color. It can then be pinned to the center of the screen from time to time, and white light projected. The comparison will show at once how far the screen has deteriorated, and how urgently cleaning or a new screen is needed.

For their own sakes if for no other reason projectionists should take down the exhaust ducts leading from the lamp houses every few months and clean them out. This precaution is exceptionally important during winter months, when projection room ventilation may not be of the best. The arcs generate both soot and poisonous gases. If the soot is allowed to clog the ducts the poisonous gases will not be exhausted efficiently, but seep into the projection room where they can be harmful to personnel.

Many theatres now follow the practice of raising sound volume somewhat during comedies or comic sequences so the audience won't lose entertainment because of their own laughter.

It is never wasteful but always wise to take a doubtful tube out of service immediately. It can be tested later. If found good, it can be put back and nothing is lost. But if it is not good and kept in service, the show may be lost.

Managers can help their projectionists and themselves by keeping careful watch on the quality of the sound, or having a sound checker do it. The projectionist cannot detect small faults in quality. His little monitor speakers may not reproduce them; the noise of his equipment in operation is confusing to accurate judgment; projection room acoustics are not the same as those of the theatre. Sound quality can be judged only from the auditorium. If it deteriorates, someone must tell the projectionist.

Emergency repairs can be speeded up, and audience dissatisfaction reduced, by supplying the projection room with one of the new soldering irons that heat instantly. The standard type may need five minutes or more to reach operating temperature—while patrons wait.

An utomobile or a vacuum cleaner may still give good service even if they are not in the best possible condition, but motion picture projection must be perfect. It delivers only illusion and any flaw can puncture that bubble.

Bigger B.O. 'Takes,' Better Relations

With so much complaining about business being "off," the following recital of conversations with two exhibitors—one a manager and the other heading a sizable chain—should serve to stimulate a bit of research on the part of distributors and exhibitors alike, to determine exactly what has been done, is being done or planned for the future to bolster sagging revenue.

I was bird-dogging for column material along Film Row of one of the nation's larger exchange centers when, quite by accident, I faced up with a friend of some 30 years' standing. Let's call him Jim for the very good reason that it's not his name and I know that he would prefer to remain anonymous. Jim is a real old timer with "show" experience covering 50 or more years of a three score and ten lifetime. He was active in the legitimate theatre in the days when Charles Frohman was at his peak. He entered the management ranks of movies and, when I first met him years back, held a division manager's post for one of the big distributing companies. Somehow or other the years were not kind and, despite an exemplary code of living, Jim's present post is that of managing a small neighborhood house.

Recently, an imposing, modern theatre—the very last word in magnificent construction—was erected some few blocks from Jim's enterprise. My "news nose" started quivering. Here was material for the column, so I asked, "How're things now that the new Blank has opened. Has it got you buying red ink?" He replied, "No, and I don't think it will. At least you can bet that it won't run me out of business." Then he went on to explain:

"Do you know that in spite of that beautiful theatre those fellows are spending all their time and money selling pictures? If they'd just think a bit and reason the many other things they have to give to a community that never dreamed such a magnificent edifice would be at their disposal and 'sell the theatre' they'd probably have me worried. But, as it is, every theatre has pictures to sell; so as long as they stay to that line, I'll get along OK."

Established the Empire as 'The Place to Go'

Then he proceeded to take me back along the colorful, fact-studded, trial-and-error leveled trail of his half century of experience. He painstakingly explained the fundamentals that went into the early building of public interest in the theatre and I found myself listening like a child-at-knee. He explained how many years ago Frohman, when that impresario first opened the Empire Theatre in New York, had given him the blueprint that he was using to hold the customers of his little theatre despite the opening of his elaborate and glamorous competitor. Seems that Frohman had proved to his own satisfaction that a theatre, in itself, possessed many factors that could be exemplified to the customers to the point where they took precedence in public fancy over and above the attractions it presented. According to Jim, Frohman did such a master job of establishing the Empire as "the place to go" that stars and owners of entertainment attractions were willing to make sacrifices in order to portray their wares in the reflection of the theatres' popularity.

Jim went on to illustrate how he is applying the old-fashioned formula to hold his own in a small house that lacks modern decor and embellishment but is meticulously attended, so far as cleanliness, courtesy, convenience and comfort are concerned, against the splendor, magnificence and run preference of his ornate and modern competitor.

"I make more fuss over a new light in the popcorn machine than they do over lighting effects costing thousands of dollars," he said. "I never allow a customer to take anything in the way of change or addition to the facilities of my theatre for granted. I make it a policy to see that, in my own infrequent absences from the floor, some staff member points out every new or changed feature to as many patrons as possible. We explain not only the item itself but why it was installed or changed and how we expect it to improve the service we render or add to the comfort or enjoyment they will experience. Nothing is too small for us to make a fuss over, and perhaps we're inclined to overdo the job a bit; but it seems to me that it pays to make the customers understand that everything in and about the theatre is a purposeful attempt to add to their comfort and increase their enjoyment. We even go so far as to solicit advice and opinions from our patrons, and you'd be surprised how frequently, after we've explained the

Theatre Management in Action

Baseball Proves Real McCoy To Boost Trade, McCoy Finds

Down in Augusta, Ga., the citizens are just as crazy about baseball as they are in a certain borough across the East River from New York which is known as Brooklyn.

And down in Augusta, Ga., P. E. McCoy, city manager for the Georgia Theatre Company, is not a man to pass up any bets. So when "The Stratton Story" came his way, McCoy tied in with the local love of the game and started a campaign, along with the Augusta Chronicle to pick the most popular player. The fans were to vote in a ballot box at the ball park during four consecutive nights and just so they wouldn't forget about the contest, nor the fact that "The Stratton Story" was playing, there was a whale of a newspaper series, tied-in with art, and free time over Radio Station WBBQ.

Theatre ushers, wearing shoulder pads carrying the title of the film and playdate, were stationed at the ball park entrance each night during the voting period to distribute the ballots to the fans as they filed out. Two more ushers in uniform walked the diamond before the game carrying a 12-foot banner which also told the audience where "The Stratton Story" could be seen.

And the winning player received a trophy at the ball park with WBBQ broadcasting the presentation from the home plate. MGM's Jimmy Stewart, star of the tale, sent a telegram of congratulations.

McCoy's ballyhoo and extra effort is not unusual as far as Georgia Theatres is concerned. Other houses are also pushing to hold business and to boost it.

At the Ritz in Macon, Manager L. S. Smith, Jr., went all out for his new serial, "Batman and Robin," by tieing in with a local merchant to present two bikes, one for a boy and one for a girl, to two youngsters selected from a group which attended all 15 chapters. The contest was plugged through special trailers, window cards, heralds.

In Columbus, Ga., Manager Edmond Anthony of the Bradley Theatre and Columbia Exploiteer A. G. Henderson, put over a Roy Rogers Riding Club and an all-day Roy Rogers jamboree. Using half-page ads on Sunday followed by four quarter-page ads and radio time and tied in with the local Sears store which gave window space. The theatre set up dummies dressed as Rogers in its lobby and started the Jamboree off at 9 Friday morning with the showing of a Rogers feature. The audience was made up of youngsters who had visited Sears' youth department during the 10 days prior to the showings and who had been given free tickets to the show.

After the morning showing the kids went back to the Sears store at 4 P.M. for free souvenirs and one lucky youngster got to talk to Rogers over long distance.

Goldman Named Music Hall Manager

Sydney M. Goldman, former manager of the Center Theatre in Rockefeller Center, became house manager of Radio City Music Hall this week, succeeding Fred A. Cruise, who died last week. J. Paul Dauer, treasurer of the Center, moved up to replace Goldman as Center manager. Goldman started in show business as an usher at the Roxy; Dauer joined the Center staff as assistant treasurer during "The Great Waltz" stage show engagement.

Robert E. Lee Joins Rosenfield Theatres

Robert E. Lee, who formerly managed the Sterling theatres in Seattle and has done exploitation and publicity in New York, Kansas City and Washington, D. C., has joined J. J. Rosenfield to do exploitation and advertising for Rosenfield's theatres—the Post, Granada, Liberty and East Sprague Drive-In, in Spokane, and the great Inland Empire of the State of Washington.

Singer Style Show

The Singer Sewing Machine Company sponsored a fall and winter style show at Schine's Auburn Theatre, Auburn, N. Y., in which each entrant made her own costume on a Singer machine at one of the Singer sewing classes. It proved a fine goodwill stunt for the theatre and the company. Auburn merchants donated prizes for the best costumes which were worn by 30 or more models, most of whose relatives and friends turned out, swelling the evening's box-office receipts. —BUF.

purpose of some slight change or addition, they compliment us on our progressiveness and tell us how much they appreciate the fact that we seem to be constantly striving to make our place nicer and better. To me it seems foolish to ever let a patron think that anything about the theatre 'just happened.' I make it a definite aim to make them understand that 'we did it especially for you.'

"Of course, pictures are important. But it's only a matter of days until I'll be playing the same pictures they play and, aside from that, the fellows downtown played 'em first. There's really not much difference between second and third run anymore and, while I'm sure that all my folks have been or will soon go to see the new glamor spot, I'm equally sure that, unless those fellows wake up and start selling their theatre, all my friends, and I'm sure that most of my customers are my friends, will be content to wait until the pictures are played 'at home.' You know I like to think of my theatre as being 'home' when it comes to entertainment for the folks I cater to!"

Mind if I ask that you read what's been written again? And, if you can find anything wrong with my friend Jim's reasoning, Ill gladly take your application for admission to the asylum of your choice. To the reasoning of this writer Jim's attitude toward competition, his policies for conduct of his theatre and, above all, his faith in the success of such attitude and policies, is an all-time record for the common-sense showmanship course. Coming, as it does, at a time when just about everybody is clearance-crazy and availability-asinine, it deserves emulation by theatre owners and managers from the immense and immaculate Radio City Music Hall of New York to the 68-seat Bunk House disgrace of Manitou Springs, Colo.

Jim's formula is, at one and the same time, the soundest of public relations programs, the most certain preventative against expensive, senseless and useless litigation and, by all means the surest builder of consistent, satisfied patronage. Stop and check right now. How close to Jim's standard is the conduct of your operation? How does your personal attitude and endeavor compare?

Correct at Once

Leaving Jim, I ambled on down the street and dropped in to visit the owner of a fair-sized circuit. Let's call this fellow Pete, again because that's not his name and he wouldn't want to be quoted. Salutations over, we got to talking about business conditions generally and the industry's complaint of the business drop in particular. Things had not been so good with him and he was marking big red figures up, due to weather conditions and other setbacks. Pete was at one time a really big executive of distribution and I wanted his advice to clear up some doubts about what I considered to be extremely bad business practice on the part of certain companies. Before I knew it, the conversation had taken a turn into details of a condition that I had long observed but never gave proper consideration. This is something for every distributor executive, particularly the big ones, to correct at once if their subordinates happen to come under the blanket of this complaint.

The discussion had gotten around to diminishing distributor revenue due to foreign ukases, etc., when Pete said, "They're all complaining about the drop in revenue but just what are any of them doing about it?" He went on:

"Admitted that I'm not a big buyer but my rentals do reach figures between $7,000 and $8,000 a week, and I believe I'm entitled to more consideration than the distributors give me, do you know that with the exception of the MGM and RKO companies there hasn't been a branch manager in this office for better than two years? Do you know that in many instances the distributing companies don't even bother to send a salesman in to solicit our business? They just fill in details on a contract form and drop it in the mail box. And, do you know what I do with those mailed contracts? I just throw them in the waste basket because I figure that any company that is so damn busy they can't afford the time of an account as satisfactory in every detail as ours has always been, just don't need our business."

He went on to tell me of one company that had changed managers several months and that the new incumbent—whose office is but a stone's throw from my friend's—had never even bothered to make his incumbency known.

My friend related the difference between the days of his own occupancy of a distribution post and the current attitude of branch managers. In the old days it was a "must" for every branch manager to be personally acquainted with every account on the books and to visit with those accounts, even in distant towns and cities, as frequently as possible. In no instance would the operator of 15 or more large theatres be overlooked for more than a 60-day interval. When I pointed out that it had been my observation that few branch managers had authority other than to carry the messages of New York executives and that most of them that I had visited were so busy on long distance and answering letters that little time was left for visiting, he came back with: "I know how busy they are, but I've yet to hear of a gin rummy game they couldn't find time to take on."

Well, I do agree that time should be found for the established local representative of big distribution companies to call on the larger accounts and make personal friends of the fellows who sign the checks. The salesman must, of course, still carry the order blanks, but it is highly advisable that some authority closer to the top be familiar with the personalities of these larger buyers of films in order to better understand and present arguments that are always rampant in doing business with quantity purchasers. The salesman, competent though he may be, cannot be expected to get the thorough understanding of basic differences that is possible for the manager. As a result, many well-grounded and deserving complaints suffer in transmission from buyer to salesman to sales manager to branch manager to New York executive. Vital differences become trivial as each party tries to paint the kind of picture that makes his own role as blameless as possible.

Another Family Washing

The complaining exhibitor, smarting under the sting of being ignored, considers himself justified in taking his case to the lawyers and another family washing appears on the public clothesline.

I believe my friend Pete's complaint warrants immediate action on the part of distributor sales executives. Instructions should be given at once for all branch managers to investigate details of exhibitor complaint as well as to "make time" for visits with the buyers of larger circuits and as many of the little chaps as possible. The practice should result in a lessening of the burdensome and expensive litigation. And its a cinch it will result in improving relations, mayhap revenue and the selling of more pictures.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Tight Little Island

Univ.-Int'l. Comedy 81 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Hilarious byplay on simple plot about a whiskey-starved Scottish village.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Addition to a genre: sly little British comedy. Little star value but exploitable comic situation.

Cast: Basil Radford, Catherine Lacey, Bruce Seton, Joan Greenwood, Wylie Watson, Gabrielle Blunt, Gordon Jackson, Jean Cadell, James Robertson Justice, Morland Graham and others. Credits: A J. Arthur Rank Presentation. A Michael Balcon Production. Director, Alexander Mackendrick. Screenplay, Compton Mackenzie and Angus Macphail. From the novel "Whiskey Galore" by Mackenzie. Photography, Gerald Gibbs.

Plot: A little Hebridean island that thrives on whiskey finds itself during the war suddenly without a dram. When a ship carrying 50,000 cases of the precious stuff founders on the rocks nearby and is abandoned, a fussy Englisman in charge of the Home Guard takes it upon himself to confiscte the cargo. The islanders beat him to it and win the ensuing chase and game of hide-the-bottles.

Comment: This is the sly little British comedy at just about its best. Those who like the genre, with the exception of those to whom the light and preponderant concern with alcohol is disturbing, will find the byplay on the simple plot hilarious. Further, if whiskey is anathema to some it is a theme to attract many who would not take a chance on tawney pipits, Irish priests and Welsh dames. In accordance with past style, this model has many delightful characterizations, no real stars; it is set in the scenic outcountry; and it enjoys touches of provincial dialect, dance and music. A couple of romances receive just the right amount of attention, one of them involving Joan Greenwood. Basil Radford leads the show as the unfortunate Englishman.

Black Midnight

Monogram Outdoor Drama 65 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: This home-spun little yarn of a boy and his horse hits all the proper chords for good entertainment. There's also a love story that patrons will find enjoyable.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: As a good average program picture, this should satisfactorily fulfill the requirements of its market. There is enough action to please the western fans, and it will have the natural appeal of a film about a horse.

Cast: Roddy McDowall, Lyn Thomas, Rand Brooks, Damian O'Flynn, Kirby Grant, Gordon Jones, Fay Baker. Credits: Producer, Lindsley Parsons. Director, Oscar Boetticher. Photography by William Sickner. Screenplay by Clint Johnston and Erna Lazarus from an original story by Clint Johnston.

Plot: A rancher and his young nephew are struggling to run the family ranch with the added burden of work left to them when the rancher's son ran away. When the son returns with a black stallion which he can't handle, the nephew buys the horse, tames him, and also successfully resists the efforts of the older and more dashing boy to take his girl.

Comment: This home-spun little story of a boy and his horse and his girl hits all the proper chords for good entertainment. Roddy McDowall is good as the boy who, although he hasn't outgrown the awkwardness of youth, takes a man's responsibilities. When the son intends to murder to cover up his past, McDowall, out of concern for his uncle, attempts to reason with the older boy and is severely beaten. Roddy puts the story across believably. Rand Brooks does well as the swashbuckling son. Damian O'Flynn is satisfactory as the rancher whose blindness to the faults of his son give the film a measure of suspense. The supporting cast delivers well and the direction is good.

Undertow

Univ-.Int'l Drama 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A good action melodrama that should have an easy time pleasing audiences in those situations where this type of film is best liked. Suspense and excitement.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Most exhibitors will find this a good weekend action offering or better-than-average support for a top feature.

Cast: Scott Brady, John Russell, Dorothy Hart, Peggy Dow, Bruce Bennett, Gregg Martell, Robert Anderson, Daniel Ferniel, Roc Hudson, Charles Sherlock, Ann Pearce, Robert Easton. Credits: Produced by Ralph Dietrich. Directed by William Castle. Screenplay by Arthur T. Horman and Lee Loeb. Story by Arthur T. Horman. Photography, Irving Glassberg. Special photography, David S. Horsley.

Plot: Former racketeer Scott Brady returns from the army determined to make a cleant start. In Chicago to marry his old sweetheart, Dorothy Hart, he is framed. While hiding out, he is befriended by Peggy Dow, whom he had met on the plane bound for the Windy City. It eventually develops that his framers are John Russell, a former racket associate, and Miss Hart, who plan to marry. Brady is cleared.

Comment: A good action melodrama that should have an easy time pleasing audiences in those situations where this type of film is best liked. The performances of Scott Brady, John Russell, Dorothy Hart and Peggy Dow are not exactly of hall-of-fame quality (Bruce Bennett as a police detective is the most natural and sincere), but they're sufficiently satisfactory to make believable the suspense and excitement that fills much of the 70-minute running time. Most exhibitors will find "Undertow" a good weekend action offering or better-than-average support for a top feature. Much of the action takes place in Chicago, and background scenes look like the real thing, which they probably are. Credit Ralph Dietrich for excellent production values and William Castle for fast-paced direction.

Mafia

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

Lux Film Drama 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A powerful portrait of the bleak, backward south of Italy and its bloody private law.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Excellent for discriminating patrons, nice on a double feature for general audiences.

Cast: Massimo Girotti, Jone Salinas, Camillo Mastrocinque, Peppino Spadaro, Saro Urzi, Ignazio Balsamo, Manda De Santis. Credits: Producer, Luigi Rovere. Director, Pietro Germi. Scenario, Federico Fellini and Giuseppe Mangioni. Photography, Leonida Barboni. English subtitles, Clare Catalano.

Plot: A young magistrate, lone representative of the law in a Sicilian village, finds himself up against the bloody private law of the Klan-like Mafia and the tradition of passivity in the people. He is about to admit defeat and leave until one of his friends is killed. His bravery and sincerity finally convert the leader of the Mafia. The magistrate's decision to stay, incidentally, destroys his hope of taking away the unhappy wife of the crooked local baron.

Comment: A powerful portrait of the bleak, backward south of Italy, the sort of milieu in which a Mafia can exist, is etched in the best recent film from that country and one that departs from the postwar theme of its previous artistic successes. The lead characterizations, the well photographed background of the stark land and the hard, resigned faces of its peasants bear out the honesty and intensity of the script. If the ending, which may after all be construed as more hopeful than final, seems contrived, plot is not of greatest importance here. The portrait has been drawn, making "Mafia" an excellent offering for discriminating patrons and a nice one on double feature for general audiences. Massimo Girotti received the "Best Actor" award from Italy's Board of Review for his role as the judge.

Warner Bros. Comedy 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) As frothy as the bubbles in Jane Wyman's bathtub scene, this airy comedy will probably rank as one of the funniest of the year. The gags are sharp and fast-breaking, and slapstick piles bellylaughs on the chuckles. It will leave them laughing.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Academy Award Winner Jane Wyman should draw in any situation, and the Dennis Morgan name will do its share. This package of name and fun should play to good grosses generally.

Plot: After passing a critical character test and receiving an endowment for her Buyer's Research Institute, a young woman tries to explain where she spent the night when she was lost in a storm on Long Island Sound Attempting to save the endowment for the nstitute, she gets into some madcap situations when she tries frantically to prove her story, that she was picked up by a one-man submarine.

Comment: Audiences will do much more than chuckle at this frothy comedy; the susceptible will roar. Laughs are frequent and hearty from the opening shots, which set the situation on which the comedy hinges: the absolute integrity of the Buyer's Research Institute. Slogans on truth and honesty are set in the concrete of the building and into the floor of the foyer. Within the building, weird and zany contrivances are testing a range of products from paint brushes to shoes, and it is clear that the slightest defect in a product will bar it forever from the prized approval of the institute. When director Jane Wyman, who personifies the principles on which the organization stands, is awarded the championship plaque of the Liars Club for her story of where she spent the night when she was lost in a storm on Long Island sound, the fun becomes riotous. Those responsible for the special effects deserve credit for an ingenuity that sets an atmosphere conducive to laughter. Jane Wyman and Dennis Morgan are a strong comedy team, getting full value from every line and situation, while Eve Arden gives close support. Tom Tully pulls a big share of laughs as the fumbling detective who uses everything from can-openers to dynamite, in his efforts to help Miss Wyman prove her story. Robert Douglas is excellent as the eccentric millionaire who has difficulty giving away enough money, and Allyn Joslyn scores as Jane Wyman's stuffy fiance. Producer Harry Kurnitz has turned out a beautifully set comedy, with fine production values throughout. Able direction by Michael Curtiz holds the pace of the picture at high pitch to the end. This zany package of fun should play to good grosses in all situations.

Strangers in the House

Lopert Films Drama 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Adroitly conceived, directed and acted drama of juvenile delinquency in Paris which is made solidly interesting and occasionally exciting audience fare by the late Raimu's brilliant acting flair.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A "must" for art and foreign-film theatres, where it should cash in solidly, and worth dualling in first-runs and neighborhoods. Exhibitors should build campaigns on the name and fame of Raimu and that of Murder-Mystery Novelist Georges Simenon.

Cast: Raimu, Juliette Faber, Jacques Baumer, Jean Tissier, Lucien Coedel, Noel Roquevert, Helena Manson, Andre Reybas, Mouloudji, Marc Dolnitz, Tania Fedor, Jacques Denoel, Pierre Ringel, Jacques Gretillat. Credits: Directed by Henri Decoin. Adapted from the Georges Simenon novel by Henri-Georges Clouzot. Photographed by Kruger. English titles by Herman G. Weinberg.

Plot: Raimu, once the most brilliant lawyer in Paris but now a drunken hermit (caused by his wife's leaving him for another man 20 years before), regains some of his brilliance when his young, long-neglected daughter becomes embroiled with a gang of youthful delinquents and is implicated in the murder of a man they had badly injured with a stolen auto and kept hidden in Raimu's home. Raimu quietly investigates the murder, learns the victim had been blackmailing the gang, and appears in court for his daughter's lover, leader of the gang, who is charged with the murder. Raimu pins the crime on a jealous youth secretly in love with his daughter.

Comment: An adroitly conceived, directed and acted drama of present-day youthful delinquents in Paris which the extraordinary acting ability of Raimu makes into a solidly interesting and occasionally exciting picture. The murder-mystery story is not the best in which Raimu has been seen in America but it demonstrates anew the late great actor's flair for characterization and is decidedly to be seen by his admirers. The group of young delinquents—Juliette Feder, Andre Reybas, Mouloudji, Marc Donitz and the others—give a good account of themselves, helping to sustain audience interest among the grown-up cast members. Prosecutor Jacques Baumer and Jacques Gretillat as the judge, are especially worthy of praise. Direction and photography are excellent. Raimu's artistic standing makes "Strangers in the House"—one of his latest, if not his last, picture—a "must" for art and foreign-film theatres where it should cash in solidly, and worth dualling with a Hollywood production in first-run and neighborhood houses. Exhibitor's should build their campaigns on the name and fame of Raimu and of Georges Simenon as France's greatest writer of murder and mystery novels.

'Adam and Evelyne'

Jock MacGregor's prediction (STR, May 21, 1949) of high grosses in Britain depended upon the great popularity there of Stewart Granger and Jean Simmons, but while the success may be less smashing here, both performers are well known. Furthermore, it's Granger's best material in some time and Simmons reveals a definite flair for comedy. The story is about a gambler who finds himself playing father to a young girl brought up in an orphanage; love and reform ensue. "Adam and Evelyne" is good light fare with nothing peculiarly British about it but the accents. A J. Arthur Rank presentation. Released through Universal-International. 92 mins.

The Facts of Love

Oxford Films Comedy 80 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Comes close to top-flight Sydney Box production efforts and will amuse and entertain all who see it with its light comedy, evoking chuckles and belly laughs at some of the near-risque dialog.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Once in the theatre, audiences will enjoy this comedy. That leaves to exhibitors the task of getting them in. There is no American draw in marquee names and managers should stress heavily the comedy, the children's desire to learn more about love at first hand and the fact that Sydney Box was also the producer of "Quartet" and "Don't Take It to Heart."

Cast: Gordon Harker, Betty Balfour, Jimmy Hanley, Carla Lehmann, Hubert Gregg, Jill Evans, Henry Kendall, Dinah Sheridan, Megs Jenkins, Noel Gordon, Guy Middleton, Aubrey Mallalieu. Credits: Produced by Sydney Box. Directed by Henry Cass. Screenplay by Muriel and Sydney Box from a story by Denis and Mabel Constanduros. Photography by Ernest Palmer and Nigel Huke.

Plot: Gordon Harker and his wife, Betty Balfour, unable to get either their son or daughter to accompany them on a Mediterranean cruise, unknown to their children, go instead to a former vacation spot, having postcards mailed from the vessel. Daughter Carla Lehmann refused to go, just having become engaged to Hubert Gregg, and son Jimmy Hanley has become fascinated by Jill Evans who, very willing to teach him the facts of love, takes him to a houseboat where they run into her husband looking for grounds for divorce. Carla and Hubert start out to learn a few pre-marital facts about love, but the unexpected return of the parents leads to many comedy situations.

Comment: This is a second-drawer Sydney Box production effort, which is not far below top-flight Box pictures, and will amuse and entertain all who see it. There are a number of delicious light comedy situations, just skirting the risque, and others broad enough to garner some belly-laughs, as it did when caught at the New York Embassy Cinema. Direction and photography are first rate. The acting of Harker and Miss Balfour as the parents, makes for delightful comedy, though their English accent, along with that of the rest of the cast, is a little thick for American ears, which miss many words. Built for laughing purposes, the film sidesteps any serious consequences to the children's quest for love information, but gives to the dramatic situations that evolve upon the return of the parents a light, often droll, touch that keeps chuckles and laughs chasing each other over the faces of patrons. All members of the cast turn in very good performances.

Prelude to Madness

Lux Film Drama 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An intelligent adaptation of a tragic story, perhaps too slow for some but with romantic appeal for women.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Rather good for discriminating audiences with the names of Tolstoy and Beethoven to help.

Cast: Roldano Lupi, Clara Calamai, Jean Servais. Credits: Director, Gianni Franciolini. Scenario, Guido Piovene and Ivo Perilli. From "The Kreutzer Sonata" of Leon Tolstoy. Music includes the "Kreutzer Sonata" of Ludwig van Beethoven. Photography, Carlo Montuori. English adaptation and titles, Clare Catalano.

Plot: A prominent doctor becomes increasingly jealous of his wife's association as an accompanist with a famous violinist and in a desperate climax that keeps the audience wondering whom he will try to kill, does away with the lady and himself.

Comment: This one has the names of Tolstoy and Beethoven to help it, for it is taken from the former's story "The Kreutzner Sonata," which calls for the latter's music. More restless audiences may find it moves too slowly, but to discriminating ones it will appear intelligent treatment of very perceptive material. The romantic complication extends the appeal among women. The performers are very good. The same material received good treatment in France in 1938 and was used in French and Russian silents, all of which attests its popularity.

A follow-up to Republic's successful "Wake of the Red Witch" is being prepared by Writer John K. Butler. Associate Producer Edmund Grainger plans to put the picture in work early next year as one of the studio's major productions. Although no cast has been set, a camera crew will go to Java for authentic background shots as soon as the screenplay is ready.

Filmakers' initial RKO production will be "Nice Girl," which deals with the psychological effect on a small-town girl after she has become the victim of a sex crime. The screenplay by Collier Young and Malvin Wald, who are co-partners with Ida Lupino in the company, is based on material obtained from police files. Miss Lupino will direct.

Over at Columbia Celeste Holm is being tested for the leading role in "Born Yesterday," the studio's million-dollar property. The story was originally purchased for Rita Hayworth, who cannot make it for obvious reasons.

Producers Pine and Thomas are having two screenplays readied for shooting in the near future, "The Barbarians" and "High Venture," both to be filmed in Technicolor. Will Price and Winston Miller are working on the former and Lewis R. Foster is writing the latter, all for Paramount release.

Producers Jack Skirball and Bruce Manning have signed Robert Young to co-star with Bette Davis in their RKO picture "The Story of a Divorce." The script is being written by Manning with Curtis Bernhardt set to direct and filming due to get underway the first week in January.

Universal-International has concluded a deal with Rose Tourney officials whereby the final reel of the Technicolor picture "Rose Queen" will have the actual scenes of the New Year's Day Tournament of Roses parade in Pasadena. Actual production, however, will not be started by Producer Ralph Dietrich until early next year.

Charles Korvin replaces John Ireland as Evelyn Keyes' husband in the presently shooting Columbia film "The Killer That Stalked New York." Reason for the switch was that the part called for a Continental type leading man. Korvin joins a cast which includes William Bishop and Lola Albright. Robert Cohn produces, Earl McEvoy directing on location in New York.

William Demarest's option was exercised by Paramount for two more years. This means that Demarest's contract extends his services to the studio for a total of eight years, having first been pacted in 1944.

With the final screenplay completed, Producer Walter Mirisch has set "Hiawatha," Monogram's next Cinecolor production, for an early January start. Mirisch leaves to scout locations in Minnesota, where he plans to film all exteriors.

Robert Thomsen, former writer-director of Broadway stage productions, has been signed by Dore Schary to produce "Troubled Spring" for MGM. This is the first assignment for Thomsen, who joined the studio last year as assistant to Producer Edwin H. Knopf.

One of the first Gene Autry starrers for Columbia for 1950-51 will be "Indian Territory" from an original by Norman Hall. But before that one starts Autry is scheduled to make "Beyond the Purple Hills" set for December.

One of the top starring roles in "I'll Get You For This," the Joe Kaufman Productions film, goes to George Raft. Screenplay is being readied by William Bowers based on the James Hadley Chase original story.

Comedy and Action Make Money, Says Gottlieb

"I've made 25 pictures and all of them made money. They made money because millions of people liked them. If you can keep an audience on the edge of their seats or roll 'em in the aisles, patrons will line up in the street to buy tickets."

Alex Gottlieb, producer who joined RKO Radio after a number of highly successful years with Warner Bros. and who is known as the "Little Dynamo" around the RKO Radio lot, is a firm believer in comedy and action for top box-office results.

Asked to outline his ideas on high-yielding product, the producer said: "From the studio's standpoint, the budget should be kept well under the potentialities of the picture. From the exhibitor's standpoint, that budget should go into production values and entertainment. There is no excuse for a dull picture."

Alex Gottlieb

Gottlieb, who believes stars should be used in the type of picture their fans expect to see them in, will soon begin shooting "Macao," coast of China melodrama. "This script is tailored for Robert Mitchum and Jane Russell," he said. "It has new plot twists, the modern elements of the chase, humor, sex, and it's loaded with action. 'Macao' will do business. People will like it."

At present Gottlieb wants four new faces for his forthcoming Technicolor musical, "Two Tickets to Broadway." To the exhibitor he says: "Send me a photograph and a short biography of any girl you think we can use. She should be able to sing or dance, or have some acting ability. Maybe we can find the shapeliest usherette in America. I'll be waiting to hear from you at the RKO Studios, 780 N. Gower St,. Hollywood, Calif. I mean it."

The Archers Plan To Produce in Canada

Plans for the inauguration of film production at Toronto by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, who produce pictures in England as The Archers, were announced this week by F. J. Lyle, Ontario government spokesman.

Lyle revealed that two British studio officials, Stephen Gray and Desmond Dew, had been in Toronto for a month to make a survey of facilities and arrangements, and that Powell and Pressburger were scheduled to leave London for Canada shortly after the middle of December. Purpose of the move is to beat British taxes.—TOR.

'Here Lies Love' In Three Parts

United Artists' "Here Lies Love," now in production, has split into three separate units for several days of shooting. The main company remains at Motion Picture Center, with Robert Young and Betsey Drake working under Director James V. Kern. A second unit, under Assistant Director Maurie Suess, is shooting on location at Malibu Beach, with a group of supporting players. The third unit, supervised by Film Editor Walter Thompson, is filming auto chase sequences at Palos Verdes. Harry M. Popkin is the producer.

Hayward Incorporates Associated Film Artists

Star-Producer Louis Hayward announced last week that he had incorporated himself under the name of Associated Film Artists which will handle his production and commercial activities. He will use his corporation to co-finance two foreign productions in which he will be co-producer as well as star. Hayward is currently co-starring with Patricia Medina in Columbia's "Fortunes of Captain Blood."

Eleanor Parker Recovers, Resumes Role in Film

Following confinement in bed with a severe cold and bronchitis, Eleanor Parker has returned to Warner Bros. to finish her role in Milton Sperling's "The Rock Bottom," after which she will take a long rest at home with her daughter Susan. The star is expecting her second child in April.

'Dragger Captain' To be Cooper Vehicle

"Dragger Captain," based on a series of articles in The New Yorker by Joseph Mitchell about a New England fishing boat skipper, is being prepared as a Gary Cooper vehicle at Warner Bros. Melvyn Levy is writing the screenplay, and Anthony Veiller will produce.

Springsteen Assigned Film

Republic at the weekend announced that R. G. Springsteen would direct its "Port of Missing Men," John K. Butler's original screenplay which goes into production on Dec. 12. Sidney Picker will be associate producer.

Box-Office Slants

Just a Big Simple Girl

actress and her leading man will interest patrons (feminine mainly) who make up the clientele of foreign-language theatres.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: While there is little if any box-office magic in names for the marquee, foreign-film exhibitors should draw paying audiences by playing up the typically French love story, the wit and wry humor with which it is told.

Cast: Madeleine Solonge, Jean Desailly, Raymond Roulean, Andree Clement, Jacques Francois, Gabrielle Dorziat. Credits: Presented by United Artists. Released by Famous Pictures. Directed by Jacques Manuel. Screenplay by Andre Roussin. Photography by M. Kruger. English titles by Harry Goldstone.

Plot: Stage Producer Raymond Roulean engages Jean Desailly, handsome young French actor just back from Hollywood, to play the young lover of Star Madeleine Solonge, but warns him she will fall madly in love with him—for the run of the play—and then tire of him, just as she had of Roulean himself. Their torrid love affair ends as Roulean had predicted. Madeleine professes jealousy of Andree Clement, pianist, whom Dasailly is instructing in acting. They quarrel, she lets the young student, Jacques Francois, spend the night in her room, then tells him to forget it. Roulean saves Jacques from suicide, and upbraids Mlle. Solonge for her love trickery. She says Roulean is the only man she ever loved, and they begin anew.

Comment: Very Gallic in its love story and in the acting, this well produced, directed and photographed French picture is for the art and foreign-language film theatres where it will doubtless give satisfaction, for it is told with much wit and sardonic humor. Mlle. Solonge and Desailly give deft and well-rounded performances as the lovers, as does Roulean as the sardonic producer. Gabrielle Dorziat, an experienced and popular French actress, is fine in a lesser role, and Andree Clement, more photogenic than Solonge, acts pleasantly and plays the piano well. No particular sympathy is aroused in audiences for any of the characters unless it is young Francois, so madly in love he attempts suicide when he discovers Solonge was but playing at love with him.

And Baby Makes Three

Columbia Comedy 84 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Divorce and its effect on family life is given a new twist and turned into a bright, entertaining picture for the whole family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Has the appeal and marquee draw to score heavily at the box-office.

Cast: Robert Young, Barbara Hale, Robert Hutton, Janis Carter, Nicholas Joy, Lloyd Corrigan, Howland Chamberlin, Melville Cooper, Louis Currie, Grandon Rhodes, Katharine Warren, Wilton Graff, Michael Cisney, Joe Sawyer, James Cardwell. Credits: Directed by Henry Levin. Story and screenplay by Lou Breslow and Joseph Hoffman. Photography, Burnett Guffey. Produced by Robert Lord. A Santana Production.

Plot: Three days after her divorce, a young woman about to marry a socialite faints at her wedding ceremony. From then on it's a question of waiting for the baby to arrive and of her ex-hubsand's desire to win her back. Eventually she discovers that she isn't going to have a baby and that she still loves her ex-husband, so all ends well.

Comment: The story of divorce and its effect on family life is given a new twist in this entertaining comedy. Though seemingly a dramatic subject, clever scripting makes this a natural for laughs, and wise casting and competent direction make it a perfect vehicle for the whole family. Robert Young delivers a delightful comedy performance as the ex-husband about to become a father. He romps through his role with all the zaniness the script calls for. Barbara Hale is competent and attractive as the woman both men want. A looker who leaves no doubt as to why they fight over her. Members of the supporting cast are all splendid, too, among them Janis Carter as the other woman; Billie Burke and Nicholas Joy as the very social mother and father of Robert Hutton, the other man, and Lloyd Corrigan as the doctor. Henry Levin's direction takes full advantage of the daring lines and the situations, giving the picture that added appeal, which if taken full advantage of in its exploitation, should help it score heavily at the box-office. Production was handled by Robert Lord.

Fisher Scripts 'Bimini Run'

Steve Fisher is presently at work on the screenplay of the Howard Hunt novel "Bimini Run," which Anthony Veiller has been assigned to produce. Story is a dramatic tale of a chartered fishing boat between Florida and the West Indies.

VIEWS ON NEW SHORT SUBJECTS

THE FIGHT FOR BETTER SCHOOLS (20th-Fox) March of Time No. 10. 20 mins. Documenting how the citizens of one typical community, Arlington County, Va., are revitalizing their educational system—legislation, bond issue, new school board, etc.—this film amounts to an A-B-C lesson in a field the importance of which is now spotlighted by the international war of ideas. Brief glances are also taken at the progress in other areas, including Arkansas, Delaware and Long Island, and the work being done by the recently-formed National Citizens' Commission for the Public Schools. Exhibitors may well act on this one. Release date, 9/30/49.

SHADOWS ON THE SNOW (20th-Fox—9803) Movietone Specialty. 9 mins. Arne Sucksdorff, the Swede whose camera work sans dialog won note in "Symphony of a City" and others in this series, follows a hunter and his child as they stalk a wild bear. Discretion leads them finally to turn back empty-handed. Especially good for art houses. Release date, Sept. '49.

AHOY, DAVY JONES (20th-Fox—9201) Movietone Adventure. 11 mins. The diving bells, suits and other methods man has used throughout history to explore below the ocean's surface are shown at Weekiwachee Springs, Fla., and described by George Carson Putnam. Release date, Oct. '49.

FASHIONS OF YESTERYEAR (20th-Fox—9602) Feminine World. 8 mins. Ilka Chase wrote and narrates this survey of all kinds of clothing in 1900, 1920, 1929 and other periods. Fashion having the sway it does, at least in the more urban areas, this reel could figure in a tie-in. Release date, Nov. '49.

VACATION AT DEL MAR (Col.—1858) Screen Snapshots. 10½ mins. George Raft, Alan Curtis, J. Carroll Naish and Marshall Thompson pitch horseshoes, swim and dive at the Del Mar Hotel California resort spot. Release date, 5/12/49.

RACING GREYHOUNDS (Col.—1808) World of Sports. 9½ mins. Bill Stern follows the full-blooded dogs from the pup stage to the big races in Miami. Release date, 5/26/49.

RASSLIN' RIOT (Col.—1809) World of Sports. 8½ mins. The intricacies—and humor—of professional wrestling are demonstrated by Abe Stein and Stu Hart and described by Bill Stern. Release date, 6/23/49.

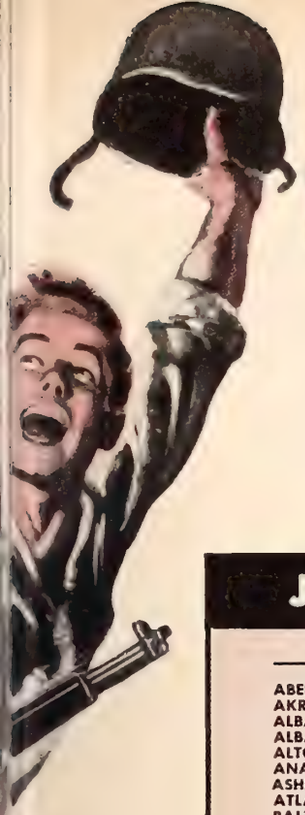
"Ah-h! Those M-G-M Friendship Meetings will make this Xmas a very happy occasion!"

You'll meet a lot of wonderful guys and a gal named Denise.

A MESSAGE FROM YOUR M-G-M BRANCH!



"INVITATIONS HAVE BEEN MAILED! If yours gets lost, come anyhow!"

DEAR FRIENDS: We had the pleasure a few months ago at a previous "Friendship Meeting" of greeting many of our customers whom we do not get a chance to see often enough. Another opportunity presents itself. Because "Battleground" is such a sensational success at the Astor, N. Y.,showmen everywhere have expressed a desire to see it as soon as possible. We decided that for your convenience the happiest way to do this was to extend the Trade Shows to cities nearer your home where this mighty attraction will be shown to you in theatres. It will not be shown in Projection Rooms so that we urge you to arrange to attend one of the many theatre showings listed on the next page. We're going to cover a lot of territory personally to see our friends and it will be a privilege to do so because the last time the attendance and the response were so heartening. Please make every effort to come. You'll see a great picture and we'll have a chance to see you again. Yours for more "Friendship Meetings" in our industry.

Sincerely yours,

M-G-M BRANCH MANAGERS AND THEIR STAFFS

For many a long year production, and production-distribution, have carried the scepter, and the official spokesman for the industry has been a producer, the head of a distributor-producer concern, or a representative of either or both.

For almost as many years there have been exhibitors who continued to claim that since far more money was represented in theatre investments than in production and distribution put together, this was simply a case of the tail wagging the dog. But it probably was more than that. Something like the usual result when a highly organized minority squares off against a loosely-knit majority, for instance. Anyway, it now is becoming apparent that the scepter is passing into the hands of exhibition—as a result of divorcement.

It remains to be seen whether exhibition will or can bring forth a Mr. Speaker who will talk for the motion picture industry on matters of general import to the public at large. Certainly the exhibition branch, with its years of vivid example of the power of an organized minority, should be aware of the advantages of good organization within its own ranks. There are some indications that exhibitors are taking a more active interest in their organizations. Gatherings on the national and local level of exhibitor outfits have been larger this past year than in some time. Issues that cut across the lines of individual organization setups seem to be getting more attention, as evidenced by some of the forays against amusement taxes.

Now, more than ever, exhibition needs good organization, for with the greater power also goes greater responsibility. And expanded membership, as well as enlightened leadership, is in order.

More Product?

As the time nears for Paramount, producer and distributor, to go its separate way from theatre affiliation, the company's studio head, Henry Ginsberg, announces a production schedule that is heavier than that observed for several years. There will be more pictures made than last year and the year before.

This week, also, Andy Smith, 20th-Fox chief of distribution, told a gathering of exhibitors in New Orleans that his company next year will release more than the 24 "A" pictures offered during the current year.

The indications, thus, are that the U. S. industry will speed up releases and if it does there will be many exhibitors to cheer. Because the film bookers have been operating in a very tight market for quite a while now and many of them claim that theatre attendance would improve were there an easier product situation enabling more selectivity for the particular situation's booking needs.

Wonder if this indicated decision to step up the flow of product is due in some measure to the exhibitors' move to set up financing for independent producers?

Improve the Package

The usual seasonal slump hits the business of theatres in all sections of the land. A drop in attendance is always a mighty serious thing, and currently there are many theatremen who claim the figures show the decline is more severe than in many a year. (Of course, all—or nearly so—add that "when you get a big picture the people come out").

One thing there is that all theatremen can be assured of—and that is the surest way to make an article sell better is to wrap it up in a more attractive package. Merchandising, it's called in the general field of commerce. But in theatre business the term is still "Showmanship."

This issue features our The Motion Picture Theatre section, published every fourth week. It calls attention to that very important phase of showmanship—which is quality presentation with the aid of high-class projection and sound, and patron-convenience with the newest and most attractive furnishings.

Some of the smartest theatre operators in the country are convinced that you'll not be buying equipment any cheaper for quite a spell. So you won't be smart to delay any needed refurbishing of the plant on the score of anticipated lower purchase prices.

It is a far wiser course to give your product every possible chance of selling itself by attractive packaging than to cheapen it by throwing in "added attractions" or giveaways. There's some good product coming up. The turnout for bigger attractions right now—seasonal slump to the contrary notwithstanding—proves that the public still likes movies. Showmanship can give business the needed tonic by making movie-going more attractive, comfortable and exciting with dress-up of those houses which are showing signs of wear and tear in their decorations, furnishings and projection apparatus.

WHAT'S NEWS
In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

In Toledo, Balaban and Katz's Princess employed two members of the local IATSE projectionists' union and two non-members. Result: A labor squabble which came before the Cleveland labor board which in turn referred it to the National Labor Relations Board. Importance: When the NLRB takes over a case it presupposes that the industry involved is in interstate commerce. Such a designation opens the possibility that a single theatre operation comes under interstate commerce regulations, such as minimum wages and hours. Up to now the NLRB reportedly has kept out of theatre labor squabbles on the ground that they did not involve anything crossing state lines, but the NLRB attorneys are arguing that the makeup of distribution and exhibition involves a film traveling from one state to another and hence exhibition is an interstate operation in effect.

Meanwhile divorce and divestiture was proceeding as the result of the government anti-trust suit. In the northwest, Hamrick-Evergreen split with Hamrick taking over four houses while Evergreen, in which 20th Century-Fox is interested, takes over the remainder. In the south, Paramount gained full ownership of various Wilby-Kincey corporations for $7,700,000 and some theatre swapping, acquiring all told around 104 theatres under outright ownership, all but 54 of which it must resell under the terms of the consent decree. Recent Paramount information indicates that United Paramount Theatres, the twin born of the consent decree, which is to be wholly independent of the new Paramount Pictures Corporation, will have some 508 wholly-owned theatres which it is allowed to keep under the consent decree. United Paramount takes over the circuit Jan. 1, 1950.

Meanwhile the new Video Independent Theatres, composed largely of former Griffith employes, and under the leadership of President Henry S. Griffing, bought 47 Oklahoma and Texas theatres from the Griffith circuit and immediately installed an employe benefit program.

In Toronto the IATSE local was opposing, along with many a citizen, the possibility of Sunday movies. In Indiana Attorney General Robert L. Larson was telling county attorneys to be sure that bank night was being operated in accordance with the state supreme court ruling which is: You don't have to buy a ticket to participate.

Meanwhile Iowa-Nebraska Allied was urging distributors to spread their magazine advertising over a longer period and to include farm journals so that rural areas and late subsequent-runs could get the benefit of the lift this type of ballyhoo gives a picture. Iowa Nebraska Allied was complaining over holdups on product through "test" runs. Gulf States Allied, which elected Don George president, closed its convention with an appeal to national Allied to talk over bidding and dating problems with distributor chiefs, and Allied of Western Pennsylvania elected Morris Finkel president and commissioned a committee to draft a new constitution. Out in the Northwest, James M. Hone was reelected secretary of Washington, Idaho and Alaska Independent Theatre Owners and presented with an "oscar" and a check for faithful service, and from Denver Rocky Mountain Allied was complaining about "Jolson" rent terms. This complaint was echoed in Indiana where the picture has had but two bookings to date and in Memphis where exhibitors claim that bookings for "Jolson" subsequent-runs are not being taken. Meanwhile the Justice Department acknowledged that it was investigating exhibitor complaints over the charge, denied by Columbia, that advanced admissions were being demanded for the picture.

DISTRIBUTION

The New Paramount Pictures Company will have the services of Barney Balaban as president at $2,000, instead of $3,000 a week, plus expenses. United Artists has sold "Henry V" to the Cliff City, Calif., Studio Drive-in at advanced admissions for a midweek date. Eagle Lion has added 22 Jack Schwartz features and eight westerns and Astor has added "The Bachelor's Daughters," "Delightfully Dangerous," "Bedside Manner," "Christmas Eve"—all reissues—to its books.

LITIGATION

The U. S. Supreme Court Monday rejected a plea for rehearing on the Park-In ramp patents, presumably thereby upholding invalidation of these patents by a circuit court of appeals. The high court also rejected the Fifth and Walnut appeal on its $2,100,000 suit against seven majors and two circuits in Louisville.

In federal court at Phoenix, Partnership Theatres and R. E. Griffith were asking an accounting of Louis F. Long on funds in connection with theatres he owned jointly with the plaintiffs. In St. Louis the federal court turned down a request from Mrs. Beulah Walcher, suing Loew's for $290,000 over the picture "They Were Expendable" to set aside the order granting a new trial. Mrs. Walcher had won the verdict in the first trial when she claimed the character "Peggy" represented her.

GENERAL

First of the public relations shorts — "Let's Go to the Movies — will be made available to schools, etc., on 16-mm., on March 1 in a move to get the widest possible dissemination for this industry propaganda. Meanwhile the all-industry public relations conference committee meets in Washington Monday and Tuesday with the question of fund-raising and administration facing it.

In New York the major distributors, who have been supporting arbitration, dropped their financial support of the system at present at present and the American Arbitration Association was ready to close its motion picture offices across the United States.

Financial: Paramount, "pro forma" financial report indicates that if the present Paramount had divorced exhibition from distribution and production Jan. 1, 1949 instead of Jan. 1, 1950, the new theatre company would have earned a net profit before capital gains of $7,501,000 and the new production company would have netted a profit, before gains, of $2,370,000. The report is made for purposes of comparative study.

Arbitration Ass'n Closes Film Offices

The American Arbitration Association announced Thursday that it would close the offices of the Motion Picture Arbitration System, opened to provide arbitration under the terms of the original consent decree in the Government anti-trust suit.

The announcement indicated clearly that the major distributors have abandoned arbitration if only temporarily. The reason for this apparent abandonment seems to be twofold.

First is cost. Arbitration cost $300,000 a year. During 1949 only seven cases were brought to arbitrators with five of the cases settled by the distributors before they came up and two pending.

The second is that arbitration was not preventing the exhibitors from filing anti-trust suits.

The AAA made it plain, however that, this did not mean it would desert the field of film arbitration and that it stood ready to return to it when the Government anti-trust suit was finally settled and there was a decree establishing trade practices under which arbitration might be set up.

The future of such a set-up is problematical. The Big 3—Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM) have spoken for arbitration at one time or another, with Warners taking the lead. But the Big 3 in their objections to "new proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusion at Law" submitted by the Government, make it plain that if they do not object to the clause on arbitration they do not wish such failure to object as binding them to submit to arbitration.

The Little 3—Columbia, Universial and United Artists— and the Government, have not objected to voluntary arbitration proposals.

Meanwhile the AAA, announced through the President Spruille Braden, that it was making a move to establish strategic arbitration offices which would cover all branches of industry and trade. Some of these new offices will be located in the offices formerly used for motion picture arbitration.

Public Relations Plans Mulled Before Meeting

Approximately half a dozen plans on fund raising and operating an all-industry public relations program were reported to have been mulled over this week by the Motion Picture Association of America's Francis S. Harmon and several may be presented next week to the movement's conference committee which meets behind closed doors at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington on Dec. 12-13.

Wanted: Dog-Catcher

The theatre is no place for a dog, especially a big dog who is coming head-on at full speed. So charged Mrs. Essie Kitzmiller, 52-year-old, El Reno, Okla, housekeeper, in a $4,100 damage suit against Griffith Consolidated Theatres. Mrs. Kitzmiller claimed that on June 15 she had approached the box-office to buy a ticket but found her way barred by a large dog. Four times, she added the dog dashed around the box-office and into the theatre. The fifth time he dashed into Mrs. Kitzmiller, she says, and knocked her down with leg and hip injuries that incapacitated her. The theatre employes should have herded the dog out of her way, she says, without going into what employe's jurisdiction the task would come.

Supreme Court Denies Park-In, 5th & Walnut

The U. S. Supreme Court Monday for the second time refused to review a ruling by a Circuit Court of Appeals which apparently invalidates the drive-in ramp patents held by Park-in Theatres. In another motion picture decision the court refused to review the decision of two lower courts against the Fifth and Walnut Corporation in its $2,100,000 anti-trust suit against seven major distributors and two circuit operations.

Dooms Patent?

The refusal to review the Park-in case apparently dooms attempts by Park-in which holds the Holingshead patents on ramp construction for drive-ins, from collecting royalties. Park-in had appealed once before and had been rejected, after a Boston Circuit Court of Appeals had upset a judgment in its favor by a Boston federal court. At the time Park-in had sued the E. M. Loew circuit for failure to pay royalties on a Connecticut drive-in. Park-in won in the lowest court, but the Circuit Court of Appeals overthrew the ruling when it found the patents invalid for "want of invention."

May Try Again

The Fifth and Walnut Corporation of Louisville, losers in a third round against Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Loew's (MGM), Columbia, RKO, United Artists, the Marcus Loew Booking Agency and United Artists Theatres, will ask the Supreme Court again to review the case, Attorney Monroe E. Stein said in New York Wednesday. The suit was originally filed with Fifth and Walnut claiming that its National Theatre in Louisville had been unable to get suitable first-runs.

The case gained considerable attention in federal court for it was generally accepted that the judge's charge to the jury on the law, together with his refusal to permit the introduction of certain material as evidence, had contributed to Fifth and Walnut's defeat.

The court had refused to allow findings of fact and conclusions at law made by the U. S. Supreme Court in the Government anti-trust suit, to be introduced as evidence on the ground that this case had not been settled. Defendants appealed but the Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the lower court's finding.

Glamor Shortage Drives Away Downtown Trade, Public Says

Downtown houses which are short on glamor are falling down on the job when it comes to giving their patrons that "something extra" which will make them travel to see a show and as a result business is taking a dive in several areas, a spot check of theatre-goer opinion revealed this week.

The main complaint seems to be that there is not enough difference between what many a first-run house offers now and what the neighborhood house can offer to warrant the extra expense and time involved to make the trip downtown.

While the difference in admission is very often mentioned, the main complaint seems to be lack of glamor. In older days, several questioned pointed out, there was a certain sense of a treat when they went to a downtown theatre. The atmosphere was different, the theatre more opulent and even the show offered something different. Sometimes this defference lay in a stage show, an orchestra, or an organ. More often it was in a well-planned bill and a sense of leisurely enjoyment.

Today, complaints seem to center about the fact that some downtown houses had dropped behind both in their housekeeping and showmanship. Their freshness seem to be gone, any effort to make the theatre alluring and different through housekeeping or advertising seemed abandoned. Coincidentally some of those queried seem to notice greater efforts made on the part of their neighborhod houses to be spruce and comfortable.

Clearance, Too?

In some instances this apathy to go downtown could be blamed partly on reduced clearance. New York Broadway exhibitors are said to take this view, ignoring the fact that their high admissions may have something to do with keeping public away in a city where it is often more easy to come to Broadway than it is to go to the neighborhood theatre some eight blocks away.

Fundamentally, however, the main problem seems to be that while the public is willing to make an effort to see a good movie, they don't see why they have to travel for it and pay more money to see it downtown unless there is added reason to go downtown.

Interstate Status Facing Showmen If NLRB Accepts Toledo Complaint

The question of whether an individual motion picture theatre is engaged in interstate commerce or whether it is a retail service establishment was turned over to the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, D. C., this week.

The board, which has heretofore declined to rule in theatre labor cases was asked to assume jurisdiction in a union dispute growing out of the question as to who will represent the projectionists in the Balaban and Katz Princess at Toledo.

Significant

The board's decision to hear the case will prove significant, because by so doing it stamps exhibition with the label of interstate commerce, a stamp which may prove of trouble in future matters, especially those concerning federal minimum-wage and hour regulation.

The case itself carries some interesting possibilities for Toledo exhibitors. The specific argument devolves from the Princess booth situation, where two projectionists are members of Local 228 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, and two of whom are not but whose right to work there has not been curtailed. If the Board rules for the non-members it may upset the multiple-employer bargaining system through which Toledo exhibitors have been dealing with Local 228 for 28 years.

IATSE Opposes

The IATSE, through its counsel, Judge Matthew Levy, is opposing the NLRB's jurisdiction on the ground that an exhibitor offers "a visual presentation reflected upon the screen, locally fixed, for emotional, intellectual and spiritual satisfaction."

Arguing for the jurisdiction, Philip Fusco, attorney for the NLRB Cleveland office said: "There is statutory jurisdiction in the case, if only because of the distribution-supply practices of the film industry."

Elaborating upon this he said that when producers make pictures the object is to get them into theatres all over the country and not merely into the exchanges. This, he says, presupposes interstate commerce and the fact that Toledo theatres get their prints from Cleveland exchanges, which are also within the Ohio statelines, does not invalidate the argument. Further, Fusco points out, B & K operates across state lines.

3 More Ask Theatre Video Hearing

Three more petitions by exhibitors asking the Federal Communications Commission to hold hearings on theatre television were filed in Washington, D. C., this week by Attorneys Marcus Cohn and Leonard Marks.

Exhibitors File

Those filing were the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners; the American Theatres Corporation, which operates 47 theatres in New England, including the Boston Pilgrim, which has experimented with the World Series and Notre Dame football games over television, and Morton Thalheimer's 45 Neighborhood Theatres, located in Virginia.

In his petition, Sam Pinanski, American Theatres President, stated that the Pilgrim's presentations of the series and Notre Dame games "found a remarkable reception and interest."

On the basis of this practical experience, Pinanski said he believed "that this new medium, if given an adequate opportunity by the Commission to develop its full potential, would offer a splendid new service of information and entertainment to the public which will be both technically and commercially feasible."

Paramount Buys Southern Circuit in Latest Decree Move

Paramount this week took another step toward complying with the consent decree it reached with the Justice Department in the Government anti-trust suit by buying out the interest of its partners—R. B. Wilby, H. F. Kincey and associates—in some 104 theatres and several drive-ins located in Alabama and the Carolinas.

The purchase price was reported to be $7,700,000 in cash plus an undisclosed distribution of assets in some of the companies involved.

The deal included full ownership by Paramount in the following corporations: Alabama Theatres with approximately 22 houses; North Carolina Theatres, with approximately 75 theatres; the Drive-in Theatres of South Carolina, Inc. the Greenwood, S. C. Theatres, Inc. Part of the deal included the seven theatres of the Birmingham Operating Company, with Paramount acquiring full ownership of the company and four of its theatres and its partners retaining three theatres. Of the total number of theatres involved in the over-all deal, Paramount under the consent decree assumably may retain 58.

The deal did not cover the Wilby-Kincey interests in Charlotte, N. C.—the State, Carolina, Imperial, Broadway and Dilworth.

Involved in the sale to Paramount were: Wilby, Kincey, R. M. Kennedy, H. H. Harrison, and the Estates of Arthur Lucask, Sylvain Baum, and Walton Hill.

New Circuit

These houses, together with 33 which Paramount already owned in the area, will become part of the new United Paramount Theatres—a corporation formed to take over the theatres which Paramount must eventually surrender under the divorce terms of the consent decree. The new company is supposedly free of any producer-distributor control.

However, actual management of the Paramount holdings will remain in charge of Wilby-Kincey, who remain in charge under a management contract.

In making public the sale at Atlanta, both Wilby and Kincey announce that two of their former employes—District Manager R. M. Kennedy and Tuscaloosa, Ala., City Manager Cecil Grimes—had purchased theatres from the old Wilby-Kincey set up which they would operate for themselves.

Kennedy acquired the Birmingham Strand, the Ensley and Franklin at Ensley, the Walton at Selma and the Empire, Montgomery, and three drive-ins—all in Alabama. Grimes took over the Druid at Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Paramount Chain To Have 508

United Paramount Theatres , the new theatre operating circuit born as a result of Paramount's divorce-providing consent decree, will take over operation of the Paramount chain on Jan. 1, 1950, with a total of 508 wholly-owned theatres, or slightly under the neighborhood of the 600 which is the maximum the new company may operate under the decree.

This was confirmed Wednesday as Paramount President Barney Balaban reported to stockholders on the progress made toward dropping theatres and acquiring partners' interests before the divorce which splits exhibition from

Exhibitors' New Interest in Business 'Most Encouraging,' Rembusch Finds

Increasing interest on the part of exhibitors in their business is "one of the most encouraging things I have noticed in the last six months," Trueman Rembusch, recently reelected president of the Associated Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana (Allied) told SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW this week in discussing trade problems.

Rembusch is inclined to be optimistic about the future. Product for 1950, looks better, he finds, and coupled with exhibitor activity on behalf of product, shoud achieve better results.

'Young America'

"Our business is one built on momentum," he pointss out. " . . . Give our industry's theatres some really intelligent exploitation and operation plus a run of good films and the old momentum will build up and our box-offices will begin swinging along profit-wise."

Rembusch attributes the recent drop in business to many conditions, including "unsettled labor conditions in the basic industries" and "too few want-to-see pictures coming out of Hollywood."

He believes that many theatres could do with some re-seating, remodeling and re-equipping jobs, but he is not bearish on the future.

As to the question of film rentals, he reports that distributors in Indiana are trying to get higher rentals but are not meeting with conspicuous success in getting them.

" . . . Business is down and many exhititors are operating on sliding scales, and these scales are throwing off bottom percentages on quite a few pictures," he declared.

"Some of the companies have tried," he continued, "to get the exhibitors off the scales on to straight percentages. However, the exhibitors answer them, and rightly so, with the old distributor pitch: "When a picture does well you share with the increased business. Likewise, when business is down on a picture, your earnings go down."

Only 2

As to the exhibitor rumpus over the terms Columbia is said to be asking for "Jolson Sings Again," Rembusch said that it has had but two dates to his knowledge in the Indianapolis territory, both in Loew's theatres.

Charges Discrimination

Because the Majestic at East St. Louis, Ill., allegedly refused to sell tickets to Negroes, Manager Vincent O'Leary found himself charged with a violation of Illinois' anti-discrimination laws with a warrant issued against him on a complaint signed by Ben Phillips. Phillips, president of the St. Louis Civil Rights Congress, alleges the theatre refused to sell tickets to 11 Negroes.

Tsk, These Interruptions

A fall is just a fall to the 81-year-old regular patron of 'Frisco's Coliseum who resents a lot of interest in her mishaps, especially when they make her miss the picture. Recently she took a tumble in the street, and a motorist, pulling away from the curb saw her and got out to help.

"I'm all right young man," she warned. "Don't bother me or I'll be late for the show."

But the motorist, believing that the old lady might have been leaning on his car and fallen when he pulled away from the curb, advised police, who went to the Coliseum and asked Manager Edwin Scheeline "where the old lady with a cane" was sitting. She was located and told the inquiring police officer off, complaining about their "making her miss a part of the picture" and banging her cane on the carpet, tramped back to her seat to see what happened to Alan Ladd in "The Great Gatsby."

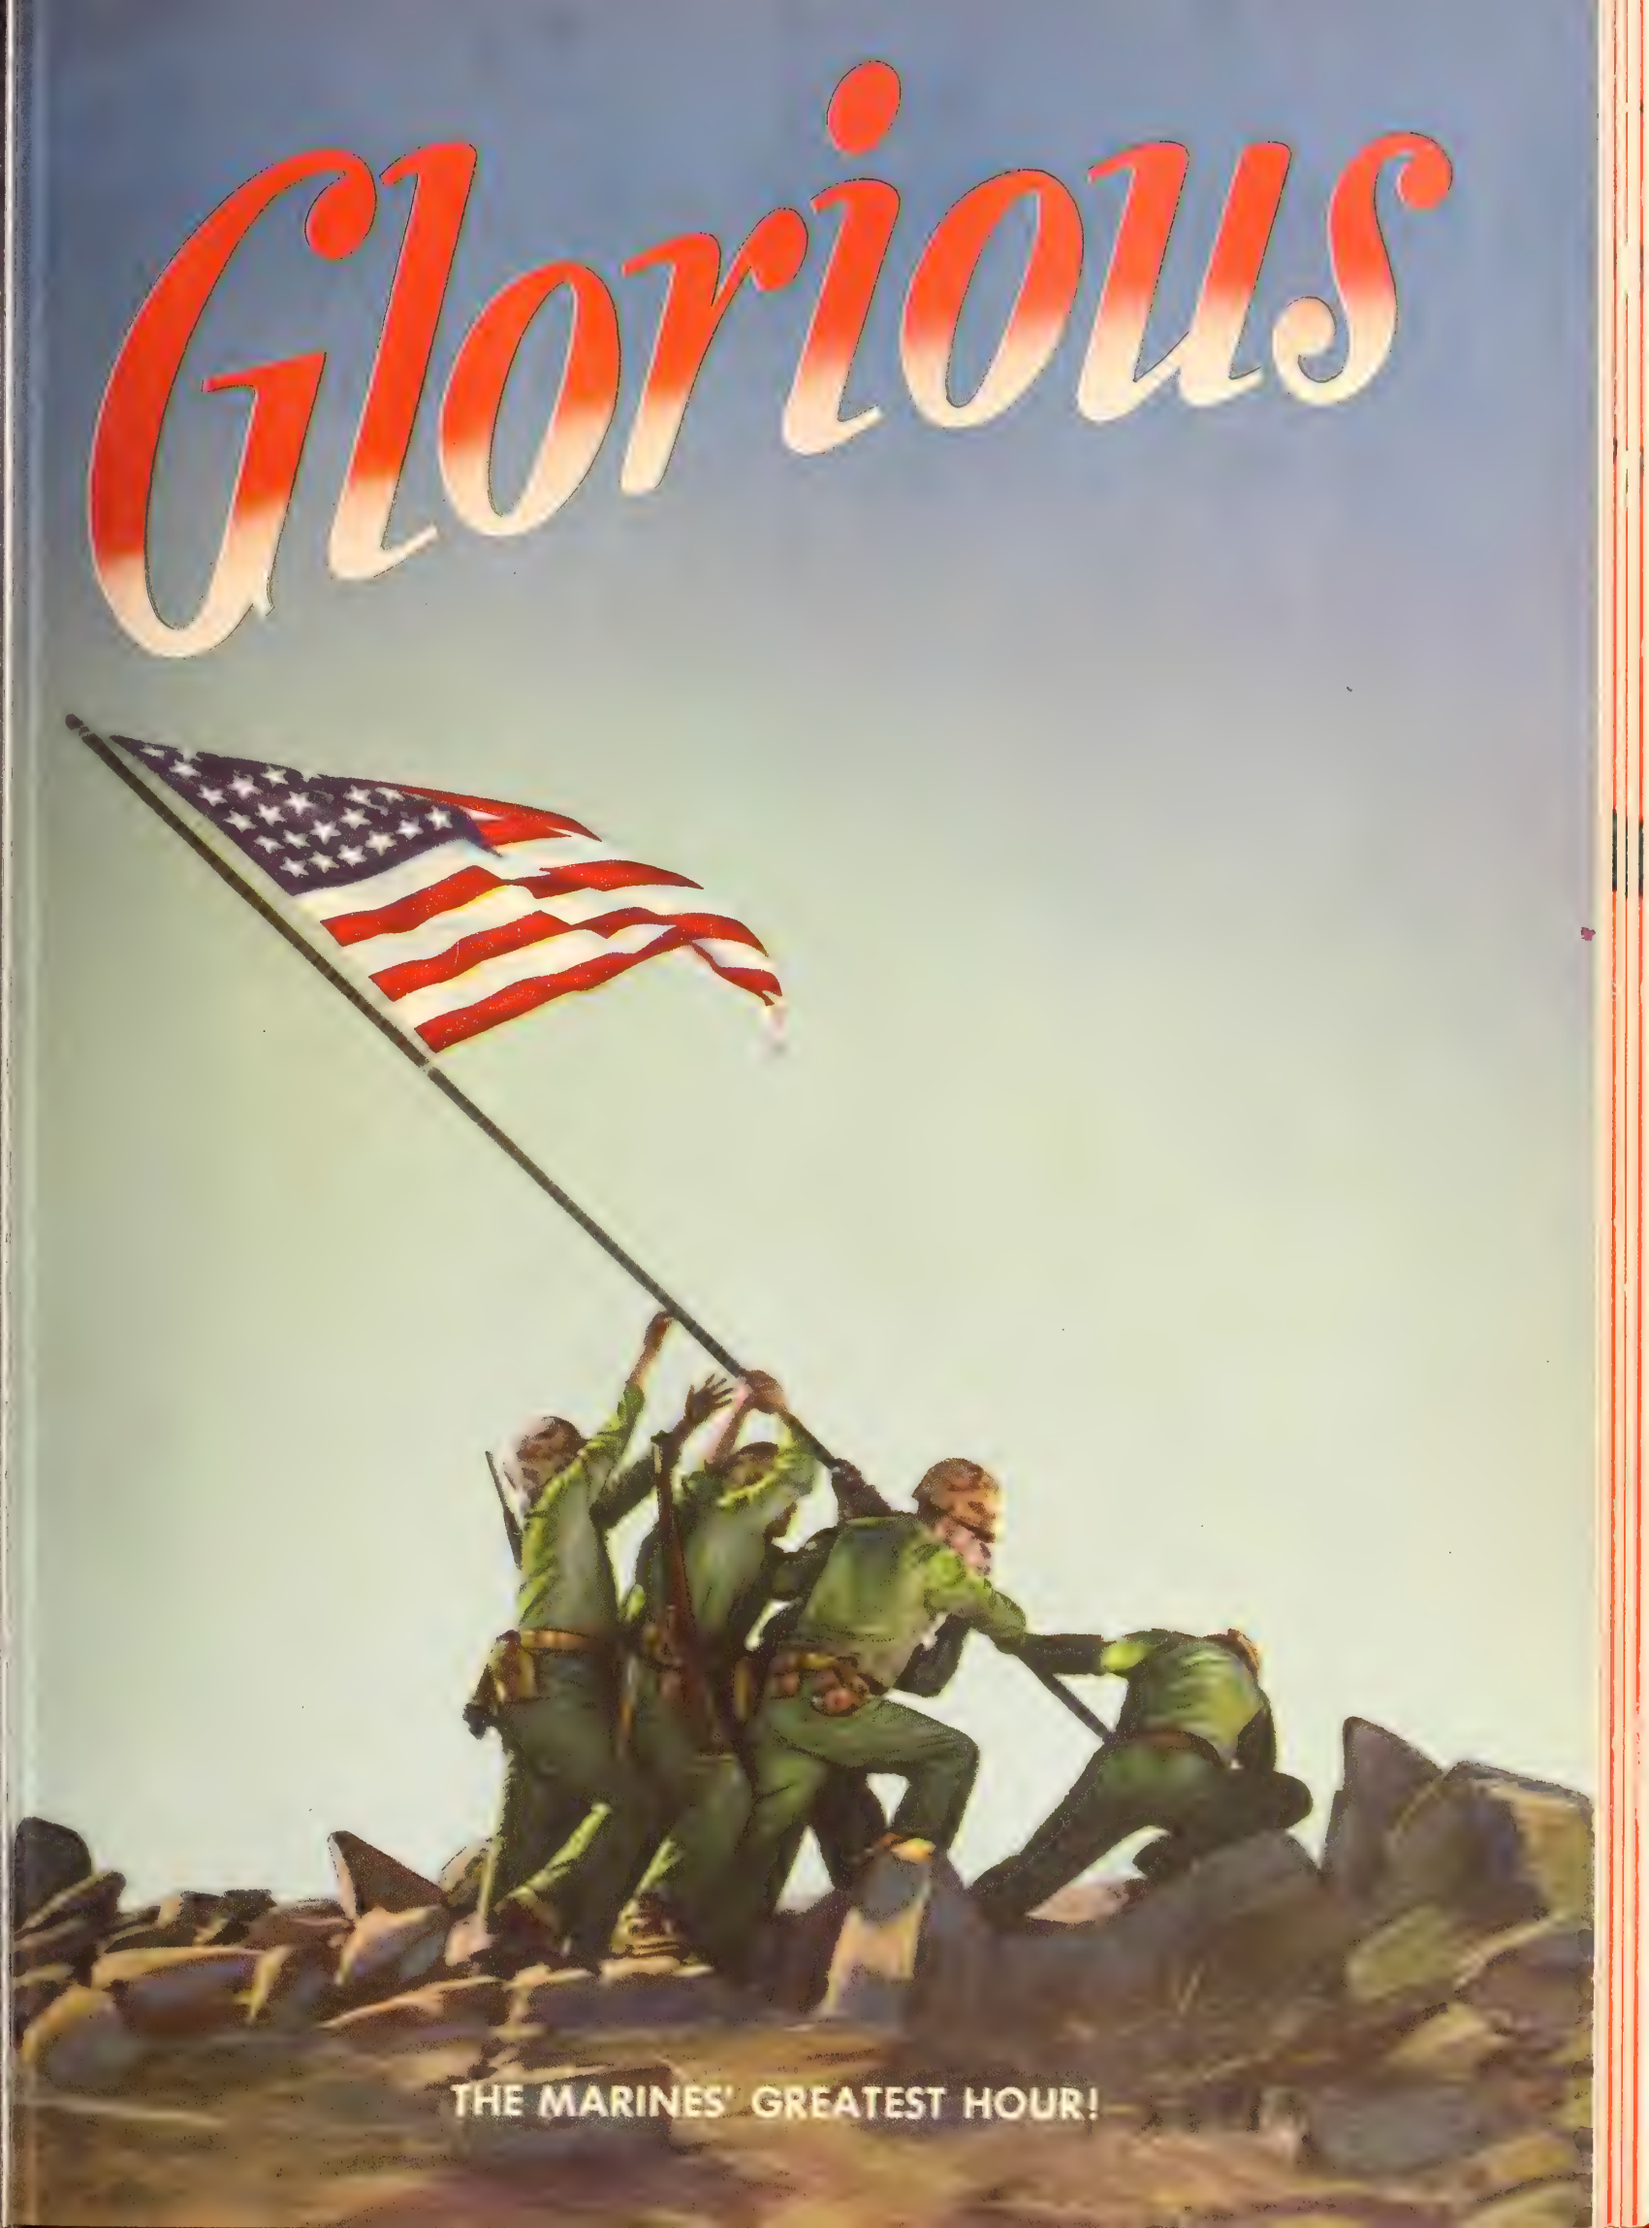
Gulf Unit Asks Allied Booking Problem Study

Gulf States Allied closed its two-day convention in New Orleans Tuesday with the election of Don George of Shreveport to the presidency and by passing a resolution calling upon national Allied to appoint a committee to meet with distributor chiefs on bidding and dating problems.

The convention took no action regarding booking to drive-in but asked national Allied to get distributor chiefs to clarify their position on this question. One of them present—20th Century-Fox General Sales Manager Andy W. Smith, did so, when he declared in an address to the delegates:

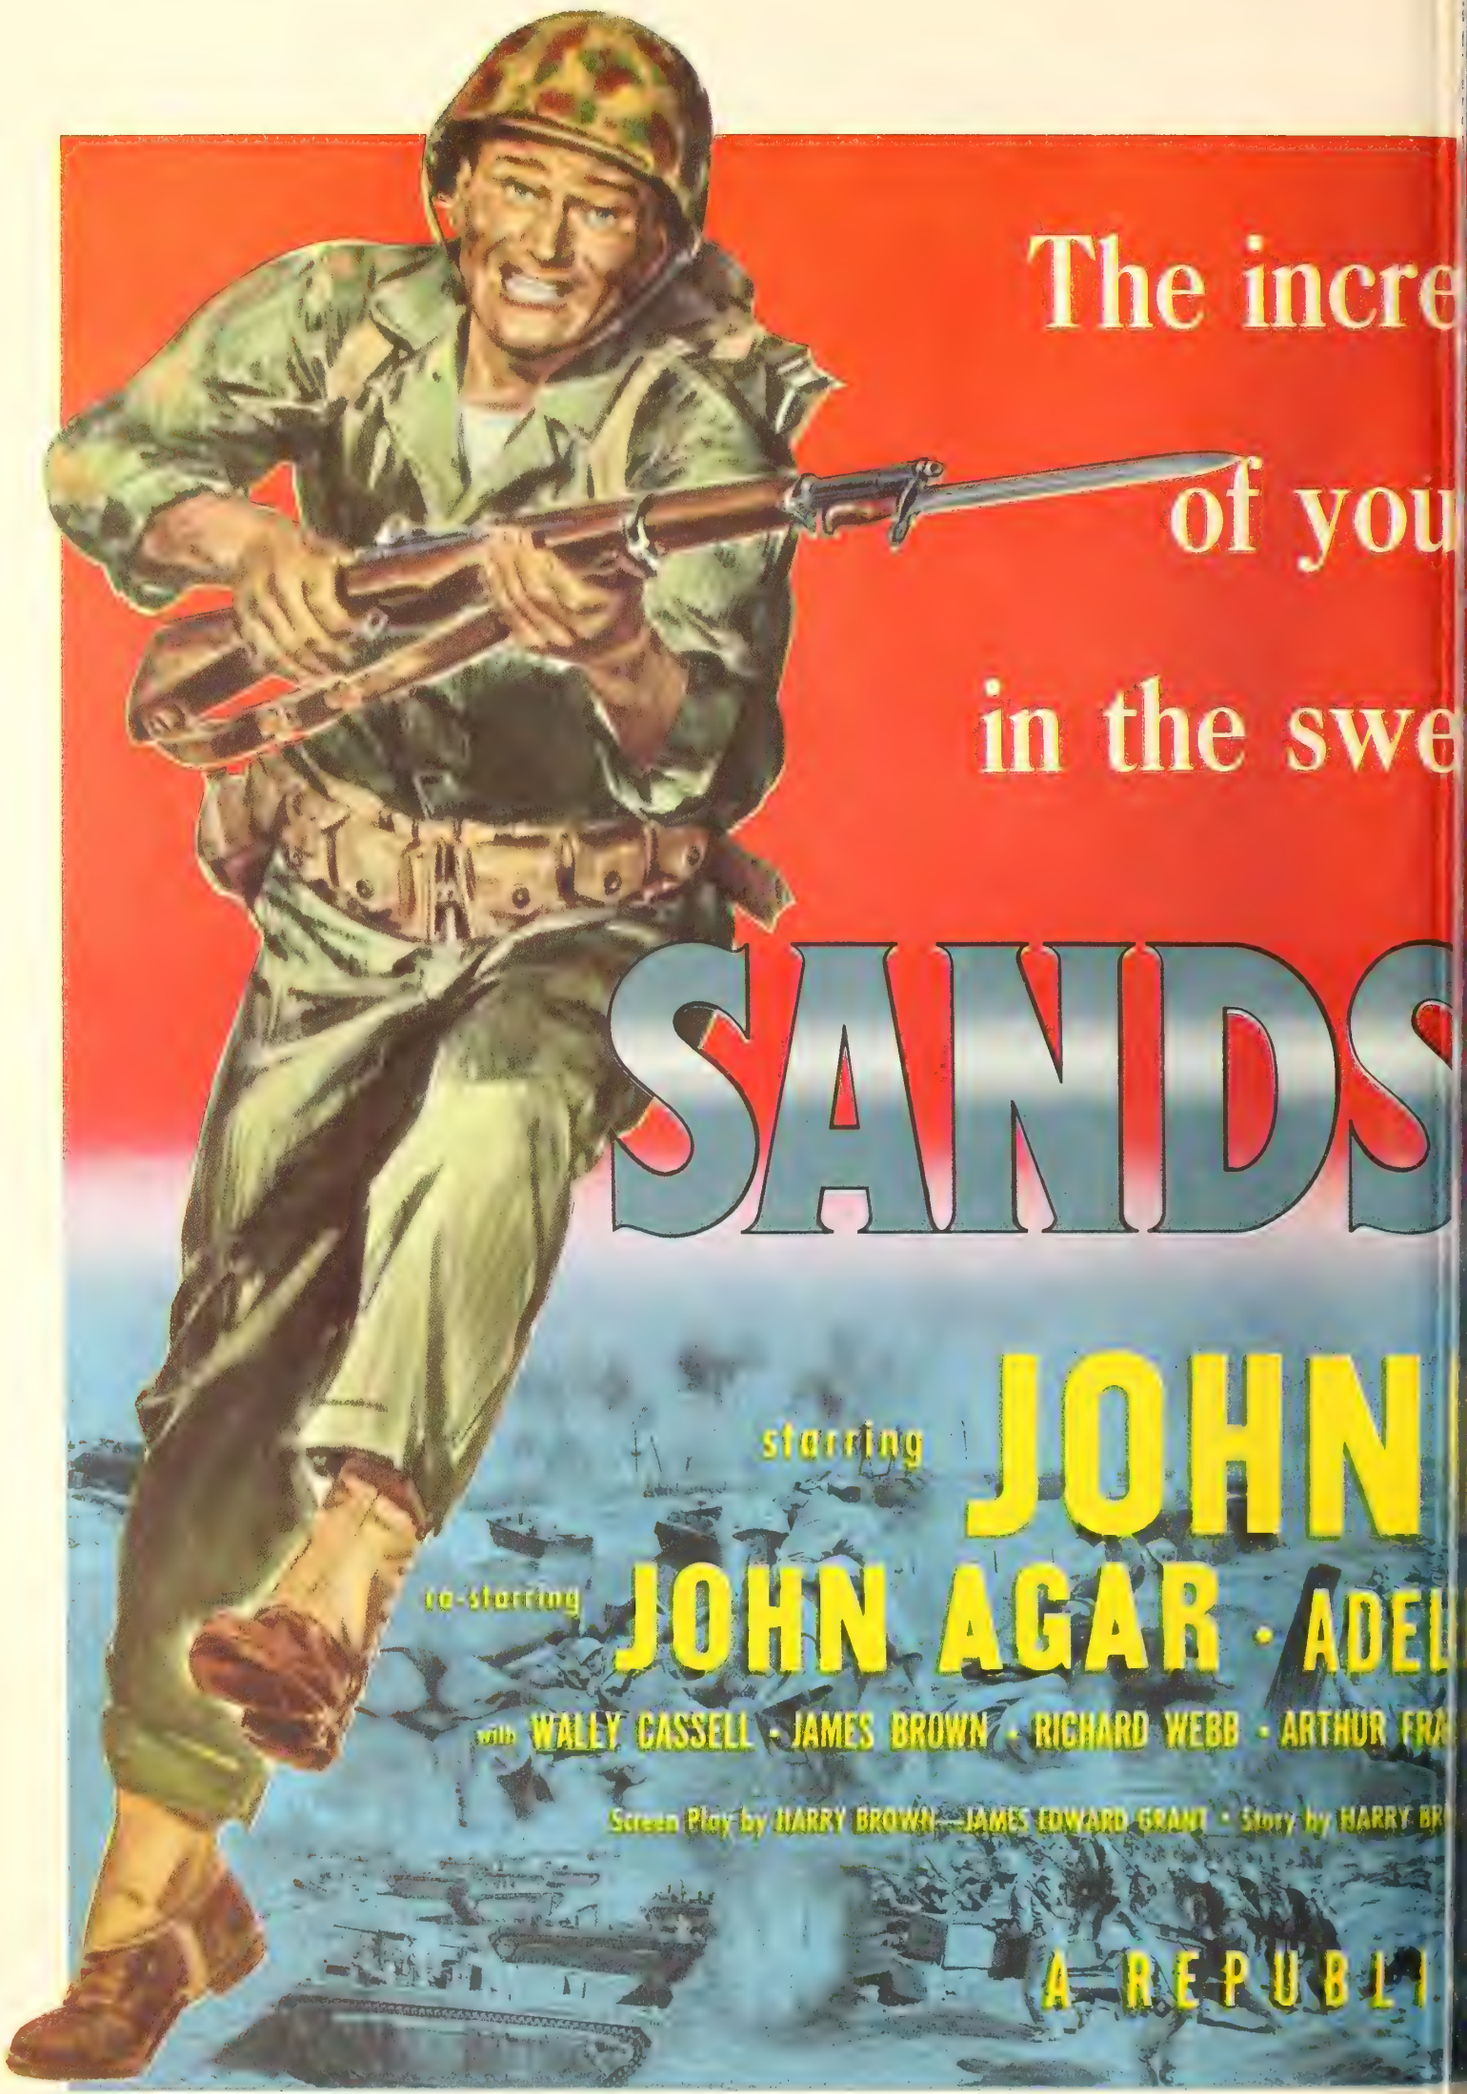
"Our practices of refusing to grant drive-in theatres a first-run showing in any city or town that has adequate first-run theatres will be continued." On the question of bidding Smith said that his company would use bidding wherever the situation required it, stating:

"We have never sought this type of negotiation, but on the other hand we will not refuse it." The Fox sales chief also said his company planned to increase his 1950 schedule of "A" pictures beyond the 24 released in 1949.



The convention, which was attended by 100 delegates representing 200 theatres in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida and was termed the most successful to date in the organization's history by manager Maurice Artigues also elected the following:

Vice-President Abe Berensen; Board Chairman W. A. Prewitt; Secretary Hal Bailey, Treasurer F. G. Trap, Jr. Elected to the board were Bailey, Trap, W. A. Lighter, Joe Guillory, Louis Watts.



Northwest Exhibitors Name Officers

The Independent Theatre Owners of Washington, Idaho and Alaska this week elected the following officers: James M. Hone, executive secretary; Leroy Johnston, treasurer; Jack Neville, auditor; L. O. Lukan, trustee to the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, Fred Mercy, Jr., alternate. Directors are: Mildred Wall, Mike Barovic, L. A. Gillespie, Lionel Brown, W. D. McDonald, Erwin Fey, Joe Rosenfield, Chester Nilsson, Pete Higgins, Walter Coy, Shearer and Lukan.

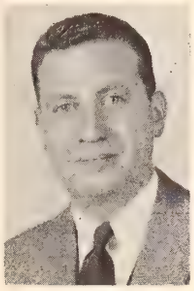
Hamrick-Ev'green Split Dec. 20



The Hamrick-Evergreen circuit of approximately 16 theatres in Washington and Oregon will dissolve Dec. 20 with the houses to be divided between John Hamrick and Evergreen, in which 20th Century-Fox has an interest.

Fox will retain its Evergreen holdings, subject to the understanding, reached in the Government anti-trust suit that Stockholder Frank L. Newman, Sr., is merely an investor and not a potential exhibitor. Had he been found a potential exhibitor, Fox would have had to sell its holdings or gain full control of the company.

Under the split, Hamrick will move his offices to Seattle, where he will take over the Orpheum, the Music Hall, the Music Box and the Blue Mouse. Evergreen, according to report, will retain the Fifth Avenue, the Paramount, the Coliseum—all in Seattle—and the Hollywood, Liberty, Mayfair, Music Box, Oriental, Orpheum, Paramount, Playhouse and Newsreel in Portland, Oregon.

Allied Unit to Revise Constitution, Elects Finkel

Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennslyvania held its 29th annual convention at the Hotel William Penn, Pittsburgh, Dec. 5-6, decided to consider a new constitution which is to be presented to it by a committee by March 1, and reelected Morris Finkel, president.

Morris Finkel

The convention discussed industry problems, with the effect of television generally and the use of large-screen television in theatres heading the agenda. Exhibitor speakers included National Allied President William Ainsworth, Sidney Samuelson. U. S. Senator Francis J. Myers was the principal speaker at the banquet which closed the convention Tuesday night.

Other officers elected with Finkel are Vice-President Fred Beedle, Secretary Fred J. Herrington, Treasurer Joseph Gellman. Directors are Frank Tanapolis, Mike Manos, Norman Mervis, Lee Conrad, Harry Rachille, William Fox, M. A. Rosenberg, David Habburg. The constitution committee, which will revise the constitution, consists of Finkel, Beedle, Rosenberg, Bernard Buchheit and Edgar Shaffer.

To Air-Condition 'A' Houses, Says Goldstein

Plans are under way to install air conditioning in all "A" houses of the Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., President Samuel Goldstein declared in Springfield, Mass., this week as he predicted a rosy future for business.

Goldstein, who acknowledged that the circuit's business has been off in recent months because of "product, and labor conditions," hastened to add that "business is always good when we have good pictures and from what I can see we are going to have some excellent productions for the people of this area. I see business improving as a result."

Age of Miracles

Eagle Lion Branch Manager Robert Richardson of Cleveland, is a stalwart character who can stand shock. He is even known to have gone through the ordeal of having an exhibitor accept the first film rental quoted without fainting. But this week he faced one for the book. It was a letter from Exhibitor E. C. Prinsen of the Palace and State in Youngstown. Exhibitor Prinsen had played "Down Memory Lane" and he wrote Manager Richardson a letter, not beefing about the picture's not being up to expectations but praising it. Prinsen declared he "had almost as much fun listening to his audience as . . . watching the picture." And his letter included a moveover booking for the State as second-run. "You know," he wrote, "we seldom use a so-called program picture second-run downtown."

Paramount Plans 18 in 8 Months

Paramount will enter 1950 with a production schedule of 18 pictures to go before the cameras within the first eight months of the New Year, Studio Vice-President Henry Ginsberg announced this week.

The schedule, which Ginsberg terms the largest ever so far in advance by the company, does not include four pictures now in production and an inventory of 17 completed but unreleased features, which when taken together would give the company a total of 39 features available for release during 1950 and 1951. This heavy product availability, which does not necessarily mean that Paramount will increase its present releasing schedule of approximately 21 features a year, coincides with split of the producing company from the exhibiting company, which under the terms of the consent decree, takes effect Jan. 1, 1950. At that time Paramount will remain in production and distribution, and a supposedly independent new company—United Paramount Theatres—will take over operation of the theatre group under the decree provisions which will eventually limit the circuit to a maximum of approximately 600 theatres.

The features which Ginsberg announced for production are:

"Carrie Ames," and an adaption of the Broadway stage play, "Detective Story"—both directed by William Wyler. "Roman Holiday," "directed by Frank Capra; "Mr. and Mrs. Anonymous;" A Bing Crosby musical western and another untitled Crosby; Bob Hope in "The Big Guy;" A Leo McCarey; "Famous;" "Montana Rides" in Technicolor with Alan Ladd; Betty Hutton in "The Mabel Normand-Mack Sennett Story;" a Billy Wilder production; Ray Milland in "It's a Fast World;" William Holden in "Union Station;" "A Relative Stranger," produced by Charles Brackett; Ray Milland in "Jack of Diamonds;" "Jockey's Agent;" "The Kentuckian" and "Nightmare."

Eagle Lion Adds Schwartz

Eagle Lion Distribution Vice-President William J. Heineman this week announced a deal with Jack Schwartz Productions by which the latter would produce 22 features and eight westerns for Eagle Lion distribution. Delivery to the distributor is to be made at the rate of two features a month and one western each 45 days.

Griffith Sells In 47 Towns

Griffith Theatres in 47 Oklahoma and Texas towns have been acquired by Video Independent Theatres, a new company headed by eight former Griffith employes, Griffith Vice-President W. T. Spears announced this week.

The transaction was necessitated because of the retirement of President L. C. Griffith and the death of Vice-President Harry M. Lowenstein, Spears said, and has nothing to do with current Government anti-trust action against the Griffith circuit.

The new company immediately installed a welfare program at no cost to the employes, which includes retirement pensions, disability and health benefits, life insurance and a profit-sharing plan under which all employes who attain five years of service are eligible to share in the profits.

Officers of the new company are: President Henry S. Griffing; Vice Presidents Claude O. Fulgham, Claude F. Motley; Secretary-Treasurer Kenneth C. Blackledge; Directors William B. Turk, Paul E. Cornwell, Louise Wesson.

The theatres acquired are at Ada, Altus, Ardmore, Bartlesville, Blackwell, Chandler, Chickasha, Claremore, Clinton, Cushing, Drumright, Duncan, Elk City, El Reno, Enid, Fairfax, Frederick, Guthrie, Henryetta, Hobart, Holdenville, Hominy, Hugo, Mangum, Norman, Oklahoma City, Okmulgee, Pawhuska, Picher, Panca City, Sapulpa, Sayre, Seminole, Shawnee, Stillwater, Vinita and Wewoka—all in Oklahoma.

The Texas houses are in Borger, Cleburne, Cuero, Kermit, Midland, New Braunfels, Pampa, Refugio, Wellington and Wink.

Little Hope of U. S. Tax Cut Says Ohio Tax Man

Chance that the federal amusement tax will be eliminated are very slim, C. Emory Glander, Ohio State Tax Commissioner told 500 mayors and city officials attending the American Municipal Association's three-day meeting in Cleveland this week.

Glander told the mayors that he favored municipal admission taxes rather than federal taxes because they were able to reach transients, were free from interstate control, and not only offered stable but comparatively cheap form of collection.

Drive-Ins Would Affiliate With Under-Roofers

A separate exhibitor organization for under-skyer operators is not advisable and drive-in exhibitors should join either national Allied or the Theatre Owners of America, a meeting of under-skyer owners in Kansas City last week decided.

The meeting, presided over by Jack Braunagle of Commonwealth, represented approximately 75 per cent of the area's under-skyer operators. O. F. Sullivan, Kansas-Missouri Allied President, told the group that uational Allied planned a national drive-in conference and the meeting suggested any period between Jan. 15 to Feb. 15, with Kansas City or St. Louis as the location.

Britain Ducks Divorce, Faces Bidding

Britain's industry this week found itself faced with the possibility of modified competitive bidding but safe from divorcement as the Plant committee turned in its long-awaited report on a study of motion picture conditions to Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade. The report will now go to Parliament.

The report viewed divorce as too drastic in its effect on industry relations and suggested a modified form of bidding which would allow houses in equal categories to bid for product.

It further offered both exhibitor and distributor a note of hope by remarking that amusement taxes at present were a handicap, and recommended a committee to study reported conditions of monopoly within the industry. Sliding scales for rentals and for distribution fees were also suggested with the committee indicating that a 15 per cent distribution fee after expenses was sufficient for the average film and that the amount could drop to 10 percent on exceptional films.

Balaban Sees Easing Foreign Restrictions

A decreased supply of foreign productions will make American pictures acutely needed now for screen time in foreign theatres, Paramount President Barney Balaban declared in a letter to stockholders this week.

Balaban finds American pictures "at the height of their popularity with foreign audiences" and intimates that the dearth of other product aboard may help moderate existing restrictions.

'Friendship Meetings' Set for 'Battleground'

MGM will hold its second series of "Friendship Meetings" for 95 special showings on "Battleground," Vice-President and General Sales Manager William F. Rodgers announced this week.

There will be a total of 95 screenings in theatres—28 at exchange centers and 67 in cities away from exchange centers but nearer exhibitor homes—for exhibitors, civic, educational and political leaders as well as film and radio critics. The showings will start Dec. 15 in Chicago and run for two weeks. No general release date has been set for "Battleground."

The "friendship meeting" plan was started last year by Rodgers with theatre showings especially arranged on "The Stratton Story" and "Secret Garden."

5 Warrens for Fox's 'Foxes' Opening

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Prince of Foxes" received a five-house opening in Los Angeles on Dec. 9, with the film booked into the State, Upton, Loyola, Chinese and Wilshire. New York opening is Dec. 22 at the Roxy.

Moved Forward

The annual convention of the Theatre Owners of Oklahoma has been moved forward to the spring, it was announced this week. Convention originally was to have been held in December.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

British Trade Asking for Nationalization, Declares MacGregor; Lord Archibald Seen as Man In Charge

By JOCK MacGREGOR

The trade is just asking to be nationalized. By their actions, many producers are inviting it. The unions through their usual bullheaded approach would welcome it. Every government inquiry brings it a step nearer. Now people are even naming Lord Archibald as the man who will be put in charge should such eventualities arise.

Jock MacGregor

The Gater Report on production costs has now been issued and it reveals little about extravagance and waste which has not been reported in STR.

Despite the Rank balance sheet, the studio closings and the fortunes at stake, enormous sums are still being frittered away on effects which do not enhance the entertainment value of a picture and on subjects which are completely unsuitable.

Recently I have unofficially attended two sneak previews which put the whole situation into relief. One film cost way over the million dollar mark and the other not a tenth as much. Both were screened in tough London neighborhoods and the former, despite the presence of the stars got the bird in a way I have rarely heard it given. And how it deserved it!

This dreary prestige picture packed practically every reason for the film crisis. Foremost the story could never be good cinema. The producers had defied convention and virtually left the audience to provide its own solution, the hero having been killed off an hour earlier. The love scenes were for the most part hammy and the signal for the boys to get noisy.

The film ran two hours and at least twenty minutes must go before it can even be considered. It is, for this reason, I have refrained from naming it. Nevertheless it is deplorable the amount which must have been wasted on redundant scenes. Proper planning could have overcome much of this and it is ridiculous to blame the audience for the reception. It is such patronage which pays for the pictures, and is entitled to its likes.

It is fortunate the producers were present to appreciate the reception for all too many believe exhibitors are biased when they discuss British pictures. They must learn about the box office and regard it as their friend instead of their enemy. On this occasion, they learned the hard way.

The cheaper picture was a very different proposition. The audience lapped it up, yet they were audible in their disapproval of a couple of incidents which have since been deleted. It was Grand National's "Twenty Questions Murder Mystery" which has since been trade shown within two months of going into production. It is, however, no rushed job for it had been properly planned and the editor's job was mainly one of assembling.

If more such entertainments were made on similar intelligent budgets there would be no need for government inquiries and the like. It was produced and directed respectively by old timers Maurice Wilson and Paul Stein, who have no ambitions towards Academy Awards. Therein probably lies their success.

Grand National, incidentally, have another potential hit in "Miss Pilgrim's Progress," a charming story of an American girl who swaps jobs with a British factory worker and all but revolutionizes an old world village. To celebrate the completion of five pictures, Maurice Wilson called a sales convention and launched it with a lunch at which Sir Alfred Munnings, the artist, spoke on the preservation of rural England and Minister for Town and Country Planning Silkin told of his problems both giving "Miss Pilgrim" a nice pat on the back.

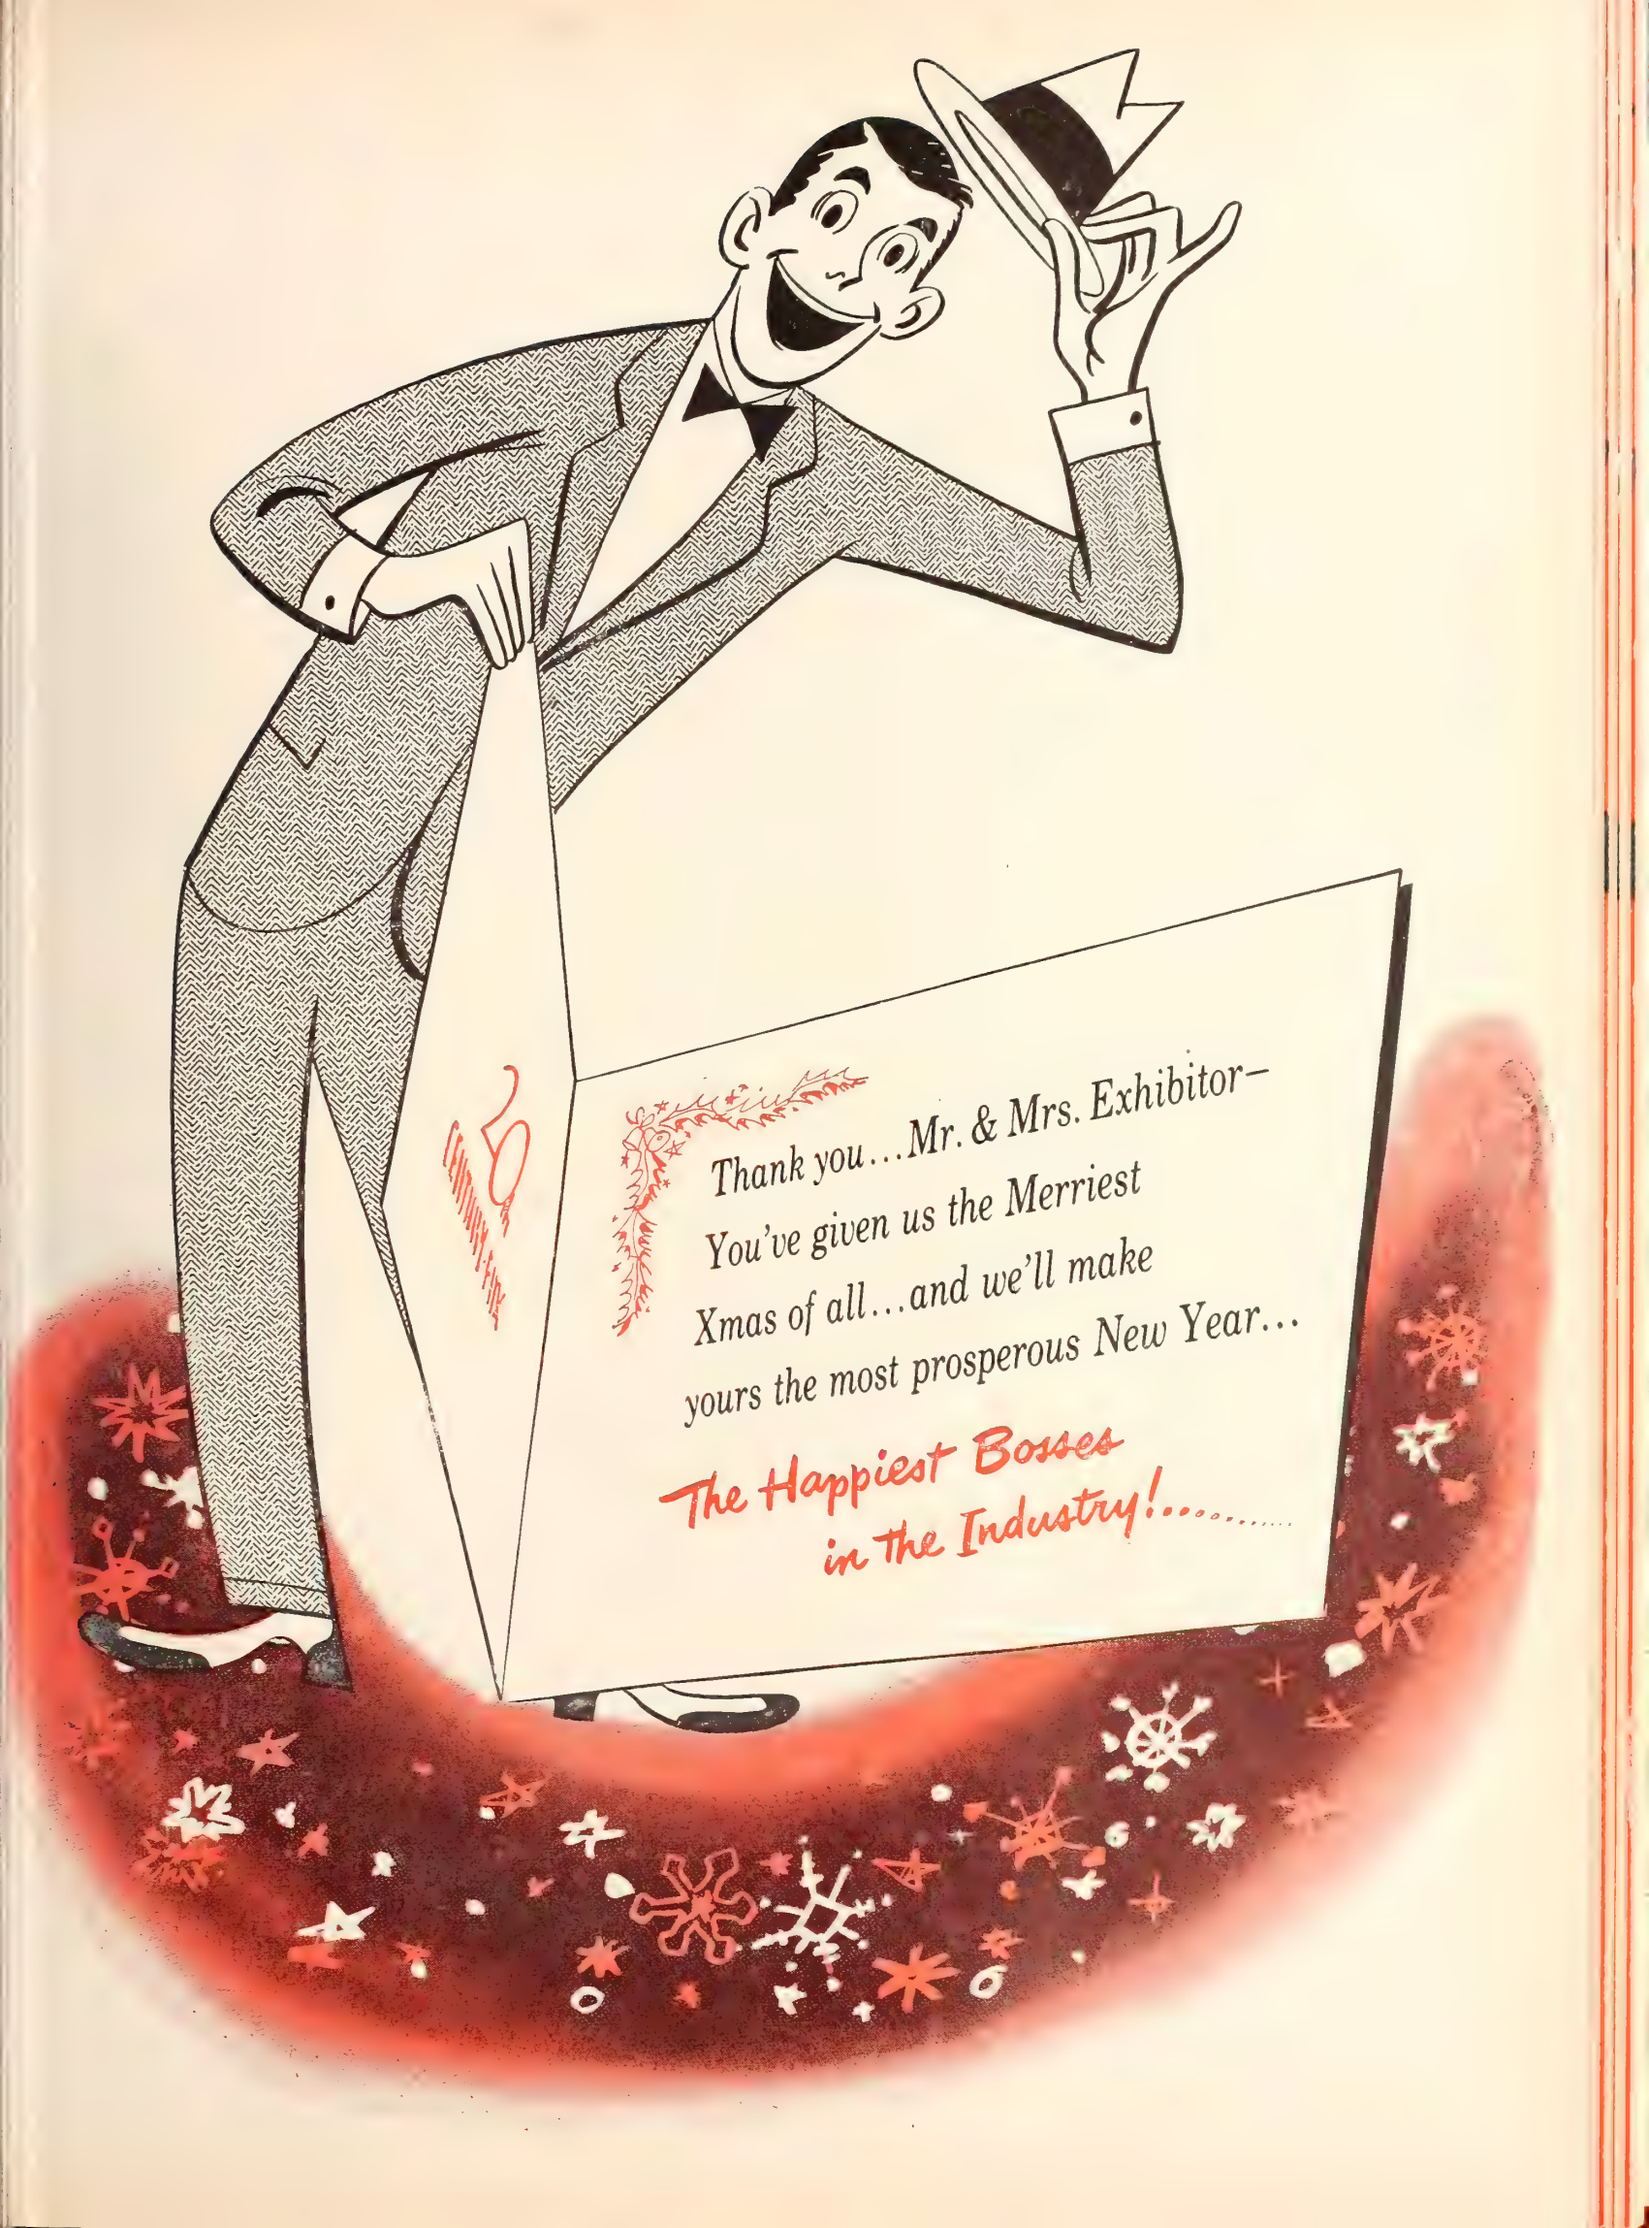
By arrangement with the CEA, the Central Office of Information distributes free a monthly one-reeler dealing with some item of national importance to over 3,500 cinemas. Some exhibitors feel, the since the government pays for other advertising, it should pay for screen time. Others maintain the films are a worthy addition to the program.

The COI are proud of their efforts and admit how grateful they are to showmen for enabling them to reach 30,000,000 people. Two of the latest batch, "Wonders of the Deep" and "Wonder Jet" deserve the widest screening and a smart renter will snap up the American rights.



One deals with the frogmen divers and was mainly shot underwater with special cameras. The other is a fascinating survey of tracing the development of the turbo-jet from Frank Whittle's first dream to its application to modern aircraft. This is actually a two-reeler but its quality is such that the CEA have agreed for it to be put out as the January release. Incidentally, the COI tell me it counts for quota.

Drive-In 'Henry' Trial

United Artists was preparing to experiment with drive-in dates for "Henry V" Tuesday when that production was scheduled to open at the Studio Drive-in, Culver City, Calif., for a three-day midweek booking at $1.20, tax included. If the move is successful, it may open an entirely new field for the Rank production.

In a year that has brought the Square Deal Policy
We feel quite secure

Come Dancer, come Blitzen, come lines 'round the blocks(es)
You'll always find them

Paramount Chain To Have 508

production and distribution takes formal effect with the New Year.

At that time a new Paramount Picture Corporation will take over production and distribution while the United Paramount Theatres will take over exhibition.

The new circuit's 508 houses are made up of 380 theatres which Paramount owned wholly before the decree was signed and was permitted to keep plus 128 other houses part of a 347-theatre acquisition made by Paramount after the decree was signed.

91 Too Many

Of these 347 theatres, Paramount has already disposed of 128 which it could not keep under the decree and 91 more remain to be disposed of, the bulk of which will probably have to be sold by United Paramount Theatres.

Balaban's report shows that the old Paramount company terminated a large number of joint ownerships by two methods: 1) Outright purchase of entire circuits through acquiring its partners' holdings with intentions to dispose of surplus theatres later: 2) Dividing the assets of circuits by retaining some theatres in full ownership, transferring others wholly to its partners and dissolving the partnership.

Deals to Date

The joint ownerships disposed of to date, Balaban revealed are:

Wilby-Kincey—Outright purchase of Alabama Theatres, Inc., North Carolina Theatres, Drive-in Theatres of S. C., Inc., Greenwood Theatres for $7,700,000 with full ownership in 77 theatres and part ownership in 24 more houses making a total of 101 theatres. Under the terms of the consent decree Paramount may retain 54 of these 101 theatres and must dispose of the remainder. Concluded a deal with Wilby-Kincey by which Paramount took over the Birmingham Theatre Operating Company and four of its theatres, leaving three other of that circuit's houses to its partners along with some assets.

E. V. Richards—Purchased full ownership of Paramount-Richards, Inc., and Paramount-Richards Enterprises from Richards for approximately $3,500,000, obtaining thereby a circuit of 80 houses of which it may retain 36, under the consent decree.

Pencom Corporation—Split assets, acquiring 14 of 70 theatres involved, 13 of which it may retain under the consent decree. The fourteenth has already been sold.

Dominion Theatres—Acquired full ownership of the company by turning over to its partners 12 of the circuit's 15 theatres and retaining three.

M. A. Lightman—Split assets, with Lightman who retained 41 of the circuit's 50 houses paying Paramount $1,700,000 and turning over full ownership in nine houses.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

I.M.P.S. Member Report

Prytz Gets NCCJ 'Boundaries' Plug

Having but a short time to exploit a sudden booking of "Los Boundaries," I.M.P.S. Member Roy O. Prytz, manager of the Granada Theatre, Duluth, Minn., went to the Northland Regional Office of the National Conference of Christians and Jews in Duluth and was accorded full use of its mailing list to postcard its entire membership on the theme, title, theatre and playdate, with a message from Gerald W. Heaney, chairman of the Duluth Inter-racial Committee urging every member in Duluth to see the picture and calling attention to the fact that the theme was founded on a real-life story in the Readers Digest and that Life magazine had recently selected it as the "movie of the week."

"This is one show," writes Brother Prytz, "that people really go out and advertise. . . . The reason I am reporting this is that if this picture is booked . . . I urge every showman to contact the office (of NCCJ) if they have one . . . at least two weeks in advance to get full benefit"—that is, of its mailing list and active cooperation.

Brother Prytz obtained wide publicity for the film's showing through the broadcast of a letter

Nutting Top Winner In U-I Campaign Contest

Floyd G. Nutting of the State Theatre, Eau Claire, won a $100 savings bond first prize in the contest conducted by Universal-International among the managers of Minnesota Amusement Co. theatres for the best showmanship campaigns on "Ma and Pa Kettle."

A $50 bond second prize was taken by Harry A. Salisbury of the Chateau Theatre, Rochester, Minn. Third prize—a $25 bond—went to Albert D. Fritz, Plaza, Watertown, and another $25 bond went to fourth place winner Howard W. Kadrie, Riviera, St. Paul.

For the Milking Run?

National advertising campaigns conducted by motion picture companies should be spread over greater length of time and extended to include a wider use of farm publications to benefit rural area theatres, Allied of Iowa-Nebraska is advocating. The suggestion to "deconcentrate" the magazine advertising time and to carry over into the rural circulation magazines is based on the theory that this would keep the picture alive longer and carry its sales talk right up to the picture's actual booking in subsequent and rural runs.

6 'Samson' Field Men Arrive at Destinations

First of a group that will penetrate 300 key cities in Paramount's campaign to reach every corner of the U. S. A., six special field representatives have arrived at their destinations to fire the opening shots of the campaign.

The men and their assignments are: Bob Kaufman, Atlanta, Miami, Miami Beach and Jacksonville; Al Fowler, Boston; Doug Taussig, Detroit; Walter Hoffman, Minneapolis and Des Moines; Harold Salemson, Dallas, Tucson and Phoenix; and Lou Gerard, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Also assigned and due to arrive in the field areas shortly are Milton Hale, Philadelphia; Sidney Kain, Indianapolis; Bud Freeman, Oklahoma City and Tulsa; Cass Adams, Rochester and Buffalo; and Bill Michaelson, Baltimore.

Golding, Silliphant On Campaign Chore

Dave Golding, 20th Century-Fox publicity manager, and Stirling Silliphant, in charge of special promotion, are in Washington this week to set up plans with the Air Force for the campaign on Darryl F. Zanuck's production, "Twelve O'Clock High," starring Gregory Peck.

Here's a good gag on MGM's "Adam's Rib" worked out by Lou Cohen, manager of Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn. With his assistant, Norm Levinson, and his student assistant, Lee Feigin, Cohen persuaded a retail market to display this sign in its window: "We Haven't Got 'Adam's Rib' . . . But We Have Delicious Spare Ribs. See, etc." And here's another. A boy and girl carried a pair of trousers through the downtown streets, along with this banner: "Who Wears the Pants in Your Family? See, etc." Better put these down as "musts" for your campaign on "Adam's Rib."

Down in Osceola, Ark., everybody knows Emma Cox, manager of the Gem and Joy theatres—that is, everybody who receives her periodical "The Low Down," and that must include every Osceola resident. Emma's kind of showmanship is just as important in winning patrons as are flash stunts and special ballyhoo. "The Low Down" is a letter to the public (printed as a handbill) in which Emma tells all about the coming attractions, interspersing this with odds and ends about local townspeople and other human interest copy. Sample: "If mary and sam bowen, luxora, see this and come to the box-office, they'll be our guests for this week." Idea is that since Mary's and Sam's names are in small letters, they may well not see them unless they read closely. In another paragraph Emma comments on a blessed event, which was a return engagement for the stork, and admonishes the father: "Don't double-dare Nature. She, like most women, won't take any back-talk from a man." Folks enjoy reading Emma's letters, and they get the lowdown on Gem and Joy shows. You can have fun getting out such a letter, and you can build friends and patrons for your theatre. Why don't you try it!

Would you like a fresh approach on an attraction coming up? Newsviews, Fox West Coast house organ, suggests that a tieup be made with the art departments of the high schools and junior colleges with an offer of prizes (merchant-sponsored, of course) for the best posters created on the program concerned. After judging, which should be well ahead of playdate, posters could be displayed in merchants' windows.

As an institutional goodwill stunt, some theatres are installing the new "long-playing" or "doughnut record" machines in their lobbies or lounges where patrons can play records while waiting between shows. Perhaps you, too, could tie-in with a local music dealer for the installation of one of these players. And it might be a good idea, whenever the occasion permits it, to have records of the songs from a forthcoming musical on hand for patrons to play. Naturally you'd have a sign near the player calling attention to the picture.

'Blue Grass' World Debut In Louisville, Jan. 4

Monogram has arranged to give "Blue Grass of Kentucky" its world premiere in Louisville, site of the Kentucky Derby, on Jan. 4.

'BATTLEGROUND' BOWS ON WEST COAST

GRIST FOR THE SHOWMANSHIP MILL

Through a national tieup between 20th Century-Fox and the Fred Astaire Dance Studios in connection with "Dancing in the Dark," nearly 500,000 moviegoers in key cities will receive free dancing lessons. The promotion provides that on the opening day of the film in every city where the Astaire salons are located, a free $5 guest dance certificate will be given to every patron entering the theatre. Cities included in the tieup are Atlanta, Baltimore, Battle Creek, Boston, Charlotte, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dallas, Davenport, Dayton, Detroit, Gary, Green Bay, Hammond, Houston, Jackson, Mich., Joliet, Kalamazoo, Macon, Milwaukee, New York, Peoria, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Providence, Racine, San Antonio, San Francisco, Springfield, St. Louis and Wilkes-Barre. In addition, the dance studio will provide from three to six couples from its teaching staff to perform on the stages of the theatres playing the picture and introduce the new "Dancing in the Dark" step.

Two book editions of "The Heiress," the long-run Broadway play which became a Paramount picture, and a special motion picture edition of Henry James' classic, "Washington Square," on which the play and picture are based, have just been published. The special movie edition of "Washington Square," priced at one dollar, is published by the United Book Guild. The jacket carries a portrait of Olivia de Havilland, star of "The Heiress," with full credits to the picture on the reverse side of the cover. The jacket carries the title, "The Heiress," with a note stating that the original name of the James classic is "Washington Square." More than 100,000 copies of this book have been prepared for national distribution and will be made available to book dealers in each situation where the film is exhibited. Promotion material aiding in the sale of the book and the picture will also be available through the United Book Guild. The two editions of the play are a 25-cent Pocketbook edition published by Bantam, and another by the Dramatists Play Service of New York.

SANTA WAS THERE. When Manager Lester Pollock of Loew's Theatre, Rochester, held his recent annual Thanksgiving Cartoon Show, Santa Claus was there to award prizes (donated by Unit Parts Corp.) to the lucky youngsters. Ads, trailer, pole cards and lobby display announcing the show were started two weeks in advance. Result: capacity audience. Above, Pollock assists Santa in presenting bicycle to little boy.

Use Talent Search To Build Business

Five theatres of the Kansas City division of the Commonwealth Circuit are out to drum up some business and counteract the traditional slack period between Thanksgiving and Christmas, and their weapon is live talent. Under direction of Eddie Mansfield, city manager, the Summit, Home, Tenth Street, Midway and Ashland theatres have begun a talent contest which will run through Dec. 16.

Weekly talent nights are being held in each of the Summit, Midway, Home and Tenth Street theatres, and a grand finale will be held on the December date at the Ashland. The Ashland neighborhood house on the East side, is the largest of the five and has full stage equipment. Two winners from each of the other four theatres will comprise a special revue to be presented at the Ashland, the show being completed with a line of girls and stage band, which Mansfield will produce with Rudy Vinzant, Ashland manager.

Contests in the other theatres are being handled by individual managers—Frank Meyers, Summit; Robert Wolf, Midway; Howard Wolf, Tenth Street; Norris Creswell, Home. Weekly prizes of about $25 are given in each of the four houses, all neighborhood subsequent-runs.

The full prize list at the Ashland has not yet been completed, but the cash awards probably will total about $50, with other awards of merchandise to add to the loot.

From time to time various amateur nights, search-for-talent shows, and other live entertainment events have been tried out in Commonwealth city houses, according to Mansfield. These have not been tried for some time, however, and in seeking something different for a city-wide promotion the search for talent appeared the best bet, he said. Returns on the first talent programs brought capacity in three of the four houses, Mansfield said.—K.C.

St. Louis to Premiere 'South Sea Sinner'

Universal-International's "South Sea Sinner" will have its world premiere on January 12 at the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, as part of some 50 day-an-date openings in the territory.

The premiere will be tied-in with a homecoming celebration for Star Shelley Winters who will go to St. Louis in advance of the opening for press and radio interviews and a round of civic events. She will make personal appearances at the theatre on opening day and then visit other key cities in the midwest which will participate in territorial openings.

Ben Katz, U-I midwest field representative, is already in St. Louis working on the advance campaign and will remain there through the opening. He will be joined shortly by additional promotional representatives from the U-I studios and eastern home office.

Asst. District Attorney Reviews 'Adam's Rib'

When "Adam's Rib" played Loew's Regent Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., the Evening News invited Dauphin County Assistant District Attorney David S. Kohn to review the film in detail. Kohn's report was favorable. He not only told the story and commented on the acting but interspersed comments on the legal aspects of the film from a prosecuting attorney's point of view. His review created quite a bit of extra interest in the film.—HRB.

BOXOFFICE ACTION ALL THE WAY!

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

There's something alluring and adventuresome in the title, "Bagdad," but Universal-International has taken no chances to make sure that its Technicolor film of that title is thoroughly sold to the public You can see that upon your first glance at the press book. The girl in Oriental costume (more girl than costume, by the way); the turbaned lover gazing at his full-bosomed loved one; the sketches of desert raiders, dancing girls, etc., put plenty of eye-appeal in that front-cover ad layout. But wait until you look inside. The press book opens out into a "24-sheet spread" which reveals an almost infinite assortment of ads, all of them certain to grab maximum attention on any amusement page. The catchlines are in keeping with the illustrations: "City of 1001 Pleasures . . . Land of 1001 Adventures."—"Reckless Adventure in the Land of Pagan Pleasures."—"All the Magic of the Arabian Nights Could Not Create An Adventure More Thrilling." And for those showmen who like to design their own ads, U-I provides a utility mat containing all the essential elements for the job. Exploitation suggestions cover one page, and the posters will draw attention wherever they're displayed. That 24-sheet would make a swell cutout for the lobby and/or the marquee. Furthermore, a couple of these on a sound truck for street ballyhoo would have all eyes.

From comedy to drama. The press book on RKO Radio's "The Threat" gets off to an impressive start with a smashing five-column ad on the cover. Lots of ad budgets won't be able to embrace this large display, but those that will should be well repaid when box-office receipts are counted up. A word description of the layout would not do it full justice, but you will see it for yourself. The other layouts, of various sizes, are just as effective, as are their catchlines: "Murderer Blasts a Trail of Vengeance."—"Suspense That Makes Your Nerves Scream Out" (ain't that a beaut?)—"Caught by a Killer Who Murders Without Mercy."—"The Most Amazing Kidnap in Crime History." You've got plenty to work with here. The posters and lobby displays are also of the seat-selling kind and should be used liberally.

Looking over the newspaper ads in the MGM press book on "Adam's Rib," one finds that clever catchlines are combined with illustrations of the two stars, Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. It's a combination that should sell tickets. Here are some of the catchlines: "MGM's Rib-roarious Battle of the Sexes."—"It's the Hilarious Answer to Who Wears the Pants."—"Funniest Picture in 10 Years." Incidentally, the ads vary widely in size and are therefore adaptable to all situations. There are two pages of promotions, stunts and tieups to keep the manager or his exploitation and advertising man happily busy.

'Living Trailer'

Manager Gene Pleshette and Publicity Manager Henry Spiegel of the Brooklyn Paramount Theatre, borrowed Rique Fernandez and JoAnn Giles from the local Fred Astaire Dance Studio to herald the showing of the reissue, "Holiday Inn." For two weeks in advance of playdate the couple demonstrated ballroom dancing technique in the Paramount lobby as large groups of people looked on. The stunt was a "living trailer" for the picture.

'HEIRESS' BALLYHOO MAKES A BIG SPLASH. This mammoth 24-sheet motorized ballyhoo was used by Jim Eshelman in Buffalo, N. Y., as one of the features of his campaign on Paramount's "The Heiress." The float was pulled by a jeep all over western New York. It made a big splash for the opening of the film at the Center Theatre.

'Heiress for a Day' Promotion Tops Campaign on 'Heiress' in Buffalo

"The Heiress" was introduced to Buffalo at the Center theatre, with an exceptionally fine advance exploitation campaign, directed by James H. Eshelman, Paramount Theatres district manager in the Queen City of the Lakes.

The top stunt, from an exploitation viewpoint, was the "Heiress For a Day" promotion tied in with WEBR, through which feminine radio listeners were asked to write in and tell why they "should be an Heiress For a Day." Many prizes were promoted for the winner, who turned out to be Mrs. Donald Essex of Sloan, N. Y. The stunt was widely promoted on WEBR ten days in advance.

Movie Review Contest

Another outstanding stunt was the tie-in with the local Kaiser-Frazer car dealers in the national "Heiress" movie review contest. Special heralds were printed and distributed in all dealer stores. Special posters were made up and used in dealer windows. All dealer cars carried these same posters pasted on bodies or in windows. Patrons were asked to write reviews of "The Heiress" and send them in. The best review was submitted to the national contest judges. On opening day the Kaiser-Frazer dealers put on a parade, headed by a big A-Board truck. It went to all parts of the city with the "Heiress" review message as well as the story on the opening of the picture.

A special cutout display, mammoth in size, was built on the top of each side of the Center marquee, which could be seen for miles up and down Main Street. An attractive valance was made up for use under the sides of the marquee. A big ballyhoo truck with a 24-sheet on each side and dates at the rear and along the bottom (see cut), was drawn through the city a week in advance. At night it was used in the various shopping communities and attracted much attention. A beautiful lobby display was used a month in advance.

Trailers were used in all the Paramount community theatres in Buffalo as well as in the Center and the Paramount, the company's other big downtown first-run.

The advance advertising campaign was an unusually large one. Fifty-line teasers were used starting two weeks in advance of the showing and there was a three-day-in-advance build up with large space. Many weeks in advance special stories and art were planted in the local newspapers as well as in some 30 out-of-town publications. A saturation advance radio campaign was used, so that every time one turned on the radio, out came something on "The Heiress."

There was a full-page roto section pictorial preview in the Sunday Courier-Express three weeks in advance and a half-page splash in pictures and cutlines in Everybody's Daily, the local Polish newspaper. A 200-line "Thank You, Buffalo" display was used a day after the opening of the picture, thanking the town for its splendid reception. The picture went over with a bang the first week and a big holdover newspaper ad campaign was used.

Those assisting in the campaign were Edward Miller, manager of the Center; C. B. Taylor, ad-publicity chief; Edward J. Wall, Paramount field representative and Al Fowler, special publicity representative for Paramount.—BUF.

Dandy School Tieup

Here's a workable idea for communities in need of more school facilities. Manager Thor Hauschild of the Piqua Theatre, Piqua, O., found it a valuable publicity-getter and goodwill builder. The city of Piqua was soon to vote on a school tax, a popular issue certain of passing, but to help the good work along, Hauschild booked the March of Time issue, "Fight for Better Schools." Informed of this the superintendent of schools said he would give the booking a big play in the local newspapers, announce it on all school bulletin boards, have announcements made in all class rooms and prepare a special note for all school children to take home to their parents informing them it was their duty to see the short subject. Theatre and playdate were carried in all of the superintendent's publicity for the film.

Winners Tell Why Movies AreBest

R. E. Agle, Sr., district manager of the Appalachian Theatre, Boone, N. C., Spartan Theatre, Sparta, N. C., and the Parkway, West Jefferson, N. C., has announced two winning entries in a recent contest for the best statement of 25 words or less completing the sentence "You can't beat motion pictures for year 'round entertainment because . . ."

A 12-year-old boy submitted the best entry from Boone. He wrote: ". . . movies transport one out of the everydayness of her own life into the magic of faraway places—a low-cost trip to the land of romance and adventure."

From Sparta the best entry was completed in this way: ". . . convenient as a deep freeze, available as the corner grocer, and as economical as doing your own wash, hometown movies make every day an exciting adventure."

A one-month pass was the prize for each of the winners.

Ties In Rogers Film to Sears-Roebuck 'Corral'

When Sears-Roebuck recently opened "The Roy Rogers Corral" in its store in Oneonta, N. Y., Manager Don Lee of the Palace Theatre made a tieup with the mail order house that netted him a sure attendance from the youngsters of that city at his showing of the Roy Rogers film, "Down Dakota Way." The Roy Rogers Corral, now installed in all Sears-Roebuck retail outlets, is devoted to children's wear named after the cowboy star.

Sears-Roebuck took a half-page ad in the local newspaper announcing the opening of the "corral," and right in the middle of it placed a large inset ad for the theatre and picture, announcing that it would give every child attending the Saturday showing a glossy photo of the cowboy star and his horse. Manager Lee sold the store's local head into putting two one-sheets on the picture in the "corral," and then sold him on another idea—the purchase of 100 children's admission tickets. The tieup should prove easy to duplicate in all cities where Sears-Roebuck has retail outlets.

LOOKS INVITING. If you're tired of winter already, this beach display at the Park Theatre, an Aldon house, of Roselle Park, N. J., ought to have you looking forward to next summer. Manager Harry A. McCormack (above) set it up to ballyhoo the showing of Warner Bros.' "The Girl from Jones Beach." The beach chair is "reserved for 'The Girl from Jones Beach.'" She can have ours—if she's Virginia Mayo.

Live 'Gambling' Lobby Display for 'Sinner'

A gambling outfit so realistic that it called out the police of Asbury Park, N. Y., to see that no gambling took place, was the novel and attention-pulling stunt that Manager Herb Gordon and Reade City Manager Guy Hevia constructed in the lobby of the St. James in that Jersey beach resort for "The Great Sinner." Gordon dug up gambling tables, an old roulette wheel, bird cage and dice tables. Back of the tables he placed a "barker" in beaver hat, Prince Albert coat, striped trousers and sporting a huge "diamond" stickpin in his Ascot tie who combined card tricks with his spiel for the picture. He collected great crowds every evening to hear his "barking" powers and to see the gambling devices.

LUCKY CONTESTANTS TO SEE 'SAMSON' PREVIEW. Through a tieup with the White Rock Bottling Co. and radio station WNEW's Martin Block, well-known disc jockey, 800 metropolitan New York radio listeners will be the lucky guests of Paramount at a special "Samson and Delilah" preview to be held at the Normandie Theatre on Dec. 17. Contest calls for contestants to identify a tune and tell why they prefer White Rock soda. Besides Block's radio plugs, the soft drink manufacturer is distributing 12,000 window displays and counter cards (see above), plus 500,000 package inserts to grocery and delicatessen stores. First announcement of the contest alone brought 3,000 entries.

I.M.P.S. Member Report

Guess Sand Weight Stunt for 'Sword'

I.M.P.S. Member Harold Grott, who manages the Rome circuit's Rialto Theatre in Baltimore, took his cue for an exploitation stunt for "Sword in the Desert" from the film's title, the word "desert" always suggesting sand. He tied-up a prominent drug store in the theatre's area for a window display containing a large glass bowl half-filled with sand, with a pearl-handled dagger sticking in the center of the bowl. Through the upper part of the bowl could be read the film's title, while topping the bowl was the rest of the mounted one-sheet containing the names of the leading cast members and stills. Beneath the bowl was a sign offering 50 double passes to the Rialto Theatre to those who came closest to guessing the weight of the sand. Stills were also placed around the window and a ballot box was set up inside the store into which entrants placed their guess, name and address. Brother Grott found this idea paid off handsomely in publicity.

Because "Sword' deals with the founding of the Israeli nation, the I.M.P.S. member next wrote a personal letter of recommendation of the film to Rabbis, various synagogues and Jewish centers in the vicinity of the Rialto.

Front page of the theatre program carried a reproduction of an ad for the film.

written to him by Heaney after witnessing the picture. The letter congratulated Prytz on booking this "outstanding film [which] brings out clearly one of American's most important lessons. It is a picture no one should miss. . . . The spontaneous applause at the end of the picture was wonderful.

And that, fellow I.M.P.S. members and other exhibitors, is cooperation worth going after, in the opinion of STR. Getting it adds a waving plume to Member Prytz' chapeau.

At the time of making his report, the Granada manager was working far in advance on "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon" and had distributed sheet music of the film's title song to 10 night spots and radio stations which were plugging it, and had started a yellow ribbon teaser stunt in the form of a card, with a length of yellow ribbon pinned to it, which read: "Wear your yellow ribbon on Superior Street Tuesday . . ." with the rest of the sentence revealed by lifting the loose end of the ribbon ". . . the mystery man may reward you!"

Racing Men Go to Bat for 'Dan Patch' At Amsterdam, N.Y

A racing picture must have something out of the ordinary for a racetrack to take a strong hand in promoting its engagement—and when that engagement is in a different town, it makes newsworthy copy for local newspapers and film trade journals. The Saratoga raceway went to great lengths in exploiting the showing of "The Great Dan Patch" at the Mohawk Theatre in Amsterdam, N. Y., which was sponsored by Amsterdam radio station WPTR. The promotion was so outstanding that Mohawk Manager Joe Burns found himself being addressed as "Dan Patch" at every turn, and if you think that made Burns mad, think again.

Station WPTR, aside from its own barrage of spot announcements before the racing broadcasts direct from the track, also arranged for a broadcast direct from the Raceway which, coming at the peak of the trotting season, won the interest of racing fans listening in as well as those at the track. The Raceway furnished drivers' silks, sulkies and trophies for theatre and window display. It also furnished a brand new sulky, with driver dressed in silks, drawn by an ex-pacing horse up and down Amsterdam's Main Street at noon and for two hours in the evenings when the stores were open. The horse wore a blanket plugging the picture. An usher wearing racing silks frequented streets and stores and a specially-bannered sound truck traversed the city streets.

Bus Is Bannered

For a week in advance and during the engagement a bus carrying a two by 12-inch "Dan Patch" oilcloth banner on each side, took people to Saratoga for the races, being parked for an hour on Main Street in Saratoga at noon and then in front of the Raceway's main gate while the races were on.

The Sanford Studs Farms office on Amsterdam's Main Street, gave the film a window display that was a crowd-stopper. The Stud Farms office will seldom let its window be used for any promotion of the sort.

Included in the radio campaign was a contest in which listeners were invited to guess the amount of money earned by the real racer, Dan Patch. First prize was a chest of Rogers Bros. silverware for eight.

Bob Cox Promotes 'War Bride' Search

Bob Cox of the Lexington, Lexington, Ky., got a series of gags over the air for "I Was a Male War Bride," through a tieup with a local disc jockey, who announced a search for a local male war bride with guests tickets as the award.

Cox also made a tieup for 20 spots on the "Want to know how Grant took Sheridan?" angle. He also spotted the theatre, rest rooms, mirrors, etc., with the "Have you seen Florence?" angle.

Radio Drive for 'Irma'

Manager Jack O'Rear of the Colonial, Harrisburg, Pa., centered his campaign for "My Friend Irma" on the radio, purchasing all available spots on the city's four stations and the Lemoyne station, carrying Marie Wilson's voice to the entier listening audience. He believes the campaign paid off at the box-office. —HRB.

Money Dates for January

With flattened pocketbooks after their holiday spending, moviegoers will be more choosy than usual about their motion picture fare, and exhibitors will be forced to use their ingenuity in exploitation campaigns to lure the public to the box-office. Primary lure is to book the best product obtainable and to maintain institutional activities. There are a number of occasions falling in January which afford excellent tieup opportunities.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AND NIGHT (see December Money Dates for suggestions for New Year's Eve). Celebrated on Monday, Jan. 2, as the First falls on Sunday. Children are home from school, eager for entertainment; give them a morning matinee with shorts, cartoons and an action feature. With special rates and promoted prizes it should be easy to get them to parade to the theatre. Adults, out for a good time at restaurants and night clubs, will prolong their evening at a theatre midnight show if a corking comedy is the offering, and it is well advertised and promoted. "Live acts" and screen shorts and cartoons will add drawing power. Don't sell more tickets than there are seats in the theatre, otherwise ill-feeling will be aroused on the part of turnaways or standees. Before the public schools close for the holidays, try for contest among pupils on when the new year starts among various nations and creeds and the name by which it is called; promote prizes and add guest tickets which are to be honored before or after New Year's Day. Seek a Western Union tieup for mention of theatre, film and playdate on all telegrams in return for trailer and lobby admonition to the public to send holiday greetings by wire. For a ballyhoo, have kids or theatre help erect snowmen. A horsedrawn sleigh, with jingling bells, if there is snow on the ground, is always an attention-getter in these days of automobiles.

JAN. 1: EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION, 1863. Arrange two weeks in advance with school superintendent or principal for a contest among elocution pupils to select the best reader to read the proclamation from the stage, with promoted chief prizes and guest tickets (good later in the week). Post the proclamation in the lobby. A brief address, or school essay contest, on the progress made by Negroes since the proclamation would be a good publicity-getter.

JAN. 3: POSTAL SAVINGS BANK'S 37th anniversary. Most post offices have postal bank departments. Arrange with postmaster for special rates for parties of postal bank employes (or all postal employes). Newspapers would give it mention.

JAN. 7: FIRST NATIONAL ELECTION in America, 1789. Good for a newspaper-school tieup on the origin and spread of free elections, the Australian ballot, voting machines, early franchise restrictions and how they were lifted, right up to the granting of the franchise to women here and abroad. Women's clubs and civic organizations should publicize, if not sponsor, such an essay contest if prizes are worth while.

JAN. 7: FIRST REGULARLY ESTABLISHED BANK in the U. S., Philadelphia, 1782. Banks should be interested in some observance of the occasion. Urge them to sponsor a public school essay contest on the establishment of this bank, the Bank of America, Savings Banks, etc., and to donate chief prizes; others could be guest tickets. Newspaper editor might sponsor it.

JAN. 9: FIRST PHOTOGRAPHS (Daguerreotypes), 1839. Arrange with photographers and/or individuals for lobby display of photographs, starting with daguerreotypes, tintypes, etc., up to modern photos, giving credit to those loaning the portraits. Photographers should carry cards mentioning theatre's feature and playdate.

JAN. 13: FIRST SUNDAY SCHOOL in America, founded by Quakers in Philadelphia, 1791. Try Sunday School superintendents and ministers for a contest among Sunday School pupils on the origin and spread of Sunday Schools, with a fine Bible or biblical concordance as awards, plus guest tickets for writers of other essays considered worthy of prizes.

JAN. 13: MODERN PRINTERS' INK first used in Philadelphia by Jacob Johnston in 1804. Newspapers and publishing firms should ballyhoo this as a plug for their own business. Newspapers should be asked to supply old copies containing stories of historical or spectacular interest for a lobby display.

JAN. 15-22: PRINTING EDUCATION WEEK. Contact libraries and newspapers for material on printing for a lobby display, such as illustrations showing how woodcuts, half-tones, zinc etchings, etc., are made. Inform school pupils of such a display; they will flock to it. If there is a miniature printing press in the community ask for a loan of it for a lobby display. A newspaper might be induced to set up a linotype machine in the lobby on which a compositor could type the names of visitors, or the title of the feature picture, and give the lead slugs containing the name or title as souvenirs. This would get all the kids to talking and bringing in their playmates and many of their elders.

JAN. 15: FIRST LOCOMOTIVE built in America, 1831. In railroad towns or those having a locomotive building or assembling center, offer special rates for parties of employes. Urge shop heads to purchase tickets at special rates for their employes. Worthwhile prizes should induce school officials to allow drawing class pupils to enter a contest for the drawing of an early or present-day locomotive (both steam and electric).

JAN. 16-31: MARCH OF DIMES. Cooperate with all bodies observing the occasion as a builder of goodwill in the community. Allow collections for sufferers of polio to be taken in the theatre.

JAN. 17-23: NATIONAL THRIFT WEEK. Plan well in advance for merchant cooperation; contact principal stores for tieups on their "early bird" reduced price sales through co-op ads, window and interior displays with theatre credits in return for theatre plugging their "specials" on trailer and in lobby. Offer them blocks of tickets at reduced price which they can give to customers spending a specified amount (or more) at their stores on any specified day or days. Contact banks for "start-a-savings-account" tieup; offer them reduced-price tickets which they can give to persons opening new accounts at a specified minimum deposit or over.

JAN. 21-29: NATIONAL CROCHET WEEK. Try women's clubs and dealers in crocheting materials for a co-op ad. A crochet fair in the lobby, with individuals entering samples of their work for promoted prizes and tickets would get a lot of publicity.

JAN. 23-28: NATIONAL HOBBY WEEK. Get up a newspaper-sponsored contest on the value of having a hobby, or to seek out the most unusual hobby in town, with cash and ticket prizes. Arrange for a hobby display in the lobby (stamps, coins, etc.). A school contest on hobbies of famous persons, or "Why I like—for a hobby" is worth trying for.

JAN. 24: SAMUEL F. B. MORSE FIRST EXHIBITED THE TELEGRAPH in 1838. Ask Western Union to loan transmission and receiving equipment for a lobby display, with film and playdate message on telegram blanks, cards in their windows and on messengers bikes. If contest can be arranged for essays on Morse's perfecting of the telegraph, or biographical sketch of his life and other activities, it will ensure much additional publicity, with a free telegram to any point in the U. S. as first and second prizes.

JAN. 25: OPENING OF TRANSCONTINENTAL TELEPHONE SERVICE, 1915. Offer the telephone company reduced rates for parties of its employes, or reduced tickets for it to give employes as evidence of its interest in their welfare and entertainment. Urge the officials to sponsor a school essay contest on the most modern methods of telephonic development—ship-to-ship, land-to-ship, station-to-train, etc.

JAN. 27: THOMAS A. EDISON PATENTED THE INCANDESCENT LAMP, 1880. Approach electric light and power company for a sponsored school contest on Edison's life, his many inventions, or, on the development of lighting through the ages. The light company might offer a first prize of a month's free lighting service. Theatre and feature should get mention in the company's light bills.

JAN. 29-FEB. 5: YOUTH WEEK. While but three days of this period falls in January exhibitors should lay the groundwork for cooperative tieups long in advance for carrying through into February. Women's clubs, civic organizations, Parent-Teacher Associations, veterans' organizations, Police Departments, political clubs, public and parochial schools are all interested in the education of children, preparing them for adult life, lessening juvenile delinquency, supplying them with wholesome entertainment and recreation, and will actively cooperate with any theatre activity dealing with youth betterment. Stage a special matinee on Saturday for youngsters; utilizing educational subjects and cartoons with an action feature. A stage show in which local children participate will bring out their families and friends. Arrange for some prominent individual—mayor, police chief, school head or other—to give a brief talk on obeying the laws, respecting the property rights of others and the like. An early evening performance at midweek in which Boy and Girl Scouts, school dramatic and glee clubs participate with drills, songs, instrumental selections and dances, will bring in extra cash, for their families and friends will turn out to see them perform.

Public Relations—What, How & Why

Just about a month ago I sat in an audience listening to a number of orations on public relations as the high point of industry problems, by such notables as TOA's Gael Sullivan and Herman Levy, MPAA's Francis Harmon, Paramount's Louis Novens, MGM's H. M. Richey, RKO's Leon Bamberger, 20th-Fox's Al Lichtman and many, many others of equal and lesser prominence. They were all on hand for the Memphis meeting of the Tri-State exhibitor's clan.

From the multiple recounting of the Chicago meeting and the TOA Los Angeles convention proceedings, I got the impression that the germination of the industry public relations program and its embryo, which is still aborning, was accompanied by labor pains of distressing severity, and that the most vociferous applause from the rank and file was puny recompense for the effort.

While I'm in the forefront of the cheering section and willing to take the biggest megaphone on the lot and blast my lungs out for what's been accomplished, I still can't help harking back to an interview of some two years ago with Maurice Barr, who does the public relations job for the exciting Paramount-Richards New Orleans office.

When I asked for details about the duties of his job, Maurice replied: 'Well, as I see it, public relations is just determining the common-sense thing to do and doing it."

I'm inordinately happy that all three branches of this industry have finally determined that the common-sense thing to do is to inject ourselves and our business into the inner family circles of our customer groups and assume an unselfish, even altruistic, attitude in the performance of deeds pointed toward the public needs and welfare of our communities. If louder cheering is the power needed to make the public relations program move faster and impregnate the industry more thoroughly, let's all do a "Fog Horn Clancy."

Explains How to Determine Your Public Relations I.Q.

One thing I noticed was that it remained for an inconspicuous fellow—not as to his physical proportions but as being important to the convention—to be the only speaker that didn't assume that everybody present had already taken a post-graduate course in the fundamentals of public relations. It remained for another New Orleanian, A. E. Chadick, executive vice-president of Motion Picture Advertising Service, to explain how to determine your P.R. "IQ," why good public relations was essential to long-range success, how it differed from publicity, and the reward to be expected from its proper application to theatre operation. Chad conducted the primer class needed by so many present, and then went on to take the listeners through grade school and fit them for the advanced discussions of the others. It was unfortunate that only a handful of exhibitors were present at Chadick's early morning session. I'm sure that, had they heard his rudimentary remarks first, they'd have gotten considerably more from the professorial oratory that followed during succeeding days.

Before embarking on the what-is-it and how-to-go-about-it explanations of Chadick, let me give you a bit of the fellow's background, because he's had more opportunity than most to intelligently study and observe from both the objective and abstract position. Way back in 1922 I first met Chad when he was manager of the Strand Theatre in New Orleans for the old Saenger Circuit. Later he major-domoed the opening of the Saenger when that theatre was rated as the fourth most beautiful in the world and became city manager of Saenger's New Orleans holdings. He joined the late Bill Johnson of MPA as a salesman and worked his way to his present position. He travels all 48 states, meeting with individual and group theatremen and individual and group merchants promoting interest in screen advertising. With such experience you must admit he possesses every qualification to speak authoritatively, since his comments represent a combination practical experience in the theatre and the studied observation of a vitally interested spectator.

What follows is a combination of quotation, paraphrasing, summary and personal interpretation of Chadick's remarks.

To begin with, public relations is not, as most seem to believe, an imperceptible something

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Pointers on Projection and Sound

Maintaining immaculate cleanliness in the projection room is the first requirement toward doing a good job of projection. Dust on optical elements wastes expensive light. Dirt in sensitive sound switches or contacts leads to noisy sound. Dirt in the aperture scratches the film, putting noise in the sound and streaks in the picture. Oil out of place rots rubber insulation and leads to breakdown. If projectionists have time to keep their equipment in perfectly clean condition and fail to do it, they are not doing their job; if they do not have the time, management should allot it to them.

Failure to keep projection room spare parts up to generous inventory requirements is the falsest kind of false economy. Surplus parts won't be wasted; they'll be used sometime. And they are not expensive. Investment in them is merely an insurance premium against the risk of having to refund a theatre-full of admissions because some $2 part is not at hand.

Similarly, when some component of the projection equipment shows signs of wear, indicating that bye and bye it will need to be replaced, it is very false economy to wait until the thing is almost worn out before ordering a new one. Should there be some delay in delivery, the part might wear through completely before the new one arrives. There's no harm in having the replacement in the theatre for a while before it will be needed. Projectionists can insure their show by placing such orders in good time; managers can insure the show by okaying those orders immediately.

No manager can tell what any item of projection equipment cost his theatre merely by looking up the record of the price paid for it. The original price will not reveal how much the item cost to maintain during its useful life. Shrewd and well-informed buying becomes very difficult unless the theatre keeps complete maintenance cost records in addition to purchase-price records.

When you see a friend after a period of absence, you may observe that he has changed, or grown older, etc., but such changes are seldom noticed in a person one sees every day. You see your picture and hear your sound every day. Have they changed for the worse so gradually that you haven't noticed it? Both projectionists and managers will benefit by occasional visits to a competing theatre; preferably one that offers Grade A picture and sound, and then returning as quickly as possible to their own theatre. The patrons, shopping about from theatre to theatre, have constant occasion to make comparison, and if theatre personnel never does, patrons may become strongly conscious of defects that manager and staff never noticed.

First-rate theatre sound is of far higher quality than anything the average patron is ever likely to hear over a radio, through a phonograph or from a juke box. It is therefore an asset to the theatre (as something the average patron cannot secure elsewhere) and as an asset well worth maintaining in topnotch condition.

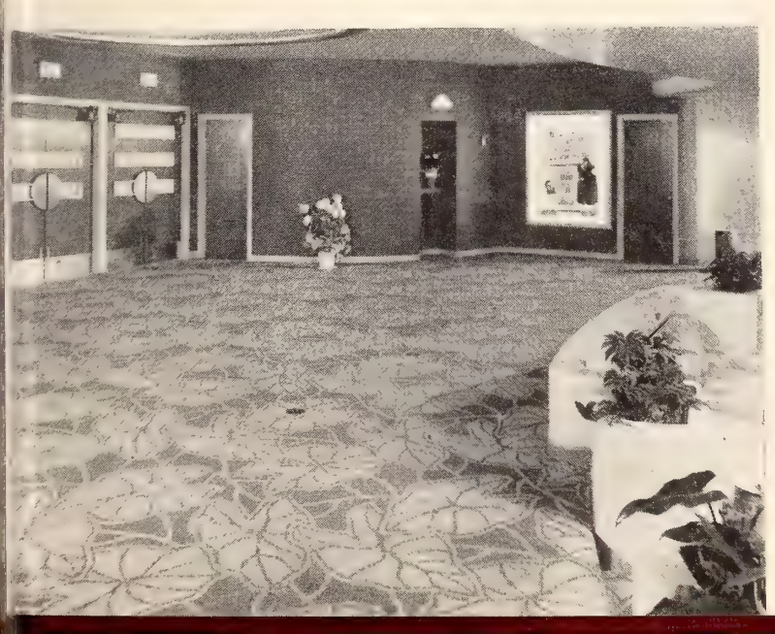
Today's Carpet Patterns Are Bolder, Designs Larger, Colors Brighter

Today's theatre carpets are bolder in design, the patterns are larger and the colors more brilliant, a survey of current products of leading manufacturers reveals. Further, the larger-scale patterns have definitely established acceptance and "can no longer be considered merely a trend," according to one prominent maker—Karagheusian.



Other developments stressed by that manufacturer, but noted equally in the products and statements of Alexander Smith and Sons and of Bigelow-Sanford, are in the direction of tropical motifs on the one hand; and of large patterns incorporating only one color appearing in two tones, on the other.

Karagheusian explains: "What carpet is best for any theatre depends a great deal on its location and on the type of patronage the management wants to build. Large-scale patterns lend added spaciousness and color to the interior. Tropical motifs such as birds and palm leaves bring gayety and brightness into the theatre. In heavy-textured floor coverings, using only two tones of the same color, luxury and elegance are no longer simulated but actual reality. This form of carpeting is specially favored by theatres that try to create a homelike and intimate atmosphere. Generally, great advances are currently being made in theatre carpet with the accent on contemporary motifs that lend character and movement to the decor."

Goodall Fabrics, Inc., currently stresses theatre carpeting in one pure, single color, for richer appearance and for the eye-impact of an unbroken expanse in one brilliant hue.

As to carpet prices, they won't come down because they can't—on this all leading makers seem agreed. They are also pretty well agreed as to the reason; namely, the change in the cost of imported wool. Domestic wool, it is said, is not well suited to high quality heavy-traffic carpeting of the type needed by theatres. Imported wool is used, but one major source of supply, China, is now no longer exporting. Removal of the competition of Chinese wool from the world market resulted in a partial shortage that enabled other foreign suppliers to charge materially higher prices. No one expects the price of imported wool to decline. As a substitute fibre, nylon is said to be excellent, and some is now being used, along with wool; but nylon of carpet quality is also high in cost.

FORUM REPORT

How to Plan New Theatre Floors For Best Results in Carpeting

Architects advise recessing floor areas to be carpeted to depth of carpet plus underlay, on all level and sloping floors and in aisles, but not on stairs. Nailing strips, rather than plugs, should be embedded in the concrete, and should run with, not across, aisles and ramps. For concrete stairs, strips should be embedded where tread meets riser.

By a majority vote of more than 90 per cent, the Architects Advisory Council is agreed that new concrete floors which are to be carpeted should be prepared for it by incorporating of suitable nailing material in the concrete at the time it is poured. A majority of nearly two-thirds of the members participating consider that this material should take the form of nailing strips, rather than plugs. An equally large majority considers wood, of one kind or another (many of the members have specific preferences) as the proper material to receive and hold the carpet nails.

A majority vote of 90 per cent holds that nailing strips should run parallel with, and not across, aisles and ramps; with, however, a considerable minority opinion that additional strips should be placed across the aisle or ramp at each end so the carpet can be nailed on all four sides.

On concrete stairs, such strips should be embedded where the step meets the riser leading upward to the next step. There is a small minority sentiment for an additional nailing strip on the nose of each step.

Where floors are not to be carpeted from wall to wall the area that is to be covered with carpet should be recessed for it. More than 90 per cent of the Architects recommend this procedure for level floors; nearly 90 per cent for aisles, and more than 60 per cent for sloping floors or ramps other than aisles. A close majority is opposed to recessing steps for carpeting.

Embedding Wood in Concrete

"It is very imperative to provide wood nailing strips in concrete floors and stairs, which are to receive carpet, when the concrete is poured. Continuous nailing strips are much to be preferred to plugs. If strips are not installed in concrete as it is poured, and the floor is drilled later to anchor them, there is a possibility that they will not hold, and in many cases the concrete will be badly chipped."

"Definitely, new construction should have nailing strips."

But of what material? The Architects are well agreed on wood, but not on the kind of wood. Some of their suggestions are: plywood; fir; treated fir; pine; treated open-grain wood.

One Architect adds: "Reasonably hard, rot-resistant wood such as cypress. Redwood is too soft to hold tacks. Or else white pine tox-i-sealed against rot with Dow's Penta."

And on the question of how these wood strips are to be held in place the members again have their individual preferences. They can be cemented by rubber or mastic; or held in by being bevelled, or both beveled and anchored; or nailed.

However, other methods of fastening carpet, that do not involve use of nailing strips at all, are also suggested. One member, who himself favors nailing strips, nevertheless lists several alternatives:

"In areas where carpet is to be laid use Nailcrete or other types of concrete that permit nailing. Or use tempered steel nails that can attach carpet to ordinary concrete. Or use the new type of carpet with sponge rubber backing that can be cemented to the floor in sections."

Still another alternative is brought forward by another Architect, who notes that: "In portions of the theatre where there is very little traffic the Robertson tackless carpet strip, but I would not recommend it for general use."

For stairs, as noted, the Council in general recommends nailing strips embedded where the tread meets the riser. Here also, strips are preferred to plugs; and one member of the majority adds:

"I would not cast plugs in the slab. If it is not possible to build in strips, let the carpet installers drill for plugs later."

A majority favors adding a nailing strip, or plugs, at or just under the nose of each step, as well as between tread and riser, to shape the carpet to the rounded overhang of the step. But as to this, a member of the majority suggests: "Yes, if the carpet is to be shaped to the nosing of a conventional tread, then another strip should be built in just below this nosing. But we prefer sloping the whole riser to form an overhang, and in that case one nailing strip is enough."

Still further with respect to nailing strips on floors in general: while the large majority, as noted, favor running these parallel with and not across aisles and ramps, a substantial number among that majority add that nailing strips should run around "all the edges of the carpet"—"around the perimeter"—"be continuous"—"placed at all edges and ends of carpet."

Recessing Floors for Carpet

Except where carpet is to run from wall to wall, all floors (whether level or sloping) should be recessed to receive the carpet and its underlay, the Council believes. Stairs are the single exception; there the advocates of recessing are in the minority.

There is, however, no clear agreement as to how deep such recesses must be; estimates of different members run between a minimum of ⅜" to an extreme maximum of 1¾".

"That depends on the thickness of the carpet."

"And of the matting."

"Whatever depth is necessary to acommodate the thickness of carpet plus underlay. In general, approximately half an inch."

"I should say, at least five-eighths inch to receive both padding and carpet."

Recessing stairs to receive carpeting is, as noted, disfavored by a small majority; and one Architect comments:

"Stairs should be carpeted from wall to wall if carpet is used at all. This will cost no more, and look better than forming a recess on the steps to save a little carpet. Where a stair thus carpeted ends at an upper floor that is not carpeted, a recess the same width as the stairs should be located to receive the carpeting at the head of the flight."

And as a kind of pendant to the meeting one Architect added:

"All these matters may be and are important, but most important of all is to have the carpet laid by labor that is really skilled in that job."

How to Select Carpet Quality, Weave, Colors and Underlay

Carpet quality is best judged by specifications as to type of wool, pile height, strands per inch, density of wool per cubic inch, etc., and direct examination to see that it conforms to specifications. Velvet is the best weave for theatres; red and gold best colors, with gray next. Carpet underlay is indispensable everywhere.

Manufacturer's specification for his carpeting, checked by examination, remains the best method of judging and comparing carpet quality, in the opinion of the Theatre Advisory Council. Only a minority vote among the members participating in the discussion approves laboratory tests or actual wear tests in the theatre.

Velvet is the preferred weave (as it was nearly four years ago when the Council considered that same question) and Wilton is still second choice. Axminster weave is not favored for theatre use.

In the matter of colors (where the general decorative scheme allows freedom of choice) red and gold are preferred, and then gray. Blue and yellow, and all light tones and shades, are disapproved as too prone to show dirt.

The majority feel that the same pattern should "usually" be used throughout the theatre, subject to exception in certain types of theatres.

And by unanimous vote, the Councilors are agreed that underlay is needed under all carpeting; that there is no area in the theatre where it can be omitted.

Quality and Weave

Some of the majority comment on selecting carpet for quality:

"Check type of wool used, number of tufts of wool per square inch, and tightness of weaving. Or, in general terms, the actual specifications of materials and fabricating determine the final choice."

"Check pile height, number of strands of yarn, and count per inch."

"Or on the basis of density of wool per cubic inch."

Such checks would apply in comparing two or more carpets woven the same way, but is there any one type of weave that is best for theatres? On July 20, 1946, on Page E-21, STR reported the opinion of the Council as of that time: "Velvet was the preferred weave, with Wilton next." In December, 1949, the Council still says the same. Some majority comment:

"We prefer the Velvet type carpet because it is generally woven closer than either the Wilton or the Axminster; and because all the wool that is woven into the carpet is wearable surface, whereas in the Wilton part of the wool is woven into the back. So, actually you receive more wear out of Velvet as compared with Wilton or Axminster. Wilton carpets, however, are woven much closer than the Axminster."

"Wilton or Velvet are best, due to their wearing qualities. Axminster will not give proper service."

"Velvet is best for wear per dollar cost. Wilton will look better longer, but our experience shows that Wilton costs about $1.00 more per 27-inch yard than good Velvet having the same life."

Still another Councilor adds:

"As between Velvet and Wilton we have no preferences if both are of good quality, for each have their advantages. Wilton provides sharper color lines and designs; but a good grade of Velvet is satisfactory, reasonable in price, and should cause no dissatisfaction."

Color and Patterns

The problem of soiling is uppermost in the minds of the Councilors in choosing carpet colors but not exclusively so. In the opinion of some members, some colors also show up better after long wear than others, and also are more favorable to the warm tones of lighting used in the theatre and particularly in the auditorium.

The following colors are named as desirable: red, deep red, maroon, gold, gray —and no others.

"Light colors will show dirt quicker than reds and golds."

"We prefer red, gold and gray. Normal theatre lighting of warm tones will compliment these colors."

"We have found that deep reds, maroons and grays hold up better and look better after service than blues or yellows or lighter colors."

The following represents the minority attitude on carpet color:

"We do not prefer any particular color as long as it is in harmony with the architectural type of the building."

In a general way, it can be said that the majority of the Council favors using the same carpet pattern throughout the theatre, but with a number of reservations and exceptions, and conditions.

"We use the same colors and patterns throughout in most theatres. However, certain new patterns of large scale are used in large, flat areas, and the same carpeting with background design only on stairways and in small, confined areas."

"We may change the pattern in large lounges, or in mezzanine lounges."

"It depends on the construction of the theatre. We usually have a different pattern in the ladies' room, and possibly in the aisles."

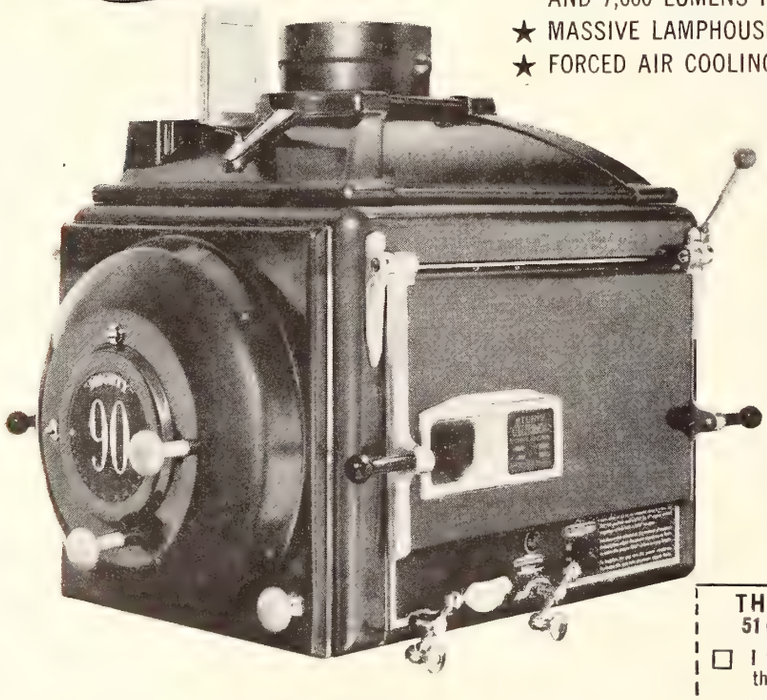
Carpet Underlay

As noted, the members participating are completely unanimous in holding that there is no place in the theatre where carpet should be put directly on the floor without underlay of some kind.

As to the kind of underlay (whether ozite or rubber) an even half of the Councilors prefer the ozite absolutely, while the others use both ozite and rubber, or are experimenting with use of rubber exclusively.

One Council member sums up the pros and cons of the two materials in this way:

"Generally speaking rubber has a better underfoot feel than ozite or hair pads. However, rubber does have some disadvantages in that it allows the carpet to shift or allows a general movement in the carpet, particularly if the rubber is half-inch thick. It also allows fine silt or sand to lie on top of the rubber, causing wear on the back surface of the carpet. The hair underlays absorb a portion of this material. Generally, rubber has a longer life than ozite. Usually one rubber installation will do many carpet installations, where ozite packs and, as already mentioned, absorbs dirt and sand.



"I do not believe that rubber should be used on ramps or sloping floors, as the carpet at the end of an aisle or at the upper portion of the ramp or aisle cannot be laid securely enough owing to the movement of the carpet. This creates a definite maintenance problem. But rubber is excellent for stairs, as the corners of the stair riser and tread do not cut it in two as they do hair padding."

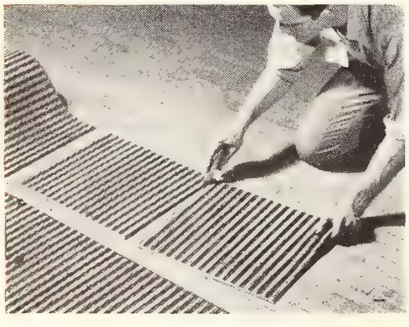
THEATRE EQUIPMENT GUIDE

Current Information for the Buyers of Theatre Equipment and Accessories



1. Advertising Illusion Compels Attention

All passersby, but children particularly, will be puzzled and attracted by this advertising illusion, here used to represent Santa Claus, which apparently turns its motionless head to "follow" the passing observer. As seen here from the left, the head appears to be looking leftward — seen from in front it would appear to look ahead— and from right to be looking right. Illusion is said to result from the fact that the figure is concave, and to persist through vertical as well as horizontal angles up to 180 degrees. Heads of motion picture stars could be made to behave similarly if a circuit or a producing company wanted enough of them to justify manufacturing a mold; and general ornamental designs such as this Santa Claus are currently in production, according to the manufacturer, Wonder-Art, Inc. Material is a rigid vinylite plastic, pressed to shape and then colored as required. Trade name is Magicast. The invention is patented.

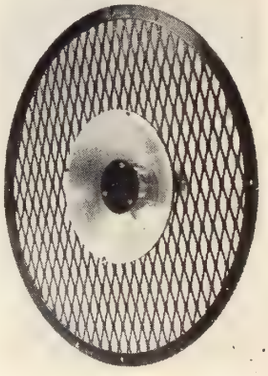
2. Rubber Matting for Runners and Door Mats

New and said to be exceptionally economical in price, the rubber matting here shown being cut to size as needed comes in rolls for use as runners, and in squares which can be subdivided for use as mats. Trade name is Do-All Matting; manufacturer is D. W. Moor Company. Material is new rubber, reinforced with strong cords, and ¼″ thick. The ribbed construction serves as dirt remover, provides safety, is described as comfortable to walk and stand on, silences footsteps, and prevents water and mud soaking into floor coverings. The material is said to lie flat and hug the floor. Colors currently available are Delft blue, Venetian red, Erin green and a mosaic pattern.



3. Improved Sponge Rubber Carpet Underlay

Made possible by purchase of new machinery, an improvement has been added to this Fremont Supreme Underlay in the form of waffling of both sides, rather than of one side only as was previously the case, according to an announcement by Fremont Rubber Company's Sales Manager, Wallace C. Gilbertson. The double waffling adds increased softness and resilience underfoot and at the same time provides a firmer grip to both floor and carpet. The sponge is ¼″ thick and comes in rolls 36″ wide.

4. Eight-Watt Tweeter for Better Sound Quality

Theatres that use ordinary cone-type speakers for public address or with their sound systems can obtain improved and more modern sound quality by adding this new tweeter or high-frequency speaker, which is specifically designed to permit simple and inexpensive installation. It is mounted across the face of an existing speaker. The tweeter is supplied with two different screen mountings, for use with either 12″ or 15″ cone speakers. The screen pictured here is mounted across the cone speaker opening. Depth of the tweeter is 2⅝ inches; its diameter less screen is five inches; voice coil impedance five ohms. The manufacturer recommends that the voice coil be connected directly in series with that of the cone speaker where the latter has an impedance of six to eight ohms; for other cone speaker impedances series connection combined with shunting resistors is recommended. Rated frequency impedance of the tweeter is 900 to "beyond 15,000" cycles; rated horizontal and vertical dispersion angles 70 degrees. Price is $24.50 for the 12″ mounting, $26.50 for the 15″ mounting; the maker is Mark Simpson Manufacturing Co., Inc.

5. Combination Soda Fountain-Storage Cabinet

Combination soda fountain and refrigerated storage cabinet here shown, latest development of Sweden Freezer Manufacturing Company, has one draft arm for soda and one for water, and cabinet space with removable wire shelves, and a lift of only a few inches for ease in handling heavy mix cans. Interior is enamel-finished for easier sanitation. Cabinet here shown is supplied either with remote condensing unit, or without it for connection to existing refrigeration systems. The Sweden Company calls this model a "low investment" unit.

6. Aids for Selling Refreshments in Drive-Ins

Refreshment sales equipment for the drive-in is illustrated and described in this two-color, eight-page booklet issued by National Theatre Supply. Vending carts, hot and cold refreshment containers that strap around the itinerant vendor's shoulders, frankfurter grills and steamers, sandwich grill, coffee brewer, French-fryer and hot peanut machine are all pictured and listed; in addition to the more usual theatre refreshment items such as popcorn machine, candy case, cold beverage and cold ice cream merchandising equipment, and popcorn and its seasoning. The pictures are clear and informative; accompanying descriptions are terse but cover all important details except price and offer much practical information in very short reading time.

7. Design and Construction of Drive-Ins

Detailed architects' drawings showing both drive-in ramp layouts, and profiles and viewing angles for drive-in grading; as well as a wealth of information about license, traffic, structural and electrical requirements for outdoor theatres, can all be found in this closely-printed and extremely informative 24-page brochure entitled "The Design, Construction and Equipment of a Drive-In Theatre." It is written by Fred C. Matthews and published by Motiograph, Inc. The booklet, however, is not intended to replace the architect, but stresses that "In building a Drive-In Theatre you really need competent advice from a registered architect and a theatre equipment specialist." Architects as well as theatremen may find the abundant data set forth in this brochure of value, since it is based on wide practical experience. How to select a suitable plot and what considerations to watch out for; and what to do about sanitation, water supply, and refreshment sales, are also set forth in these pages.

8. Drive-In Speaker Cover Saves Winter Removal

Drive-In speakers can now be left on their posts all winter—the cost of disconnecting and removing them in fall and replacing and reconnecting them in spring eliminated entirely. Central States Paper and Bag Company has brought out a protective transparent, water-resistant bag of polyethylene plastic that slips over the speakers, is gathered around the post beneath them, and there tied in place. Only preparation needed the following spring is to slip the knot and lift the bag off. Distributor is National Theatre Supply.

9. Magnetic Recorder for P. A. Announcements

"Plugs" for refreshment sales and coming attractions can now be recorded on a magnetic unit brought out to sell for less than $100 by Ampro Corporation. Record can be played back through the unit's own 4x6" oval loudspeaker, or piped into the theatre's sound system or p. a. system. Tape can be magnetically erased and re-used indefinitely for maximum economy. Threading and operation are said to be exceptionally simple.

Builds 1,000-Seat Theatre for Town of 4,000

House Has Refrigeration, Contour Curtain, and Top-Notch Projection and Sound

FACADE is buff brick with blue porcelain-steel name panel and "Varsity" in orange trimmed with white. Entrance is finished in buff and maroon porcelain-steel. LOBBY, center, is dominated by candy stand and popcorn machine behind it (not seen in picture). AUDITORIUM, below, has rose-colored contour curtain, screen curtain of gold rayon, and borders of eggshell and aqua.

Serving the town of Martin, Tennessee (population between 3,500 and 4,000) and surrounding countryside, W. F. Ruffin's new Varsity Theatre offers 1,000 seats on two floors, 80 tons of refrigeration in its conditioning system, an ultra-modern facade trimmed with porcelain steel, staggered seating, contour curtain, and the finest equipment for projection and sound.

The theatre is named for the Junior College of the University of Tennessee, which is located in Martin and has 750 students and 50 instructors. The theatre's name sign is in the college colors—orange and white—against a background of blue porcelain steel. Brick on either side of the huge name panel is buff, and the outdoor lobby area under the marquee is finished in buff and maroon porcelain enamel.

The ticket window is built into the buff-colored porcelain wall, at the patron's right as he approaches the theatre. Otherwise most of the wall space under the marquee, including the wall between the twin pairs of entrance doors, carries poster cases advertising present and coming attractions.

As they hand their tickets to the doorkeeper and pass into the circular, terrazzo-floored lobby, patrons find facing them and only a few steps away a large candy stand, with a popcorn machine directly behind it. Most of the rest of the lobby wall space, except as needed for doors, carries poster cases advertising coming attractions.

Auditorium seating is staggered in the orchestra but not in the balcony. On both floors it is arranged on a two-aisle plan. The staggered seating is effected by using chairs of different width in alternate rows.

Most conspicuous feature of the auditorium is the contour curtain, of rose-colored satin, on which a color wheel plays when it is raised or lowered. Side legs and overhead border are of aqua and eggshell damask, while the screen curtain is gold rayon scalloped in a horizontal design. Exit drapes are dark velour. All curtains and draperies are flameproofed.

Press Date Changed for Theatre

Opening of the Varsity Theatre caused the local newspaper, the Weakley County Press, to print a day earlier and appear on the streets on Wednesday instead of Thursday. The Press also devoted its leading editorial to the new theatre, under the title of: "The Varsity Theatre a Compliment to Martin."

The editorial went on to say that: "The Weakley County Press congratulates the Ruffin Amusement Company and feels highly complimented that it should choose our fair city to construct such an elaborate house of entertainment."

Present policy of operation is four shows on weekdays, three on Sundays, and on Saturdays double features and continuous

New Theatre Projects Up Very Sharply This Fall

Dramatic upturn in new theatre projects reported by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW was witnessed this Fall. As compared with the summer average for July, August and September, new projects jumped 44.7 per cent in October, while November showed an even higher score of 55.3 per cent more new projects than the average for the three summer months.

The increase was registered in both drive-in and indoor theatre projects. The improvement in November's figures over October's was caused by an increase in the indoor theatre field, the number of new drive-in projects reported remaining practically constant during the two months.

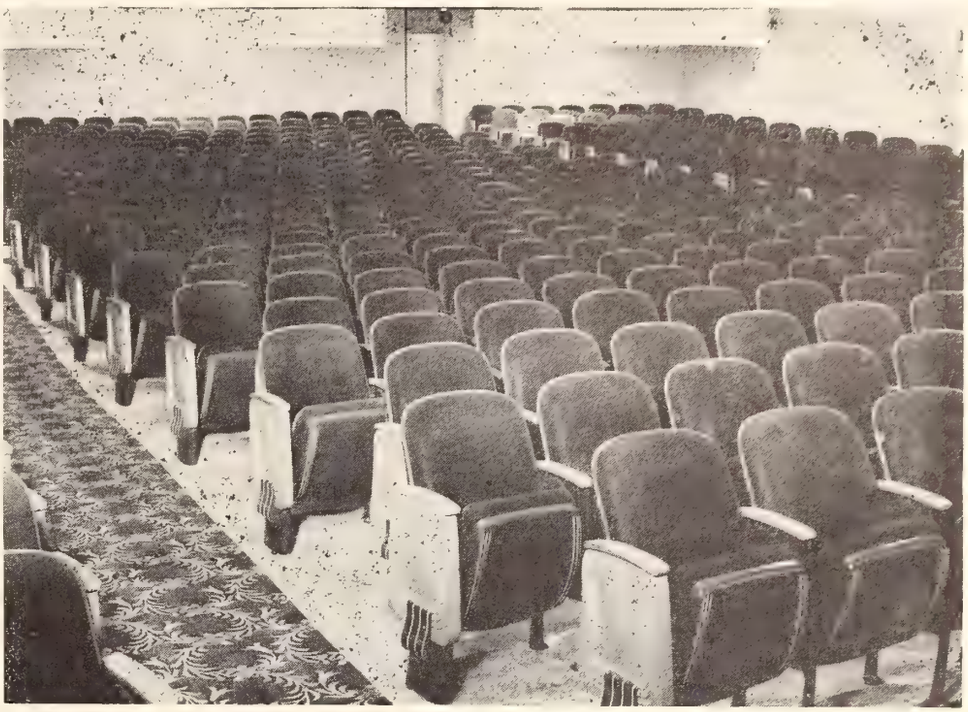
As against the Summer average of 47 new theatre projects of all types per month, October registered 68 and November 73. New drive-in projects numbered 49 in October and 48 in November, as against the summer average of 32 per month. New indoor projects were 19 in October and 25 in November, as against the summer average of 15 per month.

Drive-Ins Grow Larger

A definite evolution toward larger drive-ins can be seen from these figures: Average drive-in capacity (number of cars): Summer, 645; October, 646; November, 708. Average drive-in cost: Summer, $114,970; October, $128,428; November, $151,545.

The increased cost for drive-ins is closely related to their increased size; in actual cost-per-car there has been a slight decline from the three Summer months' average of $210 per car to $182 in October and $196 in November—these figures being restricted to reports that give both cost and capacity for the same theatre.

More Indoor Projects



New indoor theatre projects averaged 15 during the three summer months, but totalled 19 in October and 25 in November. Average cost-per-seat (where capacity and cost figures are available for the same theatres) remains moderately constant at $140 in September, $150 in October and $146 in November.

In geographical distribution these new projects were spread over every part of the United States. October's reports have the following distribution: Illinois, 9; California and Wisconsin, 5 each; Kansas, Pennsylvania and Texas, 4 each; Missouri, 3; Arkansas, Georgia, Idaho, Kentucky, Maryland, Minnesota, New Mexico, New York, Oregon and Tennessee, 2 each; and 1 each in Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, New Jersey, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Canada.

November's distribution saw 8 new projects each in California and Illinois; 5 in Pennsylvania; 4 each in New Jersey, New York, Tennessee, Texas and Wisconsin; 3 each in Iowa and Louisiana; 2 each in Connecticut, Georgia, Kentucky, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Washington and Canada. And 1 each from: Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Indiana, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Ohio and Oregon.

Air Conditioning and Retractor Chairs In 850-Seat House Charging 45 Cents

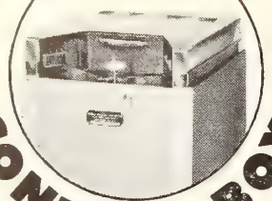
ARKANSAS THEATRE FIRST USER OF LATEST AMERICAN BODIFORM; HAS COMPLETE YEAR-ROUND CONDITIONING INCLUDING HUMIDITY CONTROL

At top, some of the 850 chairs, first of this model to be installed in any theatre anywhere. Right, brick-and-tile facade of the new house, which has all-glass entrance doors and mirror panel above them.

When opening his new Cameo Theatre, in the township of Magnolia, Arkansas, Manager Harold L. Runnels chose three equipment features to advertise in red type in his first program leaflet—Westinghouse air conditioning, Simplex-Voice of the Theatre sound, and American Bodiform Retractor chairs.

The Cameo is of all fireproof construction; has year-round air conditioning including complete humidity control and seats 850 on two floors. Policy is first run, with admissions 45c for adults and 10c for children every day except Saturday, when the adult price is dropped to 35c.

The facade is light-colored brick above the marquee and tile around the all-glass door entrance. Box office is at the patron's left. A sloping mirror is mounted above the glass doors the full width of the entrance-way. At the peak of the V-shaped marquee is an enamel cameo—corresponding to the name of the theatre—which measures 10x10 feet with its frame, and is illuminated with neon in three colors.



A six-foot oval cameo in white plaster adorns one wall of the carpeted foyer. At one side of this ornament is the entrance to the women's lounge and at the other side the refreshment counter.

Side walls of the auditorium are ornamented to their full height and half their length by enormous mural representations of the magnolia blossoms for which the community is named. Seating in both orchestra and balcony follows a two-aisle plan. The Cameo is the first theatre in the world to install the new Bodiform Retractor chairs, according to their manufacturer. "The reason for choosing American Bodiform Retractor," states Manager Runnels, "was that we have American Bodiform in our Macco Theatre and think they are the best seats money can buy. For our new Cameo we wanted the best and think Bodiform Retractor will provide even better service and movie comfort for our patrons."

Owners of the Cameo (and also operators of the nearby Macco and Sunset Drive-In) are Robb & Rowley United, Inc.; Mrs. W. P. Florence and W. P. Florence, Jr. Radio interviews, broadcast through KVMA, in which patrons were asked to tell what they liked best about the new theatre, featured the Cameo's opening.

Maintenance Memos for Managers

JANUARY, 1950

1. Does noise of machinery, or talking in the projection room, inconvenience your balcony patrons? If so, consider advisability of glassing in projection room portholes.
2. Is your screen old and no longer able to reflect light efficiently? Consider resurfacing or replacing it to give patrons a brighter screen image and avoid waste of current.
3. Time now to reinspect the roof for signs of any damage or weakening suffered under the strain of winter conditions, and to order any repairs needed to prevent worse trouble.
4. Time also to inspect outdoor painted metal work, such as the marquee, marquee holding bolts and rods, water tank, water tower, name sign, etc., for winter damage.
5. Are your 1950 changes in operating and maintenance routines working as well in practice as you expected they would, or do some of them need still further revision?
6. If candy counter location is too close to radiators, etc., have staff rotate candy between between counter and cold storage place to minimize loss of salability resulting from heat.
7. Do your entrance and lobby impress patrons as clean, comfortable and inviting? Is the cashier neat, pleasant and invariably courteous to every one of your guests?
8. If you are redecorating your auditorium in any way that is likely to change sound absorption, have service man recheck distribution of sound over whole seating area.
9. Do you maintain a regular running inventory of all lamp bulbs and tubes, cleaning compounds, fuses and other supplies? If not set one up as guard against costly "leaks."
10. Do you or does some qualified staff member spend an occasional night with cleaning crew to see they do their work thoroughly and without waste of detergents?
11. Have you set up a regular schedule for periodic inspection and test of whatever emergency lighting installation you have, to make certain it will always be ready for emergency?
12. Time for another inspection of condition of all extension cords, their plugs and electrical connections? Faulty plug and discarded popcorn wrapper could start fire.
13. Are all hearing aid units still in good condition? Have you set up a schedule for their frequent inspection and for prompt repair of faults as soon as discovered?
14. Time for re-inspection of all vending machines. Put coin in each, note whether operation is still quiet, efficient, flawless; have any faults found corrected promptly.
15. Do ushers replace flashlight batteries promptly as needed, and have they a sufficient supply at all times? Do not subject patrons to minor irritations.
16. Are all newly-hired employes thoroughly instructed in your safety procedures, and older hands given refresher instruction in safety at reasonable intervals?
17. Do you authorize projectionists to come in before show time in order to inspect equipment each day and to rewind and examine every new reel of film before projecting it?
18. If you maintain a bulletin board for instructions to staff members do you take care that it is always up to date, that old notices do not remain to obscure new ones?
19. Time for another really thorough check of seating to find small faults before they grow worse and thus avoid possible injury to patrons or damage to their clothing?
20. If you should fall sick and could not come in, or had to leave early, is your organization so geared it could carry on as effectively as if you were present in person?
21. If an employe falls sick and can't come in, or must leave early, will that take you away from your own important duties or is your organization geared for such contingencies?
22. If you have a seldom-used announcing system have you a regular schedule for inspecting it and trying it out to make sure it will always be ready for instant use?
23. Do you have a regular schedule for meeting with the projection staff and talking over with them their problems, condition of equipment, and other details?
24. How often are footlight trough and other curtain-lighting coves cleaned and painted? Are you wasting current by burying lamps and reflecting surfaces under dust?
25. Do you occasionally check adjoining properties for fire hazards that could endanger your theatre? Your neighbors may be less fire-conscious than you are.
26. Time to have all dimmer and flasher banks re-checked for burned, worn or defective contacts or other parts, to prevent development of serious faults?
27. If cleaning staff really needs any new vacuum cleaner, brooms, brushes, mops, etc., don't fail to provide them. Worn-out tools never could produce first-class work.
28. Time again to remove stain or dirt from around heat grilles or radiators, repainting as necessary? Radiators should be cleaned and wire-brushed, at least.
29. Time for re-check of condition of upholstery of all lounge and lobby furniture to assure patron comfort and to catch small faults before they grow into serious ones?
30. How often do you call in an expert to go over your heating plant to make sure it is still functioning at maximum efficency and not wasting expensive fuel?
31. Have you personally examined how well your arrangements for removing snow and ice from in front of and around your theatre are working, and whether they need any improving?

Snack House Placed at "Population Center" In New 950-Car Pennsylvania Drive-In

Refreshment sales building is not at center of parking area but two-thirds of way toward rear, since rear ramps hold more cars than front ramps and refreshment sales location was chosen to be "center of population." Building can be entered from all four sides and has 30 x 60′ patio in front.

Featuring separate buildings for refreshment sales and projection equipment, so each can be located at the point of maximum advantage, David Milgrim's new Boulevard Drive-In at Allentown, Pennsylvania, has the refreshment building located not at the center of the parking area but at the "center of population" in that area.

Since the rear ramps stretch over wider arcs than the front ramps, and therefore accommodate more cars, the "center of population" is not half-way from front to rear of the parking area, but approximately two-thirds of the way toward the rear —in line with the tenth of the fifteen ramps.

This is too far back for best projection results, and accordingly the separate projection building is located two-thirds of the way toward the front—in line with the fifth ramp. Even at that location, the projection distance is 280 feet. Interposition of a large childrens' playground between the front ramp and the screen provides better viewing for patrons parked in the front row, inasmuch as the screen is sixty feet wide and could not be watched with comfort if the front row were too close, but increases projection "throw" accordingly.

Designed by William H. Lee

William H. Lee, Philadelphia theatre architect and member of STR's Architects Advisory Council, designed the new open-air theatre. It is located at the corner of Allentown's Fenwick Street and Union Boulevard (hence its name) and occupies a total of twelve and three-quarters acres including ramps, drives, playground and landscaped areas. Site was bought from the Pennsylvania Railroad at a reputed price of $60,000. The theatre opened so recently that landscaping still has not been completed. Artist's drawing shown above represents, says Mr. Lee, "a faithful delineation of the theatre as it will appear when the planting has been developed."

The entrance drive is wider than the exit drive—50 feet as against 30 feet—and provides a total hold-out area of 850 lineal feet between the highway and the box offices. There are two of these, each serving two lanes. These twin structures are not devoted to ticket booths alone; in addition one contains the manager's office and the other an usher's room.

All ramps and drives are paved with oiled gravel—the drives with oiled 4-inch stone and chips, and ramps with oiled 2-inch stone and chips. Each ramp is 38 feet deep. Wire fencing surrounds the entire area.

Illumination is provided by "moonlight" from the top of a 100-foot pole; by fence lights every 20 feet along both sides of the parking area; by downlights at each speaker post, and by cove lights and neon border lights at the refreshment building. Neon and incandescents are used on the V-shaped attraction sign; and there will be concealed lighting in the shrubbery when planting and landscaping have been completed.

The concession building at the "center of population" can be entered from all four sides; and a 60 by 30 foot patio extends in front of it. Total sales counter length is 75 feet. Additionally, the same building contains men's and women's rooms, a storage room, and transformer vault for the incoming power.

To reach the playground from the refreshment building patrons walk down theatre's center aisle (which divides to make an island of the projection house) and thence through a gate, since the playground is fenced off from the parking area. Maximum depth of the playground is 128 feet from the fence to the screen. Playground equipment installed includes carousel, swings and see-saws.

Maintenance Memos for Projectionists

JANUARY, 1950

1. Are all your projection reels still in good condition? If not, have you asked for new ones? Don't risk having to project from defective reels or shipping reels.
2. Do you use field glasses, or go down into the auditorium now and then, to double-check your screen image for perfection of focus, even illumination, absence of travel ghost?
3. If your equipment includes spare arc rectifiers or motor-generators do you inspect and operate them on periodic schedule to make sure they will always be ready when needed?
4. Is projection room lighting so bright, or so poorly planned, it interferes with your critical observation of the screen? If so, ask to have needed changes made.
5. Are you thoroughly familiar with Underwriters' and your own local safety codes, and do you watch projection room and its fittings constantly for any non-conformance?
6. Do you keep in touch with technical developments through trade papers and otherwise, and recommend helpful improvements that happen not to have come to your manager's attention?
7. Check back-screen speaker connections to make sure that all are tight and uncorroded; check all back-screen speaker fuses for perfectly cool operation.
8. Remove all tubes from their sockets, examine tube prongs and socket contacts for dirt, and for evidence of poor contact or of sparking between contact and prong.
9. Time to make another thorough experimental check of the action of all port safety shutters for reliability and fast response? Adjust them as found necessary.
10. Time for another close examination of the condition of the asbestos-covered leads to ALL lamphouses? If replacements will be needed soon, order them well in advance.
11. Re-check all motors and motor-generators for condition of bearings, brushes, commutators and lubrication; have all indicated repairs and adjustments made promptly.
12. Carefully re-examine the contact blades and contact clips of all power and arc switches. Adjust, clean and burnish them as necessary; order indicated replacements well in advance.
13. Time again to inspect carbon jaws in all lamphouses? If any are in less than perfect condition sand off roughness or make other needed adjustments, or order new ones.
14. Time to re-check the non-synch for quality of sound, signs of wear, need of lubrication? If you have a little-used announcing mike, try it out at the same time.
15. Are you ever forced to mutilate a print to make sure you won't miss a changeover cue? Simple and highly effective cue markers are available at very low cost.
16. If you have a spare mechanism installed for use in emergencies run a reel on it from time to time to assure that it will always be in perfect condition whenever needed.
17. Re-check to make sure projection room still has every type of special wrench and special tool needed. Order replacements at once for any that are found missing.
18. Time again to inspect changeover mechanisms and their switches for signs of wear or imperfect contact? Order any replacements that may be needed soon well in advance.
19. Test the action of the automatic fire shutters in all projector mechanisms to make sure they are still in good condition and completely reliable in action.
20. How long since the accuracy of projection room electrical meters has been tested? Borrow a good test meter, or at least check them against each other.
21. Time for another examination of all circuit-breakers and automatic motor starters for accuracy of action, condition of contacts, and adequate lubrication?
22. Are your 1950 changes in operating and maintenance routines working out in practice as well as you expected they would, or do some of them need still further revision?
23. Are your new 1950 inspection and report forms and records working out in practice as well as they were supposed to, or do some of them need to be revised still further?
24. Do you find any difficulty in starting equipment each day because lubricating oil or grease has stiffened these cold winter nights? Why not re-lubricate for winter?
25. If projection suite has radiators, do they have steeply-sloping covers as Underwriters require so no one can ever by chance place a reel of film on one of them?
26. Time once again to re-examine ALL soldered connections throughout entire sound system? Inspect each one carefully; re-solder any that appear to be even slightly doubtful.
27. If your sound amplifiers have plug-in types of condensers for easier replacement, plug in the spares now and then before show to make sure they will always be ready if needed.
28. Why not try out all spare tubes before or after show to make sure no imperfect one got past inspection but that all are ready for instant use if needed?
29. Go over holding nuts of all transformers and choke coils in all amplifiers and rectifiers, tightening any that have worked even slightly loose. Loose laminations cause hum in sound.
30. If projection room ventilation is kept to minimum this cold season, make certain arc exhaust flues are not partly clogged. They don't sell new lungs.
31. If your lamphouses are relatively old have you checked in detail into what the latest and most efficient models could do to give you a better show or lower operating costs?

News of the Locals and Men Who Put Shows on the Screen

Cecil Wood

Veteran projectionist Cecil Wood, member of Local No. 306, New York, and senior member of the 25-30 Club, was honored on the fiftieth anniversary of his career as a projectionist when the owners and staff of New York's swank Paris Theatre, where he is currently employed, joined to stage a luncheon in tribute to his fifty years of service to the industry. The luncheon was held in the theatre, at noon of November 10th. Cecil Wood has projected motion pictures since 1899, in theatres all over the world.

The Bridgeport (Conn.) Sunday Post recently printed the following verses, composed by Jerry Conboy, projectionist at the Loew's Poli Majestic Theatre in Bridgeport and member of Local No. 277:

"After the show is over
And the town has gone to bed
Comes another group of show folks
To earn their daily bread.
The patrons never see them.
They work throughout the night
With mops and vacuum cleaners
To keep things clean and bright.
They speak a different language
That's hard to understand;
But regardless of their accent,
I think each one is grand.
At daybreak every morning,
With shawls around their head,
These little old charwomen
Trudge wearily home to bed."

Local No. 163, Louisville, Kentucky, has entered two bowling teams in the A. F. of L. Bowling League, of which the Local's business agent, John Flaherty, is president. He is also captain of one of Local No. 163's two teams, the other being headed by John Dahl. Membership of the teams comprises: A. Ansbach, Sr., and A. Ansbach, Jr.; L. Bevel, Lester Grewell, R. E. Gross, Jesse Hopewell, R. Hulette, Frank Riffle and Irvin, John and Roy Ulmer.

Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York has named James Murphy, Secretary and Business Agent of Local No. 750, (Treasurers and Ticket Sellers) to membership in the advisory committee that will plan improved arrangements for sale of theatre tickets to eliminate undue speculation. The same committee will also consider proposed changes in the New York City building code as it applies to theatre construction.

Judge William A. Frack of Northampton County, Pennsylvania, was presented with a life membership card by Local No. 203, Easton. As a young lawyer Frack gave his services to the local gratis in connection with an injunction case, which he won. He has since served as District Attorney, and now as County Judge, but Local No. 203 has never forgotten the service he rendered in the desperate depression days of 1931.

"Recognizing that television is a new industry which has not been economically stabilized," a statement by Local No. 815 of Los Angeles Television Studio Broadcasting Employes explains, an agreement just concluded between the Local and Station KTLA provides as many basic advantages for employes as possible "without imposing on the new industry conditions which were not economically feasible."

Knights of Labor Local No. 3030, a Massachusetts organization competitive to the I.A., has been absorbed by Local No. 182, Boston, and Local No. 96, Worcester, with similar action expected soon by Lawrence Local No. 256. Fifty former Knights were admitted into the Boston organization at initiation fees of $50 each, $326 less than the standard fee for new members.

A memorial fund, proceeds of which will provide yearly scholarships at two local universities, has been set up by Local No. 277, Bridgeport, Connecticut, in honor of its charter member and late President Emeritus, Peter Benard. Baseball and basketball leagues for children in local public and parochial schools will also be established by the proceeds of the fund.

Adrian A. McCroskey, member of Local No. 446, Astoria, Oregon—who paid his way through college as a working projectionist and is now handling details of multi-million dollar contracts as an electronic engineer in the employ of Glenn L. Martin Co., of Baltimore—retains his I. A. membership. "It is a very good insurance against poverty," he says.

Walter Dunkelberger, member of Local No. 510, Fargo, North Dakota and Moorhead, Minn., and STR's correspondent in Fargo, carried the colors at the latest convention of the North Dakota Fraternal Council of the United Commercial Travelers of America. Dunkelberger had been elected to represent Fargo Council No. 65, UCTA, at the convention.

International President Richard F. Walsh recently told a gathering of I. A. members from Texas and Oklahoma that he had lived in the same community with Gerhart Eisler, alleged escaped Communist agent, and that his conduct had been such that none of the neighbors could have been convinced that the man was a Communist.

Local No. 465, Joplin, Missouri, supplies a projectionist and 16-mm. equipment without charge for weekly entertainment of children at the Joplin Children's Home.

Local No. 154, Seattle, Washington, supplies projectionists free of cost for showings of the city's Community Chest film.

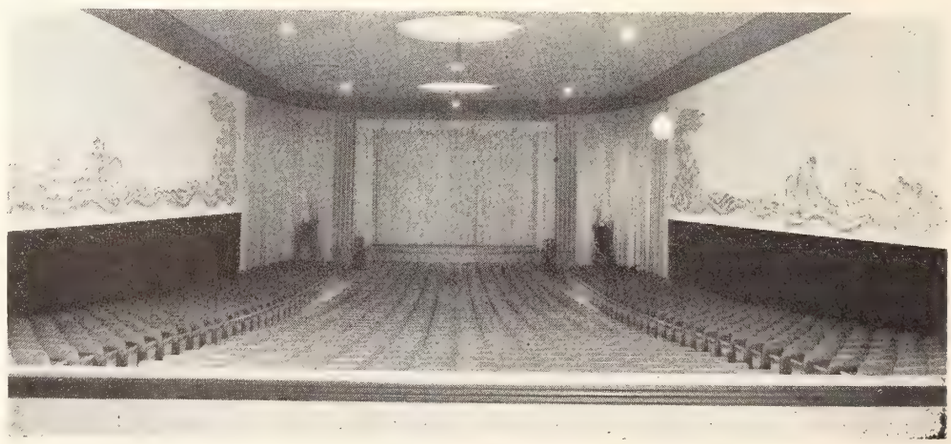
Gleaming white enamel adds brilliance to highly-illuminated entrance way.



Galion, Ohio's, new Galion Theatre provides 1,200 luxurious leather-and-plush chairs for a town having a population (at latest count) of 8,785. The house is completely air conditioned, has emergency lighting facilities, and is ornamented with the latest structural and decorative materials.

White porcelain features the facade, lighted above the marquee by concealed strips of neon; while below the soffit the white, gleaming material adds brilliance to the entrance way. Box office is at the right as patrons enter, and the refreshment stand is also at the right just a step inside the lobby door.

Flooring of the lobby is terrazzo, recessed to receive rubber matting. Lobby walls are marbleized, ornamented with baroque floral murals painted by Frank Lackner. Lobby ceiling is cerise and white, illuminated by soft white recessed neons.

Color scheme changes abruptly in the auditorium, which features turquoise and green, with screen draperies of green and gold. Chairs are ultra-comfortable models finished in leather and plush, while auditorium side walls carry Lackner murals similar to those in the lobby.

Matzinger and Grosell, of Cleveland, were the architects. Harry Fickensher, local partner and the active manager, inaugurated the Galion and his 41st year of theatre management simultaneously. Charles Alcorn is assistant manager.

Popcorn Now $200,000,000 Business, Convention Told

Over $200,000,000 worth of popcorn is sold in the U. S. annually, more than half of it in theatres and other places of amusement. H. T. McNamara, president of the National Association of Popcorn Manufacturers, told the NAPM's annual convention at Chicago's Palmer Hotel.

McNamara also cited U. S. Department of Agriculture figures to show that a pound of popcorn contains twice as many food energy units as a pound of beefsteak.

Popcorn prices will not change appreciably during the current year, Dr. Iver J. Johnson of the Department of Agronomy of Iowa State College told the convention. The effect of the comparatively small 1949 yield will be offset by the huge carryover from 1948, he points out.

Exhibits included popcorn dyed in all the colors of the rainbow, and tinctured with flavors, including garlic.

In addition to re-electing McNamara as president, the Association named Nat Buchman new vice-president, and re-elected W. W. Hawkins as treasurer and Thomas J. Sullivan as executive secretary.

Resin-Backed Carpet Seamed & Repaired With Tape or Cement

Supplied in 9-foot widths, a new carpet by James Lees and Sons is woven with a resinous backing and seamed and repaired by means of tape or cement. Worn, burnt, or otherwise damaged sections can readily be cut out and matching patches seamed in, and seams thus made are practically invisible, it is said. Special designs or lettering can similarly be tape-seamed into the carpeting at any location. Five colors—jade green, blue spruce green, taupe sheen, dubonnet and pearl gray are available at present.

Jewels Now Contact Film In DeVry 16-mm. Mechanism

Jewel (sapphire) inserts now contact film in the DeVry 16-mm projector. They form the impelling finger of the film shuttle and the side guides in the film channel. Tests show that the sapphire inserts reveal no appreciable wear after serving four to five times as many hours as the former normal life of the parts on which they are used, DeVry declares.

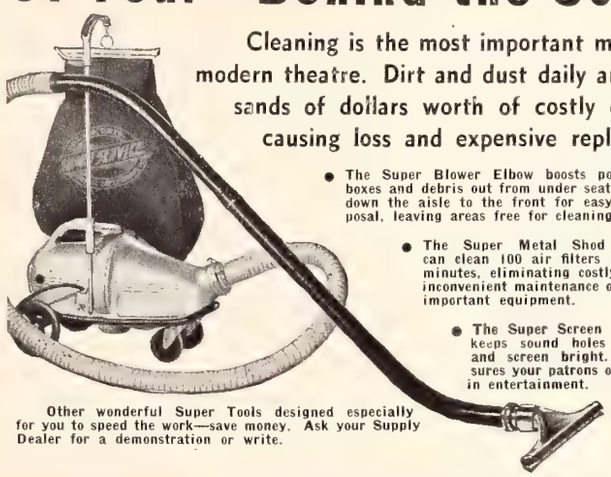
operation beginning 11 A.M. Admissions are 40 cents for adults, 14 cents for children.

The Varsity was designed by Speight and Hibbs, architects, of Clarksville, Tennessee, and was built, furnished and equipped under the direct supervision of Paul Harrington, Ruffin Amusement Company's Service Engineer and member of STR's Projection and Theatre Advisory Councils. The owners, Bill, Sr., Bill, Jr., and Annie Ruffin, publicly "dedicated" the theatre to the people of Martin and Weakley County.



Color Photos by Firelight Is Claim Made for New, Fast Lens

A new 1½-inch telephoto camera lens said to have a speed of f/1.3, and to be capable of taking "perfectly defined color shots" under such minimum illumination as is supplied by firelight or a flashlight, is being marketed by Jen Sales Co. Candid indoor color pictures can be made without special lighting preparation, it is claimed.

Inventor of the new lens, which is known as the Cine Balowstar, is Dr. Frank Back, who also developed the Zoomar lens. A demonstration of the lens was staged recently by Walter Steuer of the Zoomar Corporation at the New York sales room of S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corp. Price is $199.00, tax included.

Operating at 85 amperes, the Motiograph-Hall produces 19,000 lumens—more light than condenser-type high intensity lamps operating at more than twice this amperage.
A rotating positive carbon (an exclusive feature) permits even burning of the carbons and a proper crater form.
Automatic focus control holds the crater of the positive carbon at the exact focal point of the mirror.
The carbons used cost about one-third that of the larger carbons employed in condenser-type lamps operating in the 140-180 ampere range.
Other Motiograph products: 1 K.W. and 46-ampere high intensity arc lamps, projectors, sound systems, motor-generators, in-car speaker equipment and junction boxes, ramp switching panels for drive-ins, turntables, etc.

Two Prize-Winning Stands in 40-Theatre Contest

Theatre Popcorn Publicized in Current Issue of Reader's Digest Magazine

Serving again to remind the public of popcorn in theatres, the article "Popcorn Crazy," originally published in the Saturday Evening Post on May 21, 1949, has now been re-printed in condensed form in the November issue of Reader's Digest.

As an eye-catcher above the title, the article carries this italicized advice: "Find a god popcorn location and build a theatre around it." Supporting statistics are given in plenty throughout the article.

The author asserts that: "up to 80 per cent of the money taken in for popcorn is usually profit." He tells of "the owners of a chain in the East who had casually given the popcorn concession to their wives. The ladies were soon doing a business approaching $500,000 a year." Another anecdote recounts the experience of a Texas theatre that leased a small space near the entrance at $25 a month to the operator of a popcorn machine. "Finally the theatre took over the business—and grossed $530 the first week."

It is also asserted that 86 per cent of all American motion picture theatres now sell popcorn, although "Theatre men were almost universally anti-popcorn before the 1930's." Depression sales when popcorn "was a luxury that most people could still afford" are credited with helping to change the attitude of theatre operators from rejection to eager acceptance.

Tells History of Manley, Inc.

The article credits the late Charles T. Manley, founder of Manley, Inc., both with inventing the "glass-and-chronium electric machine which has now largely replaced the old-fashioned gasoline-burning popcorn wagon" and with bringing popcorn off the street into the theatre. Manley's strategy for effecting this latter development, the author declares, was to sell popcorn machines to stores near theatres. "Theatre men were greatly influenced by the sight of their customers coming in, during the lean years, with popcorn bought outside." And Manley also enlisted the aid of mid-Western agricultural colleges in developing a hybrid incorporating a yellow South American corn, with the result that today's product pops to at least 28 times its original volume.

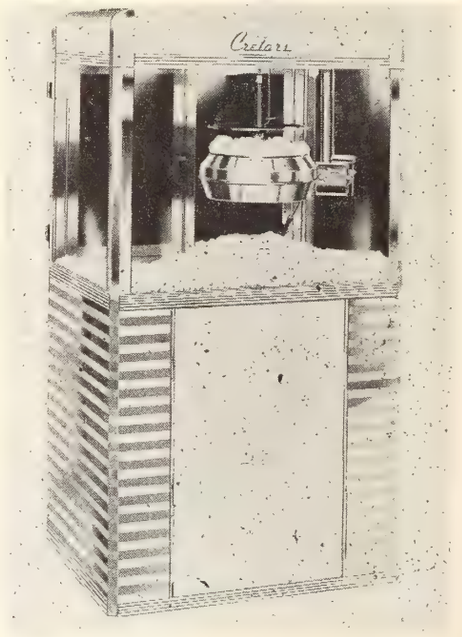
The Manley Company, founded in 1922, now not only makes machines but also grows popcorn on 4,000 acres of its own and contracts for the product of some 25,000 other acres, according to the article. Manley is said to sell 200 million bags and boxes a year. The company's livestock—"a herd bought primarily to eat up the cull popcorn rejected by the grading machines"—occupy Misouri's largest range, it is revealed, and in 1948 supplied the market with more than $1,000,000 worth of beef cattle.

More Sales, Less Attendance

"Cafeteria" sales of ice cream in cups and sandwiches, and in packages to take home after the show, increase theatre's refreshment business without increase in number of sales persons. This refrigerated cabinet, product of Savage Arms Corporation, is located adjacent to candy and popcorn counter. Patrons serve themselves and pay counter attendant.

Price of Barbecue Machine Now Cut Thirty Per Cent

The Patty Bar-B-Q, which not only enables drive-ins to offer patrons hot sandwiches of freshly roasted meats or fowl but is attractively designed to stimulate appetite for such fare, has just been reduced in price to $495 from its previous price of $750, the manufacturer, Sweden Freezer Sales Company, announces.



The machine is devised to capitalize on eye-aroma-and-taste appeal. Made of sparkling stainless steel, it is intended to be used in full view of patrons and within aroma-distance of them, with fowl or meat roasts turning visibly on the spits to secure maximum attention.

Operating features include elements that are adjustable to accommodate roasting products of any shape; three heat levels for fast or slower roasting according to demand; stainless steel hood for removal of vapors; silent, ball-bearing drive sprockets; and heavy-duty 115-volt motor with safety coupling. Maximum current consumption, at fastest-heat level, is 8,000 watts. The entire unit carries the Underwriters' seal of approval.

Operation is said to be very simple. Double prongs hold the product firmly on the spits. The double-banked Calrod heating elements are independently controlled. Stainless steel construction throughout facilitates cleaning and thus assures immaculate appearance at all times.

The thirty per cent reduction in price, during the present period of rising prices, has been made possible, the maker asserts, by large-scale consumer acceptance.

Visible Popping Boosts Sales

Appetite is created and sales stimulated when patrons can see the corn popping, C. Cretors & Company discovered, and they have designed this "Hollywood Model 48" to make the popping process enticingly visible. Just released, this latest Cretors model has a capacity of 18 ounces of raw corn per charge, thermostatic popping and warning controls, and ample storage and operating facilities. It is finished in stainless steel trimmed with eye-luring transparencies of sky blue and cherry red.

W. E. Forms New Subsidiary For Hearing Aid Operations

All activities, including servicing and guarantees, of Western Electric Hearing Aid Division have been assigned to a new subsidiary, Audivox, Inc.; and Western Electric Company has dissociated itself from direct operation in the hearing aid and audiometer fields, Vice President F. R. Lack announces. Key engineering and management personnel of Western Electric Hearing Aid Division have been transferred to the new company. President of Audivox is E. S. Gregg, who also remains Vice President of Westrex Corporation, another W. E. subsidiary. Active operating head of the new organization is Vice President and General Manager William E. Snodgrass.

Service Re-Builds All Makes and Models of Drive-In Speakers

In-car speakers of any make or model can now be rebuilt as needed by Autocrat, Inc., that company announces. The process includes stripping off old paint and refinishing the case with baked auto finish; checking all parts including cords and cones and replacing worn or defective ones; and re-assembling and testing the speaker. The rebuilt speakers are returned to the theatre with a guarantee for one full season.

Reynolds New Theatre Blower Made of Rust-Proof Aluminum

Designed for use in all climates and under all atmospheric conditions, a new model theatre blower just developed by Reynolds Manufacturing Company has completely rust-proof aluminum blades, and is said to create more air movement with less horsepower. The new model is the latest addition to the Reynolds line, which includes blowers from 2,500 to 30,000 cfm capacity. Standard model blowers by the same company are equipped with steel blades.

Chemical Melts Snow, Thaws Frozen Pipes

A snow-melting chemical claimed to be 12 times as efficient as salt is on the market, a product of Chem Industrial Company. It is furnished in the form of minute pellets, which are to be sprinkled liberally on the area to be kept clear. The same product, it is asserted, will also thaw frozen pipes, sewers and gutters.

Littlehale Now With Mosler

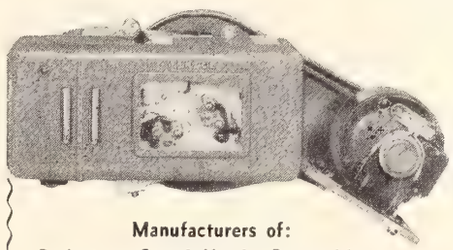
Dominion Sound Equipment, Ltd., have now occupied their newly-built Toronto district office and warehouse building at 386-88 Victoria Street, in the heart of the film exchange and theatre supply dealer center of that city.



Redecorating Without Closing Down Theatre Facilitated By New Odorless Indoor Paint

Because the theatre need not be closed down on account of paint odors, re-decorating involves no loss of revenue when odorless indoor oil paints recently developed by Keystone Paint and Varnish Company are used.

At a press demonstration in New York, the room in which reporters gathered had one wall draped. After they had been in the room for an hour the drape was pulled aside, revealing that a painter had been at work all that while painting the hidden wall. No one among the pressmen had smelled anything.

If it is applied to theatre surfaces out of contact with the audience, such as upper walls and ceilings, re-decorating can be continued right up to the beginning of the show without subjecting the public to any smell of paint. Surfaces with which patrons may come into contact, such as lower walls, must be painted at least eight hours before the public is admitted, since the paint takes that long to dry. In all other respects it is conventional indoor oil paint, applied in the usual way. Seventeen flat and a few gloss colors are currently available.

Keystone's Technical Director, C. G. Oswald, explains the odorlessness of the new paint as follows: ordinary paint odor has two different sources. One is the thinner, usually turpentine, which evaporates as the paint dries. The other is in the linseed oil, or binder. The oil must be boiled to 600° F. before it compounded into paint; in the boiling 2 or 3 per cent of it breaks down chemically into glycerine and acrolein. The latter is the pungent, acrid substance that is smelled when fat burns; in paint, it evaporates from the wall along with the turpentine and adds its own odor to that of the latter. The new Keystone paint however does not use turpentine or benzine, but a highly refined and odorless thinner developed by the petroleum industry: while the acrolein is removed from the linseed oil after that has been boiled and before it is made into paint. The cost of these refining processes adds about 25c per gallon to the price of the finished product.

Makers Disagree About Cleaning of Lenses

Important Differences in Recommendations Indicate That Cleaning Procedures Should Be Adapted to Make of Lens

Leading manufacturers of motion picture projection lenses fail to agree about the best way to clean them, according to printed advice on that subject distributed at the recent Tesma-Teda Convention in Chicago. They differ as to whether it is safe to use solvents such as alcohol for cleaning lenses; and whether it is safe to use a soft cloth in place of lens tissue. These differences in recommended procedure appear to be related to variations in the construction of lenses; and would seem to imply that projectionists need to match their maintenance techniques to the make of product. Optical glass, and anti-reflection coatings also, may differ in chemical formula.

Differ on Use of Solvents

Kollmorgen Optical Corporation advises flatly: "Wet sheet of clean 'Lens Tissue' in any good liquid lens cleaner similar to the 'Guild Craft' lens cleaner, grain alcohol or acetone, and wipe the surface gently but thoroughly."

Bausch & Lomb Optical Company's booklet on the same subject says: "The manufacturer just cannot recommend solvents for the cleaning of his lenses; they are too dangerous and harmful, even in the most skillful hands; he is fully justified in refusing responsibility for any damage resulting from their use by anyone but himself."

Cleaning Cloth vs. Lens Tissue

As to cleaning cloths vs. lens tissue, Kollmorgen states: "Cloths of any character are not recommended for cleaning—use LENS TISSUE."

Bausch & Lomb recommends: " . . . a soft cloth wrapped about the finger. The cloth must be soft, recently laundered and so scrupulously clean. . . . An alternative choice is lens tissue. . . ."

The Kollmorgen instruction sheet in question is entitled: "Care of Kollmorgen Projection Lenses Coated or Uncoated." The B. & L. pamphlet is titled: "The Care and Nurture of Coated Lenses."

Kollmorgen's Instructions

Following are Kollmorgen's complete instructions:

"1. Remove lens from projector at least once a day for cleaning. 2. Remove all particles of dust or lint with a clean camel's hair brush, which should be used only for this purpose. 3. Wet sheet of clean 'Lens Tissue' in any good liquid lens cleaner similar to the 'Guild Craft' lens cleaner, grain alcohol or acetone, and wipe the surfaces gently but thoroughly. 4. Cloths of any character are not recommended for cleaning—use LENS TISSUE. 5. Dry the surface with a clean dry piece of 'Lens Tissue'. 6. Never attempt to open Super or Series II Snaplites since they are factory sealed to eliminate oil seepage."

Bausch & Lomb Recommend

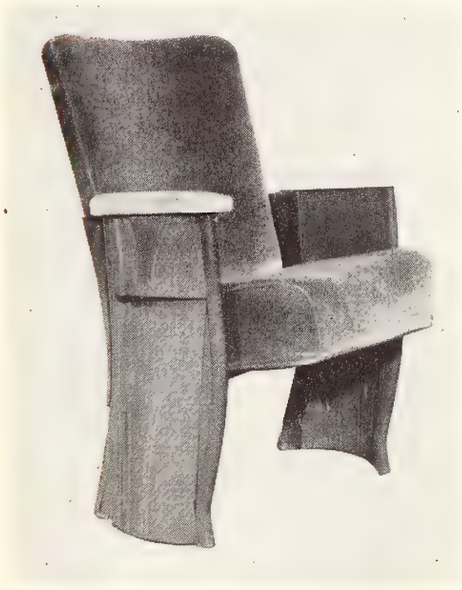
Bausch & Lomb, on Page 9 of their pamphlet, recommend:

"1) A gentle blast of air; 2) a camel's hair brush; 3) a soft cloth properly used; 4) the film of moisture from the breath together with a soft cloth; 5) warm pure or distilled water; 6) most of the common detergents (the commercial 'soapless soaps') such as women use for sheer lingerie; 7) warm water suds of the mildest soaps which are suitable for babies: all these agents to be followed by rinsing in clean pure warm water, and finally 8) the very, very sparing use of solvents such as alcohol."

This last recommendation is followed directly by B. & L.'s warning that they cannot be responsible for damage to the lens resulting from use of any solvents in the projection room. And on Page 14 of the same pamphlet (as will be noted below) B. & L. repeats the same warning against solvents.

B. & L. also go into details as to the "proper" use of soft cloth, stating on Page 11 that "The trick is to wipe the surface gently and at the same time to rotate the finger and the cloth so as to pick up the dust and remove it from the contact point." And on Page 13 that "By 'rinse' is understood the application of clean water on a nearly dry cloth or cotton wrapped stick or toothpick."

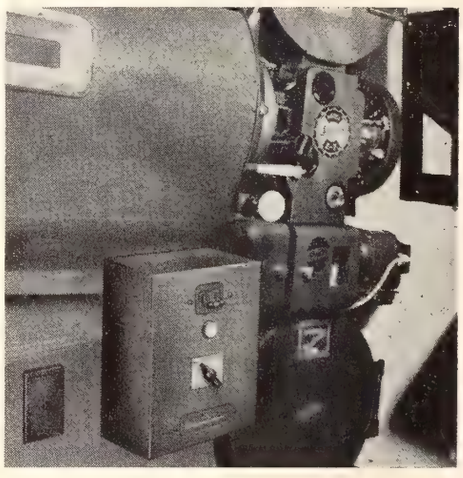
It seems obvious that projection room procedures in this matter cannot be general, but must be adapted to the recommendation of the particular manufacturer whose lens is being cleaned.



Warning on Guarantee

As to solvents, B. & L. further states—on Page 13 of their pamphlet—that they should be used only in "once-in-a-lifetime events" such as "when a lens has fallen into a barrel of oil, been painted during redecoration, or been splashed with tar or some equally stubborn and improbable substance. . . ." Alcohol, carbon tetrachloride, lighter fluid and "the finest laboratory petroleum distillates" are among the solvents mentioned; but the company's warning against using any solvents at all is repeated on Page 14 with the words: "these heroic measures cannot have the sanction of the manufacturer, and he will assume no responsibility when the evidence of their use appears on a given lens."

"Smitty" All Well Again



Alan G. Smith, Manager of National Theatre Supply's New York branch, made a rapid recovery from an operation he underwent at Wickersham Hospital, New York, toward the end of October. "Smitty" was back at his office the second week in November.

New Theatre Chair

This new theatre chair, described as "designed especially for the average neighborhood theatre and attractively priced," has just been announced by J. E. Robin, Inc. Seat upholstery is two inches thick, over springs. Features include back adjustable to all angles for comfortable relaxation in any position; and seat cushion which is "locked" in position but can be replaced without difficulty by inexpert help.

Economizing Front Wall Space

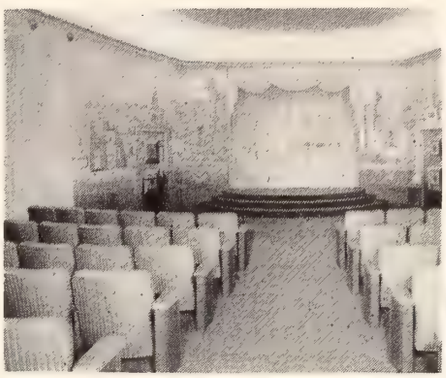
Volume control amplifier is mounted at the side of the projector, instead of in its usual position on the projection room front wall, in this Simplex picture and sound installation at the Ben Bolt Theatre, Chillicothe, Mo. Unusual location of the amplifier releases front wall space for an elaborate house lighting control panel, which must be on the front wall so the projectionist can watch the auditorium through his viewing part while he operates the lighting effects.

Multiple-Screen Drive-Ins

Two-screen and four-screen drive-ins, planned to accommodate 2,000 and 1,000 cars respectively, are being planned for the Los Angeles and St. Louis regions. The two-screen, 2,000 car drive-in is projected by S. D. Perkins for erection in the Westchester district of the California metropolis. Screens are to be at opposite ends of the 20-acre plot, with a double projection room at the center. The overall arrangement is to be that of two drive-ins, back to back, with playgrounds, snack bar and projection building between them. The St. Louis project, planned by St. Louis Amusement Co., will have the "auditorium" area laid out as a square, with one drive-in facing each corner, where the four screens will be located. Two hundred and fifty cars are to face each screen. Projection room is to be at the center, with one projector throwing a picture to two screens in manner not yet revealed. Concession stand and rest rooms will adjoin the projection building; playground is to be outside the "auditorium" area.

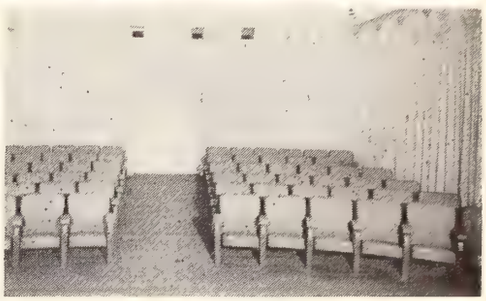
Sees Increased Theatre Need For Evaporative Condensers

Because last summer's nation-wide hot spell and drought led many communities to place increased restrictions on the use of water for air conditioning, the theatre industry will face a sharply increased need for evaporative condensers next summer, according to President James F. Dailey of Typhoon Air Conditioning Co. Even where water rates are comparatively low the evaporative condenser pays for itself long before it shows any signs of wear, President Dailey explains, but the new restrictions will greatly increase the legal or economical need for that item of air conditioning equipment. His own company has extended its line of evaporative condensers through the 15 and 20-ton capacities in anticipation of next summer's demand.



Karagheusian Uses Projection To Help Buyers Select Carpet

Portable, enclosed rear projectors, showing full-color slides, are now used by Karagheusian dealers to display carpet patterns and to show just how a carpet will look in place in a given room or other area. Slides are supplied by the company, and also may be produced from photographs made by the dealer. Showing the appearance of the carpet in a full-color slide eliminates the back-breaking work of displaying the carpets themselves; while pictures of the carpet installed amid suitable surroundings help the customer visualize it in use.



Carbons Cellophane Wrapped

Lorraine projection carbons are now supplied in cellophane packages that protect them against moisture. Ed Lachman, President of Carbons, Inc., has been traveling the mid-west briefing his company's distributors on the new packaging, which is said to have the further advantage of reducing storage problems. Additional distributors are to be appointed in the near future, Carbons, Inc., announces.

71 Ultra-Luxurious Seats

The Motion Picture Association's new 71-seat Academia Theatre in Washington, D. C., was designed and decorated to present the ultimate in comfort and luxury. The entire structure measures only 75 by 50 feet, with entrance through the Association building. Style followed throughout the interior is modern-Grecian.

The theatre consists of a small mirrored foyer, a reception room, and auditorium, with lounges and projection room on an upper level. Predominant color throughout is powder blue, with mauve and off-white for contrast. The front one-third of the auditorium is ornamented with a neo-classical mural design which continues across the face of the screen curtains. Draperies covering the side walls as well as the valance above the screen opening, and the ceiling, are powder blue; the carpet mauve; the Heywood-Wakefield chairs are striped mauve and blue with a thin gold stripe. Projection and sound are Simplex, with Altec speakers.

Candy Counter Replaces 'Many Nations' Panel

Considering candy and coke sales far more important than its "stones from many nations" panel, the New York Paramount Theatre has completely covered over and hidden that once widely publicized display behind the false wall and mirror of this newly completed refreshment stand.

The new stand was made necessary by steady increase in refreshment business. It provides additional facilities. There is another stand in the same lobby, not more than 20 feet from this one. The older stand (which will now be remodeled) faces patrons as they pass the ticket taker. This one is at their left as they enter; and attention is called to it by display signs that face the entering customers, by a trailer on the screen, and by tripods in the lounge.

Merchandise sold includes candy, nuts, cigarettes; and Coca-Cola from a Drincolator dispenser.

The "stones of many nations" panel concealed by this new refreshment installation consisted of bits of native rock from dozens of different countries embedded in an ornate wall. It was one of the features most often mentioned and pictured when the theatre was first opened, 23 years ago.

One request brings you any number of items of equipment literature. For booklets described below, check appropriate square in adjoining coupon. For other literature listed in the coupon, check adjacent squares. There is no charge or obligation.

CHAIRS. Two full-color bulletins by American Seating Company enable theatremen to see for themselves the actual appearance of American chairs in full natural color, exactly as they appear in different types of design and different kinds of upholstery. One, a 20-page booklet in semi-stiff covers, is devoted to conventional models; the second, a four-page full-color folder, stresses the new American Bodiform Retractor chair. Pictures are accompanied by identifying descriptive text. Design and constructional features, and advantages claimed for American chairs, are set forth in detail.

DRIVE-IN "PACKAGE." A 16-page, 3-color booklet issued by Ballantyne Company describes in detail the drive-in theatres that organization is prepared to design, build, equip, and deliver as a completed "package" ready to operate. All the purchaser need do is turn the key and start his show, the booklet asserts; and claims that such drive-ins, planned and built on a mass scale, cost the theatre man $10,000 to $25,000 less than any comparable theatre he could build for himself. An extremely complete description is given of the services Ballantyne offers to render and the materials it will supply and install.

IN-CAR HEATER. To help drive-ins operate through the winter season by providing patrons' cars with heat as well as sound is the object of the latest equipment brought out by Theatrecraft Manufacturing Corporation in the form of an in-car heater-speaker combination mounted in a single case; and of a separate in-car heater designed to mount on the same speaker post with a standard in-car speaker. All of this equipment is illustrated and described in a six-page, two-color folder just issued by Theatrecraft. Every theatreman interested in drive-ins and not located in a year-round climate should find this folder of important practical interest to himself.

LENSES AND LENS TABLE. A two-color folder and insert by Projection Optics Company describes and illustrates both lenses themselves and some of the processes of their manufacture. A lens table, showing the size of the screen image at different distances with lenses of different focal length, is included: it covers lenses from 2 to 9 inches e.f., distances from 40 to 200 feet, and picture widths from 6.8 to 48.1 feet.

MARQUEE SAFETY LETTER. Adler Silhouette Letter Company's new plastic "Lok-Lip" letter is featured in a new 4-page, 2-color bulletin issued by that company. The letter, it is stated, cannot blow off or fall off the rails under any conditions of wind or weather because of a new, integral construction that holds it safely, yet permits it to be installed or removed instantly. Aside from describing the new letter, the bulletin pictures seventeen different marquee arrangements for attracting the public.

SOUND TECHNIQUES. A sixteen-page booklet issued by Lafayette Radio contains an illuminating explanation of the elements of sound technology and terminology, written in laymen's language. A glossary explains in simple words the meaning of such terms and abbreviations as decibel, AM, FM, etc.; while a chart shows the relationship between different frequencies of sound and the notes of a piano keyboard. Other pages of the booklet are devoted to a description of Lafayette sound components, which are of types entirely suited to foyer and lounge entertainment, are installed simply by plugging together, and can either be assembled in suitable cabinets or mounted piece by piece in existing furniture, behind doors, etc. The booklet will be of interest to anyone concerned with sound; and it will suggest some fascinating ideas in foyer and lounge entertainment.

UNDERGROUND WIRE FOR DRIVE-INS. Drive-in construction costs are lessened when the speaker posts can be connected with the amplifier by means of wire specifically designed to carry communications through wet earth. Wire manufactured for just such purposes includes Teleseal, a product of the Whitney Blake Company, described and pictured in a one-page, two-color bulletin issued by that company. The copper is coated with lead, the lead in turn with brass, the brass with a moisture-resistant insulation, and the insulation in turn with a neoprene tire-thread type of jacket said to be highly resistant to abrasion, acids, oil and grease. It is supplied in #14 and #16 gauge.

Movie Quiz Sales Formed On Coast

Incorporation of Movie Quiz Sales Company for the distribution of a new theatre audience participation game using film reels was announced in Hollywood last week by Jack Moser, president. Del Lord, veteran producer and director, is listed as vice-president and general manager in charge of production. A. G. Miller is secretary-treasurer and H. E. Moser vice-president in charge of sales. Offices of the company are at 6631 Hollywood Blvd.

Moser said that a national organization for sale of the Movie Quiz reel is being established. The reel was started in 1941 but abandoned because of wartime film restriction. The new product is a complete revision of the original format, with a number of new features added, notably in the prize possibilities. Each patron of a theatre showing Movie Quiz is entitled to participate by marking a card to indicate his answers to questions asked by a narrator. All questions are illustrated with movie scenes.

Old Becomes the New For Theatre in Arcata

The old became the new for the theatre in Arcata, Calif., when E. A. Patchen, youthful showman, purchased the Arden and restored the name of 35 years ago to the house. Patchen junked the modern marquee, dug the old one out of the basement, and came back with the historic name, the Miner Theatre.

The new owner followed up with an anniversary celebration which included a cake of sufficient size for 1,000 people. Inside the cake was $750 worth of diamonds, making it possible for 35 lucky cake-eaters to obtain precious stones—or damage their bridgework.—SF.

elusive of definition and analysis. It is a stable concrete factor that is, and from the first dawning has been, an integral part of the economy of man. It is the most important subject confronting the general conduct of world affairs and, with the world as with the motion picture industry, has been the most misunderstood and neglected. In reality, public relations is a simple formula the principal component of which is our own personal conduct, behavior and attitude toward those who make up our business and social orbit. Its very obviousness in the commonly-trod walks of daily living is what confuses most of us and causes us to let down or quit when we are on the very threshold of achievement.

Basically, public relations means the relating of your business to the general welfare of those whose lives it effects or influences, which means just about everybody so far as motion pictures are concerned. Making it work to best advantage involves comprehensive knowledge as to the need of the community you serve and manifesting a sincere, unselfish desire to direct your business and personal endeavor to spearhead movements promising the greatest progress for the general good. Maximum accomplishment is attainable only to the extent to which you apply three essential requisites: a predominance of pride in yourself, your theatre and its attractions as an instrument of merit; abounding confidence in the unparalleled superiority of your merchandise as a magnet to focus the attention of the multitudes; and faith in yourself, your industry and your associates to judge, plan and execute wisely.

Mandatory

In such an atmosphere the interchange and exchange of ideas is mandatory, and the more you acquaint your conferees—your patrons, preferably, and your social and community leaders, particularly—with the aims, intents, accomplishments and purposes of your industry and your particular role in its affairs, the more amicable understanding and consideration for you and your business will result.

To quote directly from Chadick:

"When we begin to relate our ideas and the intimacies of our business with regard and consideration for those of our fellowmen, we begin to arouse their interest for us, our business and our welfare. Such mutual interest reacts to the benefit of both parties."

In an article of some years past this writer typed an analogy about good public relations acting like pebbles tossed in a placid pool resulting in a series of ever-widening ripples against which no barrier could long remain immune. That statement still goes. Perfect your public relations and you bulwark your business.

But let's get back to the ABC of public relations as laid down by Chadick:

"Public relations is the art of being able to get along with people, particularly our customers, and making impressions on the public mind and consciousness as to what we really stand for—what our business means to them. It means letting them know (1) what kind of an outfit your industry (or your source of supply) is; (2) what kind of an outfit your theatre is; (3) what kind of a fellow you are; (4) what kind of a citizen you are; (5) what kind of a neighbor you are; (6) what kind of a business man you are. If all these accentuate the positive, you have good public relations. If they register negative, then you have no public relations at all."

How to Win Friends for a Theatre

An excellent illustration of how well it pays off for a theatre manager to be on friendly terms with the public schools, Junior Chamber of Commerce and Community civic organizations in general, was relayed to STR by President S. J. Gregory of the Midstate Amusement Corporation of Chicago, which has theatres in Washington State. Al Tribbet is manager of the circuit's Liberty Theatre in Sunnyside, Wash. Among a sheaf of recent letters to him expressing the writers' thanks for courtesies extended them, were two from the Junior Chamber of Commerce for theatre ticket prizes contributed for its swimming carnival and for assistance on the Women's state softball tournament.

Just before opening of the new school year, Manager Tribbet sent a card to each teacher in the public schools just to say "Hello" and wish them a successful year and inviting them to present the card at the box-office and receive two passes for whatever attraction was being screened. Tribbet received letters of thanks from the superintendent of schools, from the principals of the various schools and from individual teachers.

He went on to emphasize the position of the theatre in daily living. He told how the theatre and the industry, while having no physical thing to sell the public and consequently exerting no physical impact on its customers, exerted far greater pressure on human lives because of the tremendous mental impact of the screen.

He knocked the pins all over the alley when he emphasized: "This mental impact can serve you well to bring about a better understanding of tolerance, consideration and a more cooperative spirit in the community in which you operate."

Just about every thinking individual in America is riding that beam today. Get aboard and do yourself no end of good. Analyze your attractions and, when they happen to fit a pattern foremost in the public eye of your vicinity, go after the Mr. and Mrs. Bigs to rally their followers and converge on your box-office.

Chadick commented—and this columnist as well as everybody else in the industry possessing a working noodle agrees—that good public relations is a definite responsibility and function of management. The responsibility mounts in relation to the importance of the position, with the onus on unshiftable and unshirkable burden of ownership and top executives. If the owners and upper-bracket executives fail in this important duty, they are traitors to the cause in which they prospered, unfair and unjust to their subordinates and undeserving of the rewards they have and do enjoy.

Most Severe Test

Let me clear Chadick quick. That last is a personal observation. The degree and sincerity of interest and actions on the part of the higher-ups will determine the degree and extent of permeation of responsibility to managers, cashiers, ushers and other theatre personnel in perfecting and executing good public relations programs. At the "customer contact" level is where any public relations program faces its greatest and most severe test. Unless the management-service personnel stratum is properly imbued with the urgency of the endeavor, there is little hope for its overall success. And the fellows to make the imperativeness of the program understood and obeyed at that level are all owners or have their names in gold letters on the doors of plush offices. As they go, so goes the rank and file. So let's hope they "go big."

Regarding public relations vs. advertising and publicity, Chadick had this to say:

"Your public relations are determined by your acts and not your publicity. It is important to differentiate between the two. Public relations are the human, altruistic, public service, friend-making side of your business. Advertising and publicity are the business-getting, money-making side of your business. Good public relations builds goodwill and good business over the long haul. Good advertising and publicity get the money now."

In other words, choose your goal fellows: remaining in business over the years at a fair profit, or going it "hit and run." Combine the two and you get profit and goodwill, but omit the altruistic endeavor and the profits soon fall by the wayside.

10 Simple Rules

Chadick offers these simple rules as a foundation for good public relations at the local level:

"(1) Courtesy, simple politeness, waiting promptly on the public. (2) Every possible public service or accommodation you can offer. (3) Good housekeeping, cleanliness, maintenance and repairs. (4) Conduct of your show—good programming, convenient schedules, timely bookings to coincide with local events. (5) Community services—membership in civic clubs, participation in civic events, assisting local groups in their programs and activities, being an important part of community life, institutionalizing your theatre. (6) Being business-like—seeing all visitors, being available for complaints and suggestions. (7) Assume responsibility—make the community look up to you as a good citizen, watch your personal conduct and that of your theatre family. (8) Advertise and sell with sincerity—make it clean and honest. (9) Advertise your public relations—take all legitimate opportunities, like anniversaries, etc., to call attention to your theatre as a community institution. (10) Have a good intelligent employe relations program—delegate responsibilities, develop manpower, be firm but patient, critical but tolerant in dealing with subordinates."

That's pretty solid stuff and the kind of ABC's that 'most everybody needs before they can masticate the higher stratagems of the public relations. There it is in the plainest of parlance. Follow Chadick's primary instruction chart and you'll be conforming—yes, maybe surpassing—every determination of the Chicago meeting and the TOA Los Angeles recommendations.

Before closing shop, let me remind you that you and your theatre can only share in welfare and prosperity to the identical extent that welfare and prosperity exist in your community. Lift the community and you lift your theatre.

'My Pictures Speak For Me'—Robert Arthur

Robert Arthur

"The most important thing that I can say to the exhibitor is: 'get people in to see pictures,'" declares Robert Arthur, Universal-International producer. "And our big job here," he continues, "is to get back to the type of films that people have liked and gone to see in the past. But the whole industry needs that grass-roots showmanship you exhibitors can use so effectively in selling the picture. Keep it up, will you?

"I am one of the men who make the mass of the yearly quota of product. It seems to me that the producer in my category has three basic approaches to the problem of turning out a number of good, salable features. He can strive for complete audience identification in a familiar situation. In direct opposition to this, he can make the exotic picture, as we did in the Technicolor film 'Bagdad,' which delivers high adventure with gorgeous Maureen O'Hara and a luxurious production. Or he can take the big gamble and make the different picture, and that's what we did in 'Francis,' where the main character is a talking mule. But it is not fantasy."

"Let me give you some early reactions," he went on enthusiastically. "Screened at the Pentagon Building in Washington and at Birmingham Veterans Hospital, officers and enlisted men roared. Francis is an army mule and those soldiers found a hilarious identification, and I don't mean our army is composed of mules. Francis' character is so real that he ceases to be a mule. Sneak previewed, it literally rolled an adult audience in the aisles, and for the kids, of course, it's a natural. 'Francis' and 'Bagdad' are two entirely different types of pictures for you exhibitors to sell. My convictions are in my pictures."

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

The Romantic Age

(Reviewed in London)

Eagle Lion Comedy-Drama 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Gay, light-hearted story of a middle-aged schoolmaster's infatuation for a scheming pupil, played for laughs and aimed at popular audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Slightly spicy and generally high-spirited, this should fill the bill nicely where a comedy-drama is required.

Cast: Mai Zetterling, Hugh Williams, Margot Grahame, Petula Clark, Carol Marsh, Raymond Lovell, Paul Dupuis, Margaret Barton, Marie Ney, Dorothy Latta, Judith Furse, May Hallatt, Jean Anderson, Viola Johnstone, Colette Melville, June Charlier and others. Credits: Adapted from Serge Weber's novel "Lycee de Jeunes Filles" by Edward Dryhurst and Peggy Barwell. Produced by Eric L'Epine Smith. Directed by Edmond Greville. A Pinnacle Production presented by J. Arthur Rank.

Plot: Hugh Williams, approaching middle age, is the first master to be employed at an exclusive girls' finishing school. He attempts to tame Mai Zetterling, a spoiled sophisticated French girl. Piqued by his attitude, she bets the other girls that she will make him fall in love with her. She works many schemes for them to be alone, and Margot Grahame, Williams' wife, watches events with growing misgivings. Eventually she reminds Mai that he is old enough to be her father and that she is only a silly little girl. Infuriated, Mai gets him to agree to leave his family and go to Paris with her. Petula Clark, his daughter, intervenes but finds that Mai was only leading him on and was actually planning to elope with a boy-friend to Rome. With this knowledge, which she keeps to herself, she is able to re-unite her parents.

Comment: On paper, this story of a sophisticated teenager's plan to get even with a rather dreary schoolmaster who belittles her, by making him fall in love with her, may appear too serious a theme to be treated lightly. Director Edmond Greville, however, has handled it skillfully so that no offense is given. While it is often saucy and occasionally a little spicy, it is never unsavory. He has made the most of the situations, and the young minx receives her just deserts. As the spoiled French girl, Mai Zetterling is most effective and brings conviction to a difficult role. Hugh Williams appears as the susceptible schoolmaster who has reached the romantic age, and Margot Grahame is excellent as his understanding wife. Making a successful British screen debut as an American teenager is Dorothy Latta who has appeared in several Hollywood pictures. With Mai Zetterling for the marquee, this piquant comedy should do well at the British box-office, especially when teamed with a drama. It is gay, amusing and easy on the eye.

The Pirates of Capri

Film Classics Drama 94 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An always interesting, and often exciting, drama of revolutionary intrigue at the Court of Naples in 1799, with some splendid acting and dramatic fights and swordplay.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A booking with which all types of theatres should do above average business. For promotion campaigns there are a number of good marquee names and the revolutionary action to intrigue the interest of the public. Patrons will help advertise it.

Cast: Louis Hayward, Binnie Barnes, Alan Curtis, Rudolph Serato, Mariella Lotti, Mikhail Rasumny, Virginia Belmont, Franca Marzi, William Tubbs, Alberto Califano, Mario Auritano, Eric Culton, Michel Sorel. Credits: Presented by Rudolph Monter and Victor Pahlen. Produced by Victor Pahlen. Directed by Edgar Ulmer. Original story by G. A. Colonna and George Moser, based on an idea by Victor Pahlen. Photography by Anchise Brizzi. An A.F.A. and I.C.S. Production.

Plot: A foppish Count at the court of Naples in 1799 is in reality Captain Sirocco (Louis Hayward) who plots a popular uprising against the Queen (Binnie Barnes), who fears she may suffer the fate of her sister, Marie Antoinette of France, and Chief of Police (Rudolph Serato) who keeps her in Naples, which is surrounded by French armies, to further his own political ambitions. Sirocco outwits and slays the Police Chief and helps the Queen to escape after he induces her to abdicate and appoint a revolutionary as prime minister. His love for his intended bride (Mariella Lotti) who falls in love with him as Captain Sirocco, forms an integral part of the plot.

Comment: An always interesting, and often exciting, drama of intrigue at the court of Naples between the Police Chief and a foppish Count who is in reality, Captain Sirocco, head of a revolution against the Queen, whom he is desirous of rescuing. The story is credible, swift in action, with scenes and sets often beautiful in themselves; is fluently produced and directed, and has two exciting exhibitions of swordsmanship, the capture of a ship by the Pirates of Capri (in reality members of the revolutionary party) and the attack by the mob on the Queen's palace. Production, direction and photography are in the main excellent and give to the film the illusion of reality. Louis Hayward is contrastingly light-minded as the Count and serious and purposeful as the head of the revolutionaries and acts with intelligence and aplomb. Binnie Barnes makes the Queen a likable person, even in her terror of sharing her sister's fate. Alan Curtis, captain of the ship captured by the revolutionists for its cargo of arms, turns in a very good performance though less colorful than the others. Rudolph Serato, in acting and makeup, conforms to the stage idea of villainy, and the newcomer, Mariella Lotti, as the love interest, is capable and charming.

Master Minds

Monogram Comedy 64 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Farcical slapstick that should get laughs in most theatres.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Typical low-budget comedy that can be spotted satisfactorily on any program where such fare is indicated. Should get usual Bowery Boy reaction.

Cast: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Billy Benedict, Bennie Bartlett, David Gorcey, Gabriel Dell, Alan Napier, Glenn Strange. Credits: Produced by Jan Grippo. Directed by Jean Yarbrough. Photography by Marcel LePicard. Screenplay by Charles R. Marion.

Plot: One of the Bowery Boys goes into a prophetic trance when his tooth aches. Publicity on his strange powers attracts a mad scientist who kidnaps him for use in experiments in mind transference. He is rescued by his pals.

Comment: "Master Minds" follows the usual line of the Bowery boy comedies, but loose scripting and direction that seems a little on the sloppy side rates it under the best of the series. However, there are laughs and the film should prove satisfactory supporting fare. The basic situation is well conceived. Huntz Hall is kidnapped by a mad scientist and his mind transferred to a huge apeman played by Glenn Strange, while Strange's mind is transferred to Hall. The funniest sequence in the film shows the giant Strange speaking in the falsetto voice and walking and gesturing in the almost feminine manner of Hall, while relatively puny Hall roars and breaks the iron bars of his cage. The picture should do the usual Bowery Boy business.

On the Town

(Color by Technicolor)

MGM Musical 97 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Colorful, entertaining modern musical loaded with song-and-dance numbers, and with six top performers in the specialty entertainment field heading the cast. Excellent offering for general audiences everywhere.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A star-studded cast, Technicolor photography and catchy tunes make this a powerful contender for top box-office grosses.

Cast: Gene Kelly, Frank Sinatra, Betty Garrett, Ann Miller, Jules Munshin, Vera-Ellen, Florence Bates, Alice Pearce, George Meader. Credits: Directed by Gene Kelly and Stanley Donen. Screenplay by Adolph Green and Betty Comden. Based upon the musical play, "On the Town." Photography, Harold Rossen. Technicolor Color Consultants, Henri Jaffa and James Gooch. Music by Roger Edens. Lyrics by Adolph Green and Betty Comden. Musical Director, Lennie Hayton. Produced by Arthur Freed.

Plot: Three sailors, on twenty-four hour leave, meet three girls and set out to see New York.

Comment: "On the Town" is a succession of modern dancing and singing numbers blended into a flimsy yarn, which makes it more of a revue than the customary story-type of musical familiar to the movie-going public. The picture has a strong name cast, all of them specialty entertainers, and their work is entertaining, colorful, tuneful and exciting. There are at least a dozen songs, several of which should meet with public favor, and the dancing—as one can well imagine with Gene Kelly and Vera-Ellen in the cast—is worthy of everyone's attention. Any story weaknesses are likely to prove inconsequential to average patrons, for the film is loaded with musical entertainment; but that old bugaboo (where can the orchestra be?) may plague critical spectators as the six stars break into song-and-dance routines atop the Empire State building, in the Museum of Natural History and various other strange and sundry places. Let them wonder they'll be far outnumbered by moviegoers who enjoy being entertained without stopping to analyze technicalities. Kelly, Sinatra, Betty Garrett, Ann Miller, Jules Munshin and Vera-Ellen are all good, and each one registers effectively. Kelly also shared the directorial stint with Stanley Donen, and Arthur Freed produced this Technicolor production, which is based on the Broadway hit of the same name.

The Peddler and the Lady

(Italian Dialog—English Titles)

Continental Motion Pictures 90 mins.

Comedy

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Fabrizi's clowning and an unusual baby help a long, loose old film to rate fair for the general foreign film audience. Not much Magnani.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Magnani and Fabrizi, of course.

Cast: Anna Magnani, Aldo Fabrizi, Caterina Boratto, Peppino De Filippo, Olga Solbelli, Renzo Morisi, Cristiano Cristiani. Credits: Production Cines by Giuseppe Amato. Director of Production, Teofilo Mariani. Director, Mario Bonnard. Subject by Giuseppe Amato.

Plot: A fat fishmonger, prosperous and hankering after beauty and culture, throws himself into the company of a lovely customer. Though never encouraged romantically, he has hopes as long as he is able to help her. That he does by getting her out of jail, where her gambling friends land her, and—until her lover's unexpected return—taking care of her baby.

Comment: Anna Magnani and Aldo Fabrizi, of course, give this one its come-on. Those names are as powerful, perhaps, as any in the foreign-language film, and justly so. Here, however, audiences will find Magnani's part quite small (the picture is several years old). Fabrizi is much in evidence and fortunately, for it is his clowning that holds together a long and loose film. Cristiano Cristiani, an unusual and amusing baby, also helps. "The Peddler and the Lady," on the basis of star value, rates fair for the general foreign film audience.

Shamed

Westport Int'l Drama 85 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A simple, human interest drama that will engage the interest and arouse the sympathy of audiences in the plight of the two Italian lovers.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should serve art and foreign-film houses to good advantage. Not of great value in other situations, for cast names mean next to nothing to American audiences.

Cast: Maria Michi, Vittorio Gassman, Marina Berti, Massimo Girotti, Laura Gazzolo, Claudio Gora, Vira Silenti. Credits: Produced by Albatros Films. Released by Arthur H. Canton and Sanford Weiner in association with Westport International Films. Directed by Valentino Bucchi.

Plot: Vittorio Gassman returns from four years in Africa with the Italian army to find his fiancee, Marina Berti, has been keeping company with Massimo Girotti, and he goes back from his native fishing village to Genoa where Kauro Gazzolo has promised him a job, which turns out to be that of selling stolen jewelry. Girotti is denounced as a thief by Mari Michi, out of jealousy because he deserted her for Marina. Gassman escapes the police and is reunited with Marina as the villagers are about to kill her for "not waiting for her man" to come back from the war like the rest of the women.

Comment: A simple, human interest drama that will engage the interest and arouse the sympathy of audiences through the good acting of the four stars of the cast, the troubled love story of the soldier home from the wars and the girl who, while not transgressing the village moral code, had not waited for his return but had been receiving the attentions of the owner of a cutter. While the action is mainly of a subdued nature there is a melodramatic fist fight between the girls two lovers, and the climactic scene in which the villagers, mostly women, pursue the girl, bent upon taking her life. Both scenes are well directed and very effectively acted, accelerating audience interest to a high pitch. While the dialog is in Italian, the English titling makes it quite understandable. The photography, which is reported to have captured the prize at the Locarno festival, is not up to the Hollywood standard of clarity and sharpness. "Shamed" should serve art and foreign-film theatres to good advantage.

ADVANCE DATA
On Forthcoming Product

Fortunes of Captain Blood (Columbia) Principals: Louis Hayward, Patricia Medina, Dona Drake. Director, Gordon Douglas. When several of Blood's men are captured at the Spanish port of La Hacha, the captain goes ashore in disguise and releases them, with the aid of two beautiful women, and at the cost of a long and gory battle ashore and at sea.

Blue Grass of Kentucky (Monogram) Principals: Bill Williams, Jane Nigh, Ralph Morgan. Director, William Beaudine. Two neighboring families are rivals in horse racing. When a horse belonging to the poorer family wins the Kentucky derby, the race is protested. However the difficulty is resolved, and the families are joined when the son of one marries a daughter of the other.

Young Daniel Boone (Monogram) Principals: David Bruce, Kristine Miller, John Mylong. Director, Reginald Le Borg. In 1755, the days of colonial and Indian warfare, two daughters of an army supplier are captured by Indians. Daniel Boone rescues the girls.

Bomba on Panther Island (Monogram) Principals: Johnny Sheffield, Allene Roberts, Lita Baron. Director, Ford Beebe. A young man and his sister in Africa on an agricultural experiment are losing native workers to a black panther. Bomba, the jungle boy, kills the panther.

D.O.A. (UA) Principals: Edmond O'Brien, Pamela Britton, Luther Adler. Director, Rudolph Mate. A poisoner's victim, facing death from a deadly, slow-acting drug, solves a complicated chain of circumstances and tracks down his murderer and shoots him, before he himself dies.

Champagne For Caesar (UA) Principals: Ronald Colman, Celeste Holm, Vincent Price, Barbara Britton, Art Linkletter. Director, Richard F. Whorf. An erudite professor, believing that a giveaway radio program is destroying American culture, sets out to break the sponsor. When the stakes on the next question are $40,000,000, he misses.

No Way Out (20th-Fox) Principals: Richard Widmark, Linda Darnell, Stephen McNally. Director, Joseph Mankiewicz. When two brothers are wounded during a holdup, one of them dies under treatment by a Negro doctor. In order to clear himself of blame, the doctor gives himself up for the murder of the bandit, thus forcing an autopsy which proves the bandit died from brain pressure caused by a tumor. The doctor is cleared.

The Glass Menagerie (Warner Bros.) Principals: Gertrude Lawrence, Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas, Arthur Kennedy. Director, Irving Rapper. Subjective study of the frustration, of a mother who wants only success for her two children, of the introverted daughter who finds her way to a new confidence, and of the son who seeks escape by going to sea.

Current Observations

The all-industry public relations program advanced to the point of basic organization and a financing plan through the deliberations of the Conference Committee in Washington this week.

The method of financing, based on a percentage of film rentals paid and received by exhibitors and distributors, unquestionably ranks as the most practical and equitable formula available. And meets with complete approval in this corner—as might be expected since the film rental basis was suggested, and urged for consideration by the Committee, in our editorial in the Dec. 3 issue. (So far as we know it was the first enunciation of the idea to raise the money by a flat percentage of film rentals.)

The report of the Conference Committee's findings and the organizational plan drawn is given in only the barest outline by the statement issued at the conclusion of the Washington meetings. The important thing is that there is implementation of the great, and most enthusiastically supported principle by representatives of all branches of the industry that a united effort for intelligent and coordinated public relations should and will be undertaken.

How well the program moves along from this point will depend on the efficiency with which the planned organization is carried out in execution and set-up.

One of the best ways to prepare for the united effort is for each industry organizational unit, and every individual in the business, to become a self-appointed public relations worker in behalf of improved attitudes toward, and better understanding of, the motion picture industry—the services it performs for the public, the problems it faces in reaching its ideals in creating entertainment for the masses, its contributions to the welfare of the communities and the nation. And—most important of all—a constructive attitude toward what the Public Relations Program means to the whole industry, with constructive contribution freely given and mere negative criticism rigidly restrained.

If this Public Relations job measures up, only the industry as a whole will benefit. There can be no place for selfishness in glorifying any one person or group.

More PR Stuff

Speaking of Public Relations, did you read Jack Jackson's very intelligent and illuminating article last week? If not, then we suggest you do so right now.

An important part of Jackson's article were the quotes from A. E. Chadick, head of the Motion Picture Advertising Service of New Orleans. We won't repeat them here because if you are really interested you can pick up last week's issue and read the entire article.

Never forget: no Public Relations program can be effective without the local exhibitor and/or manager being an important and integral part of it. They are the men who can reach the local newspapermen and radio stations and their contacts are literally worth their weight in gold when it comes to disseminating the right kind of publicity for public consumption.

Incidentally, Jack Jackson's articles have been attracting a wider audience week after week and again we are getting a large number of requests for reprints. We are not making reprints of this vitally important series available because as soon as we get our desk cleaned from putting Showmanship In Advertising to press we expect to begin preparing a compendium of the Jackson articles for publication in book form.

'Sands of Iwo Jima'

Entirely aside from the picture's valuable contribution to the array of product for theatres in these days of necessity for plenty of strong attractions, the appearance on the industry scene of Republic's "Sands of Iwo Jima" is significant in its implications—as well as its obvious indications that the U. S. industry's production branch is far from being in a static state. For when you see "Sands of Iwo Jima" for yourself you will realize that the courage to make a war drama with bold realism and production stature of ambitious scope and scale rests not alone with the old-line studios of Hollywood.

"Sands of Iwo Jima" is forthright war drama and proves more moving and dramatically effective for its courage in coming to grips with the realities of war for the patriotic individuals who have to fight the battles.

Republic here offers exhibitors a picture that rates high in draw values—Star John Wayne is currently as hot as a pistol at the box-office—and one for which the company well deserves not only plaudits, but encouragement. For this is the kind of product our industry cannot afford to dissipate by lack of enthusiasm both in the matter of giving it wide circulation and in selling it well and vigorously right in the area from which the theatres draw their patronage.

WHAT'S NEWS

GENERAL

It was one of those strange Chicago days in early September. But stranger even was the mood of the motion picture industry. It was jubilant. Delegates from all branches of the industry — from plush-salaried top executives in distribution to acid-tongued exhibitor leaders — had met in harmony and had agreed to see if they could not establish an all-industry public relations organization and program. Then they went home to the resounding words of a resolution which was an affirmation of what they believed. This week those delegates from this same meeting, who had been appointed to a conference committee, met in Washington, D. C. Monday and Tuesday and formulated a plan for financing and administration. The administration calls for, among other things, a paid executive vice-president, and the financing for all exhibitors who join to pay one tenth of one per cent of their film rentals, while the distributors would match the total amount. The delegates, who have to take the plan home to their organizations for approval, decided also on a name —Council of Motion Picture Organizations. (P. 5)

Washington reported that motion picture corporations' dividends for October were $2,398,000, below the $7,419,000 reported in September but only slightly under the $2,653,000 paid out in October, 1948. And Washington also reported that devaluation of the pound tended to drive India, a vast film-maker, into the arms of the British for supplies and the Russians for raw stock at the expense of the United States.

London reported that Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, speaking in the House of Commons, had rejected a suggestion that British movies be exempted from the entertainment tax, but that he had implied that he would favor a subsidy for production after the British industry "put its house in order" and cut out waste. Wilson took a poke at producers, among whom is J. Arthur Rank, when he spoke of "fantastic extravagance" which he blamed for the wobbly condition of the film-making business on the tight little island.

EXHIBITION

Boston moving picture business was up, both at the box-office and the concession stand, a report at variance with most of the country, especially Columbus, Ohio, where seven neighborhood houses are closing to save expenses during the pre-Christmas week slump. In Dallas, Interstate has reduced night prices for vaudeville from 98 cents to 80 cents with a 60-cent teenage admission and 25 cents for kids.

In Boston, the American Theatres' Pilgrim will use large-screen television for the United Nations broadcast of the Boston Symphony orchestra from Carnegie Hall, New York. In Washington five more exhibitor groups appealed to the Federal Communications Commission to hold hearings on channel allocations for theatre television, bringing the total number of petitions up to 17, but in Los Angeles, television got something of a set-back when Fox West Coast dropped its plans for a wired network of theatres because of the expense.

In San Francisco Fox West Coast is having janitor trouble with the union. In St. Louis the building commissioner is protesting another stay of the new building code as applied to theatres which do not meet it.

Down in Little Rock, the Joy circuit took over the Rex from the Mundos and in Mena, Ark., Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Gwaltney took over the Lyric and the Lil. In Toronto, George W. Peters resigned as Odeon Theatres vice-president and as vice-president of the Motion Picture Association of Toronto to take a non-industry job. The MPTA of Ontario meanwhile was fighting gambling and seeking to have the Lotteries Act applied to wnat they term competition.

And in Baltimore, the Maryland censor was indicating that he would seek to extend his power so that he could compel exhibitors to classify films ("adult," "family," etc.) and could also prohibit "documentaries" which he thought were untrue.

DISTRIBUTION

Eagle Lion will sell its programmers on flat terms but will go after percentage on its top product, Vice-President William Heineman declared this week at the close of a sales meeting. The company which has taken over Jack Wrather's "Guilty of Treason," based on the Cardinal Mindszenty trial, will get it off with a saturation New England premiere in February.

Adolph Schimel has been elected vice-president and general counsel for Universal, replacing Charles D. Prutzman, resigned, and Leon Goldberg, formerly of RKO, has come in as vice-president, treasurer and a director, to succeed Samuel Machnovitch, another resignation.

The King Bros., have signed with United States to distribute four of its next pictures, and Astor has added seven reissues to its roster. Paramount, which will release its shorts at the rate of one a week during the first three months of 1950, made its peace with E. V. Richards in the Gulf states area, which mans the product goes back into its own houses on the Paramount-Richards circuit, and that it may book United Theatres and the buying outfit, Theatre Service, both of which are controlled by Richards. Reports that RKO was talking peace with Richards went unconfirmed, but Universal denied any talk at the present moment.

LITIGATION

The Justice Department investigation of Columbia over exhibitor claims that increased admissions were being asked for "Jolson Sings Again" in violation of the court decree, is still alive, Washington advised. If any evidence is found, the Department will first try to talk Columbia out of it; otherwise, contempt action is probable. Columbia denies any violations.

Warner Bros., meanwhile, has consent decree proposals before the Justice Department, authoritative sources said. And in Charlotte, N. C., the Meiselman interests, which lost their anti-trust suit against the majors and the Wilby-Kincey circuit, entered an appeal in the fourth U. S. Circuit of Appeals.

Alive—and Kicking

The Justice Department's investigation of exhibitor charges that Columbia is demanding raised admissions on "Jolson Sings Again"—a charge which Columbia has repeatedly denied, is definitely alive and being investigated, an informed Washington source said this week.

The source pointed out that the one course open to the Department in event it discovered evidence confirming the exhibitor charges, would be to seek contempt of court proceedings against the company before the New York federal statutory court which has prohibited such practices. However, it was indicated that the Department usually tries to "talk" an offender out of a doubtful practice before seeking a contempt sentence.

Seeks Anti-'Bank Night' Test Case
Iowa Attorney-General To Move in Gaming Crusade

Iowa's Attorney-General Robert L. Larson, currently conducting a state-wide anti-gambling drive, disclosed this week that he planned a test case by which he would seek to have "bank night" declared illegal.

The Attorney-General's action comes despite the fact that Iowa courts have held the game to be legal within the confines of a decision handed down by the state supreme court 10 years ago—provided a ticket is not required for any one to participate and a reasonable time is allowed non-ticket buying winners to enter the theatre and gain the prize.

Larson contends that theatres are following this ruling in some instances by allowing non ticket-buyers to register but "not graciously" and that in other instances non-buyers were given a red pencil to sign the register and buyers a black pencil, presumably to differentiate.

The Attorney General had previously ordered county attorneys to investigate theatres for possible violations.

Warner Bros. Decree Efforts 'Moving Along'

Warner Bros., efforts to procure a consent decree in the Government anti-trust suit is "moving along," Washington reported this week. No comment was made by informed sources however on any progress by 20th Century-Fox towards ending its part in the present Government anti-trust suit through a consent action.

Pilgrim To Telecast Boston Symphony

The Boston Pilgrim will present the United Nations Concert by the Boston Symphony, which takes place at Carnegie Hall, New York, over large-screen television Saturday.

Lens Change Ups Screen Light By 40 Per Cent

By AARON NADELL

A big step forward in improving screen illumination—one which gives approximately 40 per cent more light without increasing current consumption—is being used in the New York Paramount this week as the successful result of years of experiment by Harry Rubin, projection supervisor for Paramount and a member of STR's Projection Advisory Council.

The improvement is achieved by removing the rear element from the standard lamphouse condenser and substituting a new rear element made to order by Bausch & Lomb from Rubin's specification.

The condenser in a lamphouse consists of two lenses with a space of several inches between them. The first element collects the light from the arc and passes it on to the second lens, which directs its beam to the film thereby causing the illumination which in turn projects the image through a third lens to the screen. Although the new condenser arrangement shows a 40% increase in light, particularly noticeable when the Paramount's shorts, upon which it is now being used, as compared with its feature, which uses the old system, the temperature increase at the aperture shows a rise of only 13 per cent.

Measurements also show that the distribution of the light across the screen is more even with the new arrangement. Although all parts of the screen are more brightly lighted, the gain is less at the center than at the sides, thereby providing a picture that is not only brighter overall, but more uniformly so.

In situations where greater light intensity is not needed, the new condenser arrangement may be used to reduce current drain.

Rental Percentage Is Planned To Finance Public Relations

A plan to finance the proposed all-industry public relations organization by assessing each exhibitor an annual fee equivalent to one tenth of one per cent of his film rental with the total to be matched by distributors was proposed to the conference committee at a two-day meeting for the purpose in Washington, D. C., this week.

The meeting, which closed Tuesday night, adopted the name of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations and also proposed a program as well as a system of organization which would provide for one president, one or more vice-presidents, an executive vice-president to be paid, a secretary and a treasurer.

Back to Organizations

The delegates are to refer the plan to their respective organizations and answers are expected, according to a spokesman for the Motion Picture Association of America, which sponsored the all-industry public relations meeting, "in late February or early March." The unanimous approval of all participating organizations is needed.

The finance plan was evolved after much pre-meeting thinking. Under the contemplated set-up, each exhibitor may join voluntarily but even the exhibitor organizations supporting it at present, will take no part in collecting their fees.

Necessity

This move was thought the result of necessity, in that at least one exhibitor organization felt it did not have the authority to tax its members or act as a collecting agency. The distributors reportedly will act as a unit and will put up their share to mach the exhibitors' total contributions in accordance with a formula they are now said to use in supporting the MPAA and such special activities that organization calls upon them to support.

The total amount which would be collected under such a system, according to unofficial estimates, would be $600,000 annually, based on an anticipated film rental business of $300,000,000 annually, which is said to be actually the business done by the MPAA member companie on features and which does not include the shorts rentals or the revenues of such non-MPAA members as Eagle Lion.

In view of the tendency of the meeting to "stick to the script" of a prepared release answers to several questions which immediately arose were impossible to get officially. One point, whether distributors who do not belong to the MPAA would be allowed to contribute, appeared academic, since the general view of everyone in the move so far has been to get all the industry to do it.

Two Groups

Another was that the system of proposed collections split the organization arbitrarily into exhibitors and distributors and eliminated other branches. While no answer was available here, it was said that at least one participant had considered taxing actors and labor—including employes in the home office—but that this be given up as impractable and it was felt that the arbitrary separation in two groups—exhibitor and distributor—would more easily solve the money-raising question.

However, the question whether the system of asking exhibitors individually and distributors as a group would not tend to keep exhibitors as a divided majority and distributors as a united minority, also arose.

Operation Collection

Exhibitor circles also were seeking to find out just how collections would be made. This point was said not to have been considered by the meeting, which devoted its crowded two days to drafting the broad outlines of the plan.

It was thought, however, that prior to the meeting, it had been intended to ask exchanges to collect from the exhibitor with each film bill, provided the exhibitor had signified his intention to contribute and authorized the collection. This was said to have met with resistance because it might arouse ex-

Demands for Preferred Playing Time Move Up On Exhibitors' Peeve List

Demands for preferred playing time have taken the lead of major exhibitor complaints against distributor practices, a spot check of the nation showed this week.

The subject, long a sore one with exhibitors, seemed to have gained increasing importance lately because every exchange in all the areas seems to be forcing with all its might to get the largest amount of revenue from its territory and the preferred playing time looms high on the list of ways and means to get it.

An Old One

Distributors reply to the exhibitor complaint that this effort by branch managers to get the week end for whatever picture the exchange has in release during the moment is an old one and that the exhibitor sometimes holds out to dangle preferred time as a bait for lower rentals.

But exhibitors reply that while it is a complaint of long standing, there are times now with business falling off where the judgement of the exchange manager on what is a preferred playing time picture is all wrong and where the exhibitor who knows his house and what it can do, should have the final say-so.

Just Poison

One exhibitor who has a chain of several houses complains that several companies recently have demanded of him that he play their current release on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. He declares that he is perfectly willing to do so in some houses but that in one particular house, experience has proved again that a certain actor or a certain type of a story, no matter how popular they may be elsewhere, are just poison. Yet, he says, despite his willingness to book some picture preferred time in other houses, one exchange is adamant in its demand for this particular house.

Too, Too, True

New York trade circles are still chuckling over the crack Interstate's Bob O'Donnell made to a major distributing company president. "Come over," said Bob," and shake hands with the only exhibitor who isn't suing you."

No Sunday Show; Offers House for Sale

When Paxtang, Pa., voters turned thumbs down on Sunday movies at a recent election, they also wrote "finis" for the operating of the Paxtang under the ownership of Dr. Samuel Goldstein, it was learned this week. Goldstein offered the house for sale, declaring that if the town had approved Sunday movies, he would have continued to operate. The exhibitor, who had recently overhauled the house and who was active in his area, sponsoring Saturday children's matinees and monthly birthday parties for children, had declared he could not operate with his best day taken away from him while his patrons went to nearby areas for their Sunday film fare. Pennsylvania has a law which enables individual communities to prohibit or permit Sunday shows.

Yonkers Showmen Beat Ticket Tax

Exhibitors of Yonkers, N. Y., supported by the Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association and the Independent Theatre Owners of America, this week defeated a proposed five per cent amusement tax which the Common Council of that city above New York planned to slap on the box-office.

The proposed levy was beaten without a single non-political voice lifted in its support, after the exhibitors led by Donald McConville of the Terrace and Charles Burns of Loew's Yonkers, joined in with other business associations opposing the tax.

Used Screens

Th anti-tax campaign itself was highlighted by trailers in all theatres, 40x60 posters, handbills, protest letters and postcards which were prepared for the signature of tax opponents, among whom were theatre employes and unions. Over 10,000 protesting post cards alone were received at the city hall.

Bridgeport Exhibitors Kick Over Films in Auditorium

The Library Board of Bridgeport, Conn., adjourned this weekend without acting upon the vigorous protest filed by motion picture theatre managers that the use of the tax-exempt Klein Memorial Auditorium for films constituted unfair competition against the tax-paying theatres.

At the time of the adjournment, William Boardman, president of the Board, which governs the Auditorium, indicated the protest would be considered at the Jan. 12 meeting.

Speaking for the exhibitors, Matt Saunders of Loew's Poli, told the board the Klein Memorial had been donated to the city "for the purpose of running concerts and similar educational programs."

Attending the meeting with him were James Tobin of Warners, Jack Schwartz of the West End and Black Rock, George Bronson of the Beverly and Hi Way, Ethan Prakas of the Rivoli, Morris Jacobson of the Strand circuit.

Toronto to Get Vaude

Vaudeville is scheduled to return to Toronto on Jan. 9 at Loew's Uptown. The shows will be offered every fourth week.

'The Way . . .'

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association varied that old adage about the way to a man's heart being through his stomach this week as they invited Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton and Congressman - at - large Stephen M. Young to lunch. The reason behind it was more than mere hospitality for an appeal was made to the solons' minds on the unfairness of amusement taxes and marks the first gun fired in the campaign against the federal amusement tax in this area. Among the facts presented to the legislators were that movie business is down from 30 to 50 per cent and that movies are a necessity, not a luxury. Earlier P. J. Wood, secretary of Allied's Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, had urged exhibitors to get in touch with their Congressmen during the Christmas holidays to present a sales tax reduction or elimination plea.

Christmas Party

A children's Christmas party was sponsored by the Omaha Parents Council for Cerebral Palsy, with Opal Woodson of United Artists exchange heading the affair. To help with the purchasing of presents for the youngsters Miss Woodson set up a container in the UA exchange and received a fine contribution from film row personnel and from exhibitors.

Commissioner Protests 3rd Building Code Extension

St. Louis Building Commissioner A. H. Baum this week protested to Mayor Joseph M. Darst over the proposed extension of a deadline by which theatres would have to comply with the city building code. Baum's protest came as the extension, which would be the third, passed the Board of Alderman and now awaits the Mayor's signature.

"In our frank opinion," he wrote, "these leaders and picture show operators have had ample time to comply with the provisions of the building code and unless a definite step is taken to discourage procedures of this nature, these popular places of public assembly will never be required to conform.

Mack Jackson Heads Alabama Exhibitors

Mack Jackson this week was elected president of the Alabama Theatres Association succeeding R. W. Griffin. Other officers are Vice-President Richard Kennedy, Secretary-Treasurer T. E. Watson. Orr, Frank Merritt, E. D. Martin.

Canadians Would Invoke Lottery Act on Gambling

The Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario this week took action against games of chance which have been spreading in the area and are competing with theatres.

Main line of action is an exhibitor-supported drive for prohibition of certain types of money games under the Lotteries Act and a survey made to determine the number of alleged gambling games which have been recently adopted by radio sponsors.

Paramount to Release One Short a Week

Paramount will release shorts at the rate of one week during the first three months of 1950, Short Subject General Sales Manager Oscar Morgan announced this week.

Films Dividends Show Decrease

Publicly reported cash dividends by motion picture corporations in October amounted to $2,398,000, well below the $7,419,000 reported in September, but only slightly under the $2,653,000 paid out in October, 1948. Dividends for the three-month period which ended in October aggregated $10,328,000 against $17,559,000 for the corresponding quarter in 1948.

250,000 Tickets Sold for Alliance Merchants' Tie-in

Merchants in Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Washington have pledged themselves to purchase at least a quarter of a million tickets as "gifts" to their customers for special Christmas shows which the circuit will put on in the cities where it operates, Pete Panagos, Alliance promotion manager declared in Chicago this week.

On the day of the special shows, approximately 80 houses will be turned over for the use of these special ticket holders alone. The merchants will presumably give them to regular customers or use them as premiums on purchases. Last year Alliance tried the plan in its Washington division and 150,000 tickets were sold.

hibitor suspicion and would add to exchange operations.

By what means the collections will be made, and whether it will be feasible to collect from extremely small accounts, remained unanswered. At present the one-tenth levy is being spoken of in the trade around New York as a 10 cents levy on each $100 of film rental.

Talk Salary

Also said to have been discussed at the meeting without any final action being taken, was the salary for the executive vice-president, with a mention made of around $40,000 a year. There seemed to be some support for Francis Harmon, who now reportedly receives over $40,000 a year as an MPAA vice-president, for the paid executive vice-presidency of the proposed organization.

The actual program which delegates will bring home to their organizations according to an official release: covers 1) Liaison for consultation between exhibitor and producer; 2) "Arrangements to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the industry's ad and production code" which takes place in March 1950; 3) Development of plans to get more customers to the box-office; 4) "Dissemination of information relative to the civic contributions of the motion picture industry to the American community . . . Sweet Youth

Manager Billy L. Murphy of the Benson in Omaha is glad that he has a habit of patroling the premises of his theatre, especially on a recent Sunday when he found a trio of teenagers who had earlier been ejected from the theatre for rowdyism, about to toss a box of lighted matches into a basket of waste paper. The trio told the police that they were seeking revenge.

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Big Ones—and How!

The difference between "took over" and "gave up" gave STR quite a run around in the Dec. 3 issue. Story said Fox West Coast took over Loew's Warfield at San Francisco when it should have read "gave up" Loew's Warfield, which Loew's now operates. FWC has taken over the 352-seat Newsreel next door to the Warfield. The Newsreel is now playing action revivals on dual bills.

The Roar with a Smile

MGM's Leo has done his roaring and "smiling" at least once on every theatre screen in the United States that was operating up through Aug. 31, Vice-President and General Sales Manager William F. Rodgers declared this week. Rodgers said that this record applied to regularly operated theatres, under-skyers included, a record for which "MGM thanks the industry. . . . Flat for Programs, Percentage on A's Says Heineman

Eagle Lion will sell its program pictures and westerns at flat rental but will seek percentages on certain of its "A" pictures, Distribution Vice-President William Heineman declared in New York Wednesday at the conclusion of a sales meeting.

Heineman said there were 23 pictures in the "A" group, adding:

"I will say in the 23, 10 or 11 will rate top quality."

The remainder of the product will be sold "on a basis to meet the market," he said. In this group, which is sold flat, will be eight westerns "Range Riders" to be "sold as westerns," 18 programmers, including the Jack Schwartzes and others which " will be sold at proper prices at what the market can pay.

"When we come into the quality pictures," he remarked, "say, 'Guilty of Treason', we say that the picture is entitled to commensurate returns at the box-office."

In addition the company will have 12 J. Arthur Ranks assigned to it by the British producer, Heineman said.

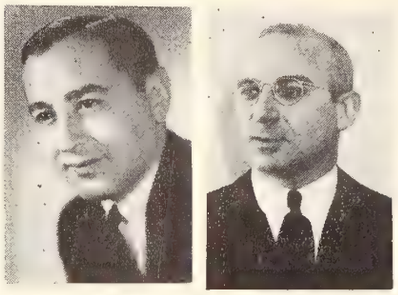
Eagle Lion, he declared would "spend liberally and in keeping with the quality of the pictures" in cooperative advertising with exhibitors, but the amounts spent would depend also on what the picture brought in after the first splurge. "If you're getting it back," he declared, "you don't mind laying it out."

Heineman indicated some such ballyhoo opening for "Guilty of Treason," the film dealing with Cardinal Mindszenty. He plans an opening with as many theatres he can get in the New England area for Feb. 15, using full page newspaper space and spots on the Yankee network. Then he plans to move into the midwest with Cincinnatti openings built around WLW.

One Convention

The Eagle Lion executive declared that recent experience had taught him that insofar as inspiring an outfit as concerned one big sales meeting far outweighed several small ones and that in the future he would try to have Eagle Lion sales conclaves a one-meeting affair.

Kings Get Stock OK; to Make 4



The King Bros.—Franklin and Maurice—this week announced that they had been authorized by the State of California to issue their own securities in order to finance a program of production.

The Kings, who say that this is probably the first time an independent has procured such permission within the state, have recently closed distribution deals with United Artists for four, among the first of which will be "1965" dealing with what happened 15 years from now after an atomic attack on Washington.

Hotchkiss in Westrex Division Position

Fred H. Hotchkiss has been appointed eastern division manager for Westrex, Vice-President E. S. Gregg, announced this week. Hotchkiss will handle business with studios and producers west of the Rocky Mountains with the assistance of Recording Manager Reeve O. Strock.

New on the Job

Adolph Schimel (left) who this week was elected Universal-International vice-president and counsel to replace Charles D. Prutzman, resigned in a series of Universal changes. Leon Goldberg (right) joined the company as vice-president, treasurer and director to replace Samuel Machnovitch, another resignation. Schimel, who has been with U since 1925 was born in Vienna and is a Harvard Law School graduate. Goldberg, born in Providence and a Harvard Business School Graduate, left RKO where he was employed in several executive capacities to join Universal.

Ends Gulf States' Rental Squabble

Paramount this week ended a rental squabble with E. V. Richards which had blacked out its product since early 1948 from the screens of two southern circuits and a buying combine controlled by the Gulf States Theatre magnate.

The settlement will restore Paramount product to the Paramount-Richards houses in Louisiana, Mississippi, parts of Alabama, Arkansas and Florida; the United Theatres, a chain of New Orleans subsequent-runs, and the clients of Theatre Service Corporation.

Richards is to relinquish conntrol of Paramount-Richards to Paramount in early 1950 as a result of Paramount's purchase of his interest in the chain in connection with the consent decree. But he will retain a dominant position in United and Theatre Service, organizations in which Paramount has no stockholdings and which offer the most consistent booking time in the area.

The possible importance of the settlement, which arose over Paramount terms especially percentages, likewise in the fact that it may restore the release pattern in the area where Paramount-Richards got first-run and United followed in New Orleans, and where Theatre Service usually got first-run in towns where there was no Paramount-Richards houses.

MGM, Universal and RKO are not selling this triple set-up with MGM and U, breaking away years ago and RKO more recently.

Hamrick Named Head Of New Northwest Chain

John Hamrick has been elected president of John Hamrick Theatres, Inc., northwestern unit which takes over three Portland, Oregon, theatres and one Seattle from the splitting Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, it was announced in Portland this week. Other officers are Executive Vice-President Will J. Conner, Vice-President H. V. Sabottka, Secretary Treasurer John P. Garvin. Douglas Forbes will buy and book for the houses and Willard Coughlan has been named ad manager.

LONDON observations

by Jock MacGregor

To all intents and purposes, Britain is looking to America to alleviate the film production crisis. The hopes lay in the use of Hollywood's frozen sterling for joint production. This scheme is already working extremely well with the Selznick-Korda and Warner-Associated British tieups.

An unforeseen result of the quota act is that it is forcing film rentals down. In the competition to get the limited dates available, salesmen are having to acept lower terms rather than lose the playing time. Combining with better quality output and the anticipated entertainment tax reductions, this will put the cinemas in a good position to increase their net takings.

The recently published Plant Report on Distribution and Exhibition reveals that the average rental paid has been 39.3 per cent, after the deduction of entertainment tax. This committee has produced a comprehensive report and made a number of recommendations. These include auction bidding, speedier release with an overhaul revision of the present barring system, review of the entertainment tax position, end of conditional bookings, showing of new films in all cinemas on Sundays instead of the present policy of two old pictures, and where a circuit holds a monopoly for one or more cinemas to be disposed of to independents.

Since it is suspected the Board of Trade are looking for a graceful way out of the quota act, it can be anticipated these recommendations will be most closely scrutinized in the hope that they provide an answer. Auction booking and revision of bars would cause chaos during the opening phase and would make the present regulations unworkable.

It is also doubtful whether the British producer would be helped. He makes his mistakes and these are taken by the circuits along with his successes—and how these often maligned circuits help production. After all, Odeon lost £2,000,000 in this direction last year, and before the formation of the Film Finance Corporation, ABC advanced the Korda British Lion group a hefty sum against the potential rentals of certain pictures. In short, this report seems to have been prepared for the greater part on the assumption that the state will have to finance the producers. Hence J. H. Lawrie's disassociation from the "conditional hire terms" clause.

Rank's CMA seems to be trying to lure cinemagoers back to the West End show places with double-feature programs.

ABC have concluded a successful winter convention of regional and district managers, and D. J. Goodlatte gave very satisfactory reports regarding current trading and the future. Sir Philip Warter and C. J. Latta, chairman and managing director of Associated British Picture Corporation, respectively, also spoke.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Off-Film-Page Ads New U-I Policy

"We are going off the movie page to find the lost patron," Universal-International National Advertising Director David A. Lipton announced this week, following a special experiment in Chicago.

Lipton revealed that while in the Windy City recently he was informed by exhibitors that a vast number of potential movie patrons was not being reached by the ads appearing on newspaper amusement pages. The theory was that these people, apparently having little interest in motion pictures, were by-passing the amusement pages. In an attempt to reach this group, Lipton experimented by running a full two-column ad on "Bagdad" in the main news section of the Chicago Sunday Tribune. The result was so successful that the U-I executive plans to use similar run-of-paper ads on all forthcoming U-I productions, with special layouts now being prepared on "Woman in Hiding," "South Sea Sinner," "Borderline" and "Francis." The off-the-movie-page pattern for "Bagdad" will also be used in further openings.

The new plan "will require a different kind of advertising approach," Lipton said, "both in format and in copy and illustration so that we can compete with retail and commercial advertising for attention. We hope to give these ads the kind of impact, sincerity and persuasion necessary to convince all newspaper readers that they are missing splendid entertainment possibilities offered them by our movies. No cut in regular space is anticipated. This is 'bonus advertising' to bring in the extra patrons we have missed in the past."

Books Marine Epic

Republic's "Sands of Iwo Jima" has been booked into Los Angeles' Carthay Circle Theatre for an extended run starting Dec. 28.

Life With MGM

MGM has garnered considerable motion picture space in the last four issues of Life. It began with "Battleground," when Ricardo Montalban appeared on the cover. The following week Nita Bieber was the cover personality in connection with "Nancy Goes to Rio." Then the next week a number of photos appeared on "That Forsyte Woman" tied-in with the Royal Command Performance held recently in England. And then, in the issue of Dec. 12, "Intruder in the Dust" was accoladed as the "Movie of the Week."

Add 25 Field Men For Two EL Films

More than 25 field exploitation men have been added to the Eagle Lion staff to cover major regional engagements of "The Sundowners" and "The Story of G. I. Joe."

When "The Sundowners" opens at the Paramount and State Theatres in Amarillo, Texas, on Jan. 30, the world premiere will set off a series of more than 400 key dates lined up to date in the Southwest and South, which will require the services of at least 15 top exploitation men, according to Leon Brandt, ad-pub-exploitation director. These men will be sent into the territory well in advance to build pre-opening campaigns on the film and to handle the area-wide personal appearance tours of John Barrymore, Jr., who makes his debut in the picture, and other screen personalities.

Current success of the reissue, "The Story of G. I. Joe," in selected test regional engagements in Pennsylvania, will be followed by intensive promotion and exploitation campaigns in New England and the South, where large scale regional premieres have already been set. Approximately ten exploiteers have been assigned.

CLOUGH'S OLD-TIME MOVIE REVIVAL BALLYHOO. When I.M.P.S. Member H. S. Clough, manager of Golden State's Chimes Theatre, Oakland, Calif., played the revival bill of "Son of the Sheik" and "Gaslight Follies," he put on an old-fashioned campaign to sell the old-time films. Two weeks ahead of playdate his usherettes and himself rode around town on tandem bicycles, attired in the costumes of the 1900 era. The girls wore signs on their bustles and on their shoulders advertising the show. Besides participating in the ballyhoo, Clough also erected the false front shown above. Note the girls in the costumes. One of the gay blades is undoubtedly Brother Clough, but we can't tell you which, for he failed to identify himself. We'll guess: the man on the left.

EXPLOITORIALS

There's a safety angle in the advertising for Eagle Lion's "Trapped" which you should use in your community. When the picture played at the RKO Golden Gate Theatre in San Francisco, Manager Mark Alling, Publicity Manager Helen Wabee and EL Exploiteer Bob Goodfried arranged with the National Safety Council to post all traffic and other street poles with signs reading: "Don't be 'Trapped' by traffic killers . . . Read the San Francisco News for prize contest details." The News tied-in by offering cash prizes and tickets for the best slogan on safety, winding up with: "Don't you be 'trapped' by motor vehicles. See 'Trapped,' etc."

You probably read in these pages last week about the radio contest on Paramount's "Samson and Delilah" in New York. Through a tieup with the White Rock Bottling Co. and WNEW Disc Jockey Martin Block, a song identification contest was conducted by Block, with the 800 submitting the correct answers and the best statements on why they like White Rock soda entitled to be Paramount's guests at a special preview of the DeMille film at the Normandie Theatre. You know, that preview prize is a good idea. Oh sure, you've given guest tickets as prizes. But wouldn't it be something new and different to give the winners a private preview of the picture with which the contest is connected? We think so. The contest could tie-in either the newspaper or radio, and a local merchant or manufacturer. It worked out well in New York on "Samson and Delilah," but you could use it on almost any attraction. The preview, incidentally, should be given several days in advance of the regular opening; otherwise, it may not seem too special to the contestants. And—it'll give 'em time before playdate to talk up the picture to their friends.

Up at the Rivoli Theatre on Broadway the patron who purchased the 500,000th ticket for "Pinky" received from the cashier two guest tickets for the world premiere of that picture we mentioned in the previous paragraph. You must have a pretty good idea of the number of paid adult admissions to each change of program, so why not choose the 100th, or the 500th, or whatever he or she might be and present him or her with two tickets for your next attraction? Get the newspaper to take a picture of the lucky patron receiving the tickets. We saw such a picture of the Rivoli stunt, with the patron receiving the tickets from a cashier who was a dead ringer for Diana Lynn. We continued marveling at the resemblance until we turned the photo over and discovered that it was indeed Dianna Lynn playing cashier for the occasion. If you can get a celebrity to hand out the free ducats, as Managing Director Monty Salmon did, so much the better. But if you can't, the lucky patron will still be happy to get them.

Make It a SAFE Christmas

There are some safety angles in connection with the tree and other decorations which you should bear in mind during the Christmas season. Read 'em over—and check 'em:

Don't use worn or damaged cord or plugs. Don't overload the circuits. Don't put lights close to inflammable matter. Don't place lights where youngsters can reach them. Don't use any but a fireproof tree or, failing that, stand it in a pail of water, with the base (the cut end) cut at an angle so as to absorb moisture.

These warnings have been dispatched to managers of Fox West Coast theatres through the circuit's house organ, Newsviews, but danger and disaster can also lurk in your own theatre. So take heed.

Still Not Too Late to Make Christmas Season Profitable

Well, Christmas is almost here. By this time, all your plans should be in action. But just in case you might have forgotten a thing or two, let's go over a few last-minute ideas that you can still put to work if you get busy.

How about a checking service for shopper This will require care and detail to execute properly, but it's worth the extra effort in the goodwill you'll earn. Naturally you hope that patrons taking advantage of the service also see the show, but this should not be a requisite. Shoppers loaded down with packages and with still more shopping to do may want to unload themselves of a few items for a short time. You can come to their rescue by making it possible for them to check these items at your theatre.

For stage activity during the pre-Christmas period and as a means of bringing in that much-needed extra revenue, why not contact the schools for groups of children to sing Christmas Carols? For that matter, a different school or church group could appear each night. Remember also that here, once again, is a builder of valuable goodwill with schools, churches, children and parents.

Charity Shows

Need we point out the importance of charity shows during the holiday season? A local fraternal lodge might sponsor such a show and provide small gifts and candy for the children attending. In many communities these shows are an annual event, as are also the Canned Goods Matinees in which food brought by youngsters for admission is turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution to the poor and needy. There are variations in the kind of show and method of presentation, so set up whatever fits your situation best.

It gets darker quicker these days, and there are lots of late shoppers, so light up your marquee and theatre front early to be sure to catch some of them. If you can possibly arrange it, it might be worth while to schedule late shows on Christmas-Week evenings to accommodate these late shoppers.

Nearly every community has a Christmas Parade—long before this, incidentally. But if you get busy and contact the merchants, you may still be able to have one, with Santa Claus and all. You probably won't be able to make it as elaborate as it might have been at an earlier date, but merchants and yourself can get some plugs that will prove beneficial in the end. Think it over—then see what you can do.

Decorate Front, Lobby

If your front and lobby are not properly decorated at this late date, then apparently you never intended to do so at all. Should you experience a change of heart as Christmas Day approaches, then get busy putting up holly wreaths and strings of holly and other decorative material. As a lobby stunt tieing-in your film attractions, you might display dummy Christmas packages, labeling each with the name of a coming attraction.

Whether or not you have a real live Santá Claus in the lobby is something you'll have to determine for yourself. It takes a man well versed in child psychology, one who can make the kids happy without coming right out and promising them the world with a fence around it. You might have "Santa's telephone" set up in the lobby where the children can talk to the jolly old gentleman. Of course, a man is stationed at the other end elsewhere in the theatre. Depending on the number of children, this can be a chore that will require a great deal of patience on the part of "Santa." At a famous toy store in New York where the kiddies are permitted to talk to Kris Kringle via telephone, the stunt required the services of several men who were kept so busy they had to remove their shirts to keep cool. Remember—patience.

Orphanages, Old Folks

Don't forget the orphanages and old folks' home. Whatever you can do to see that they have a Merry Christmas will redound to your credit, provided it is well publicized in the newspapers. In the case of the children, you can arrange with a bus or taxi company for transportation to bring them to the theatre for a special show and gifts. Or, if the institution is a children's hospital, you should be able to round up some leading citizens to play "Santa Claus" and give a show for the youngsters at the institution. You would also promote candy or other gifts for them. A similar procedure would obtain in the case of the old folks' home. Don't forget these people at Christmas time.

Well, that just about does it for this year. If you follow through, you'll be pretty busy right up through Christmas. But you'll also be happier, and the results of your efforts will be reflected at the box-office for months to come.

Helps a Brother

One theatreman heeded the appeal of a brother theatreman across the ocean, and thereby hangs a tale of generosity that is appropriate during this holiday season. When Manager John L. Laing of the Olympia Theatre, Bridgeton, Scotland, appealed to Manager Dan Dandrea of the Stanley Theatre, Bridgeton, N. J., for gifts for the kiddies of the Glasgow suburb, Dandrea sought the cooperation of local merchants (he's president of the Merchants Association) and the city schools. In no time at all, over 1,000 gifts were collected by boys and girls, and wrapped for shipment to the city's namesake in Scotland.

Goldwyn's 2-Day Christmas Party

Samuel Goldwyn, in cooperation with the Community Service Department of United Artists Theatre Circuit, will stage a 2-day "My Foolish Heart" Christmas Present Party for underprivileged children in the foyer of the United Artists Theatre, Los Angeles, on Dec. 23-24, it was announced this week by Pat DeCicco, operating head of the United Artists Theatres of California.

At the foot of a giant 40-foot Christmas Tree in the foyer thousands of gifts will be contributed by people of Los Angeles and members of the motion picture industry, from Dec. 12 through Dec. 24. These gifts will be distributed to underprivileged children of Los Angeles at the two-day Christmas Party which will precede the Los Angeles Premiere of Goldwyn's "My Foolish Heart" on Christmas Day at the United Artists and Four Star theatres.

Thousands of underprivileged children will be the guests of Goldwyn to receive their presents and also see a full two-hour children's show, headed by personal appearances of Hollywood stars from all major studios.

Special Toy Show Helps Boone Needy

Every year a Special Toy Show for the benefit of the Empty Stocking Fund is held at the Pastime Theatre, Boone, N. C. Children can either pay admisson or be admitted through the gift of a toy, according to R. E. Agle, Sr., district manager.

This year's show, which was scheduled for Dec. 16, will make possible boxes for needy families at Christmas time. The Women's Club prepares the boxes and the Lions Club distributes them on New Year's Eve.

"It is a very nice thing and we always have some wonderful boxes to go out," Agle reports.

Cupcakes, Candy

Free cupcakes and Christmas candy were offered neighborhood youngsters at San Francisco Theatres' Christmas party shows.—SF.

'Montana' Premiere Jan. 10 in Montana

Mort Blumenstock, Warner vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, and Bill Brumber, in charge of field exploitation, were in Helena, Montana, this week to confer with local Fox Intermountain theatre executives on the forthcoming world premiere in that territory of "Montana," Technicolor production starring Errol Flynn and Alexis Smith. The film is scheduled to open in 150 theatres on Jan. 10.

Fox Intermountain men participating in the conferences included Jack McGee, Intermountain's Montana division manager, and Dan Driscoll, city manager in Helena.

Kids Grab Tickets

R. E. Agle, district manager in Boone, N. C., sold 500 tickets to a local merchant, good for admission to the Appalachian or Pastime theatres. The merchant offered the tickets free to children under 12 years of age visiting his toy department during a certain period. You can be sure the kids came to the store, and the tickets were disposed of in short order.

I.M.P.S. Member Report

Rogers Rodeo Club Formed by Utecht

I.M.P.S. Member Leonard C. Utecht, manager of the Lake Theatre, Oak Park, Ill., has organized a Roy Rogers Rodeo Club for small fry of all ages.

Meetings will be held the first Saturday of each month from January through May, 1950, and will include a Roy Rogers western feature, two color cartoons, a comedy and what Brother Utecht calls a "Ranchhouse Jamboree."

This Jamboree, by the way, will be a general meeting of the children who will be entitled to compete for many fine prizes ranging from Roy Rogers cameras and binoculars to western accessories, given by the Henry C. Lytton Co. and the Jacobs and Jenson Camera Shop, co-sponsors.

A model exhibit in the theatre lobby shows some of the prizes to be given away, plus the latest in western garb for the potential cowboy or cowgirl. The youngsters are urged to dress up in their western clothes like the model on display when they attend the shows.

Free membership in the Lake Theatre Roy Rogers Rodeo Club is automatic to each boy and girl with the purchase of a series ticket which costs $1 and entitles the child to see all five Saturday morning shows. There will also be special treats in store for kiddies each week.—CHI.

Public to Parade in 'East Side' Premiere

When MGM's "East Side, West Side" has its world premiere at Loew's State in New York on Dec. 22, Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public will not have to stand outside the theatre just looking on at the goings-on while lucky invitation-holders parade through the police lines to the accompaniment of flashlights and exclamations of envy and admiration. This time, Mr. and Mrs. Public will do the parading and see the picture.

The premiere is being sponsored by Tex and Jinx McCrary, radio and newspaper columnists and commentators. Of the 3,500 seats in the theatre, 1,000 will be awarded to the winners of a letter-writing contest conducted by the McCrarys over their program on WNBC. The other 2,500 seats will be on sale to the public at regular prices.

The writers of the 500 best letters received by Tex and Jinx, explaining why the authors would like to attend the premiere of "East Side, West Side," will each receive two tickets. There will also be cash prizes totaling $1,000.

Joan Barton to M.C. Children's Contest

Joan Barton, Hollywood starlet and Park Avenue singing star, will appear as mistress of ceremonies at the Alpine Theatre, New York, on the evening of Dec. 20, during the distribution of $1,000 in prizes to the winners of the Children's Personality Contest, which the theatre has been conducting since October.

Top prize will be a television set and silver loving cup, according to Manager Sam Kestenbaum. Both Little Miss Alpine and Little Mr. Alpine will each receive a $100 U. S. Savings Bond and a silver loving cup, while the three top winners will be entered free in Walter Thornton's Model Year Book. There will also be several other prizes for contestants.

BATTERED BALLYHOO. But the old junk-yard jalopy got attention just the same as, bedecked with signs and stills from the picture, it toured Red Bank, N. J., to advertise Paramount's "My Friend Irma" at Reade's Carlton Theatre. City Manager Joseph Sommers painted the old thing and turned it over to the ushers for street tours.

'Iwo Jima' Bows at Fox in San Francisco

Republic and Fox West Coast went ultra Wednesday evening for the world premiere of "Sands of Iwo Jima" at the Fox Theatre in San Francisco. Formal invitations were issued for the event, with the line, "dress optional," included.

John Wayne, Adele Mara and Forrest Tucker, of the film's cast, were on hand for the ceremonies, as was also Republic President Herbert J. Yates. Governor Earl Warren and Mayor Elmer Robinson headed the state and civic dignitaries.

On display at the premiere was the tattered Mt. Suribachi flag which was brought from the Marine Museum at Quantico, Va.

The United States Marine Corps is cooperating in Republic's campaign on the picture, which opened Thursday in San Diego at the Fox.—SF.

Looking for a Hatfield

A day before "Roseanna McCoy" playdate, Manager Ben Tureman of the Russell, Maysville, Ky., sent a young boy, in crude mountaineer costume, shotgun over his shoulder, through the streets wearing placard: "I am a McCoy and I'm looking for a Hatfield," etc.

Private Previews For 'Cinderella'

A series of private previews in exchange centers throughout the country were inaugurated this week to acquaint exhibitors, editors, educators and radio commentators with Walt Disney's "Cinderella" in advance of its national release. The showings, which will terminate Jan. 13, are being handled by the field force of Terry Turner, RKO's exploitation manager, assisted by Disney representatives.

The previews are being limited to publishers, newspaper editors, special editorial writers, radio and TV heads, news commentators, program directors, advertising managers of leading department stores, and civic educators. Invitations have also been extended to leading exhibitors and circuit heads.

First showings were in Philadelphia and San Francisco on Monday. Then followed Washington and St. Louis on Tuesday; Pittsburgh and Kansas City on Wednesday; Cleveland, Oklahoma City and Los Angeles on Thursday; Cincinnati and Dallas on Friday. Future showings will include Indianapolis, New Orleans and Portland, Ore., Jan. 3; Detroit Memphis and Seattle, Jan. 4; Buffalo, Atlanta and Salt Lake City, Jan. 5; Albany, Charlotte and Denver, Jan. 6; Boston, Jan. 7; New Haven and Minneapolis, Jan. 10; Milwaukee, Jan. 11; Des Moines, Jan. 12, and Omaha, Jan. 13.

Soil from England in Capital 'Pimlico' Stunt

Excellent publicity breaks and outstanding business were picked up for the opening of Eagle Lion's J. Arthur Rank film, "Passport to Pimlico" at the Playhouse Theatre, Washington, D. C., when Manager Gerry Wagner arranged for 100 pounds of the soil of Pimlico, a suburb of London, England, to be flown to the Capital, where it was placed in a special container in front of the theatre. As soon as the soil was in place, a group of distinguished guests headed the large numbers of patrons in "stepping on the soil of Pimlico," after receiving their "Passport to Pimlico" from a uniformed London bobby.

The event was extensively covered by the local press and all wire services, with art and feature story breaks in all Washington papers, and liberal radio coverage. A similar stunt was staged in New York in front of the Trans-Lux Theatre, Madison Ave. at 60th St.

APPLES MAY KEEP DOCTORS AWAY, BUT NOT PATRONS. Over 12,000 McIntoshes were promoted from the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers Association in connection with exploitation on J. Arthur Rank's "Adam and Evelyne," a Universal-International release, at the Odeon Theatre, Toronto. Some of the apples were used in the huge outer-lobby display shown above. The apples on the left were exposed, while those on the right were wrapped for distribution to patrons as they left the theatre. The wrappers were imprinted with selling copy on the picture and credited the tie-in. Manager Wannie Tyers was responsible for the promotion, assisted by Bob Lester and Doug Smith.

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

There's a bonus included with the press book on Republic's "Sands of Iwo Jima." Tipped-in on the cover is a reproduction of the J. J. Capolini painting of the Famous Flag-Raising at Iwo Jima. It's truly a beautiful reproduction and worthy of framing. Wonder if the press book suggests a stunt whereby copies of this reproduction would be available as contest prizes or as opening-day gifts to patrons? Well, maybe we overlooked it, but we didn't find it. Anyway, the six-sheet reproduces the scene, and there's a coloring contest utilizing a cartoon drawing of it. Incidentally, this is a terrific press book for which Steve Edwards and his staff deserve special credit. It's chockful of exploitation stunts and tieins—those boys seem not to have missed a thing. Exhibitors should be especially interested in the two-page announcement informing them that Marine Corps Units all across the country are on the alert in every way possible to assist them in exploiting the picture. There's a half-page newspaper feature which is well worth the effort of planting. The silhouette of a charging Marine highlights most of the newspaper ads, and some feature "clinch" illustrations. Don't worry whether or not there's a variety of styles and sizes—you'll find plenty from which to choose. Some of the catchlines: "The Marines' Greatest Hour!"—"The Marines Have Landed, and the Situation Is Well in Hand"—"The Lusty Saga of the Guys Who Fought Best When It Was Hopeless . . . Who Laughed Most When It Was Toughest . . . and Loved the Gals Who Were Closest." There are many more. Looks like this press book will be pretty battered and dog-eared from use.

You've been hearing about 20th Century-Fox's national magazine campaign on "Prince of Foxes." They weren't kidding when they called it "an unprecedented advertising schedule," for practically every magazine you pick up these days hits you right in the face with a "Prince of Foxes" ad. The press book calls attention to this campaign and gives the exhibitor additional ammunition in the way of advertising, publicity and exploitation to enable him to follow through. Here again showmen are blessed with a liberal supply of ads of all shapes and sizes, many of them similar to those now appearing in the magazines, so that readers will instantly recall having seen them. Action, thrills, spectacle, romance—all strong box-office elements—are in nearly every layout. Some of the catchlines: "King of Romantic Epics . . . 3 Years in the Making . . . A Spectacular Cast of 50,000"—"Violence Puts the Torch . . . to History's Most Ravaged Age"—"A Saga of Scoundrels in a Century of Infamy"—"I Shall Use a Woman's Lips As I Use a Sword . . . Together We Shall Conquer the World Through a Boudoir." Special accessories for Christmas Season playdates are shown.

Noting Ella Raines in the ad on the cover of the press book for RKO Radio's "A Dangerous Profession" reminds us that she's the Hollywood gal who likes Bikini swim suits and plans to wear them. Now let's try real hard and get our minds back on the press book. Well, on the third page you'll find a sort of capsule explanation of what the picture's all about, and from this material you could fashion your own advertising lines and publicity stories. But even so, the ads are well fortified with lines of their own. Samples: "The Man Between Crime and the Law"—"Thieves and Killers Are His Customers"—"Tough, Cynical, Smart . . . Until a Dame Causes His One Mistake . . . And Then the Payoff!"

Plants Feature Story

Because Joan Evans is a former Weston, Conn., lass, Manager Harry A. Rose of the Loew-Poli Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, planted a feature story in the Sunday Post and thereby got some excellent publicity for the showing of "Roseanna McCoy."

Art Contest Based On 'Samson' Story

A new art competition with prizes totaling more than $25,000 in cash, merchandise and scholarship will be sponsored by Paramount and the Institute of Commercial Art of Westport, Conn., in connection with "Samson and Delilah."

Theme of the contest, which is open to all, will be based on the submission of paintings or drawings interpreting any phase of the Book of Judges, Chapters 13-16, of the Holy Bible.

The contest will open on Jan. 1, 1950. Fifty-nine separate competitions will be held.

Preliminary announcements will be made in local theatres and newspapers. When contestants have completed their painting or drawing, they will be required to have a photograph taken of it (no smaller than 2x4 inches, no larger than 8x10 inches). These photographs will then be submitted to a screening committee of local judges to be designated at a later date. Principal award to the winners of the local contests will be a two-year home-study scholarship at the Institute of Commercial Art.

The winner of the first prize will receive a cash award of $2,500, plus an all-expense trip to New York, where he will meet with famous illustrators and motion picture stars. The second and third winners will receive substantial cash and merchandise prizes.

133 Stars Attend 'Hasty Heart' Premiere

With 133 stars listed among the distinguished first-nighters, Warner Bros.' American premiere of "The Hasty Heart" was held on Wednesday evening in Hollywood, with on-lookers watching the gala ceremonies from specially-constructed bleacher seats.

Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles headed the civic dignitaries attending the premiere, while members of the consular corps in Los Angeles, representing 34 foreign nations, added a colorful international spirit to the occasion. Famous highland bagpipers, in full regalia, played traditional Scottish airs.

Awards for CMA Showmanship

Successful managers for interim awards in the current Cinema Managers Association drive in the United Kingdom have been announced by the executive judging committee. Based on exploitation results only, these prizes are being given at the end of each four-week period during the drive for extra showmanship and bigger business.

Manager H. Randell of the Luton Odeon, and his assistant R. S. Greenbank, have been awarded £10 and £5, respectively, for their handling of "You Can't Sleep Here" ("Male War Bride"), which was judged the best campaign submitted for a six- or seven-day booking. It included the distribution to every factory in the neighborhood of a d.c. poster "You Can't Sleep Here either—Work Harder, Save More . . ."; a "sleeping woman" on the pitch before an important match at the Luton Football Ground and window tieups in six leading stores.

For the best three-day booking campaign, Manager C. Smith of Rhyl Odeon and House Manager A. J. W. Brett get £10 and £5, respectively. They persuaded the chairman of Rhyl Council to pay the theatre a 'civic' visit on its 12th birthday and ran a "Rhyl Flashback" (borrowed from a local home movie enthusiast). They also divided a map of Africa into 1,500 squares and invited patrons to stake claims for free passes to "Rope of Sand."

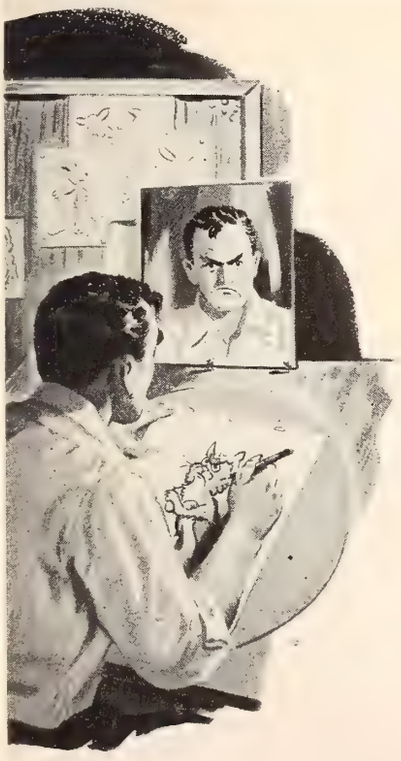
A. S. Fieldnig, Odeon, Colindale, North London, won the £10 for the best Sunday program campaign. He mounted a borrowed slide lantern on the marquee and threw a slide advertising "The Black Swan" onto a wall facing up the busy Edgware Road. He also got shops to hang on their doors cards with this copy: "Closed—Going on Sunday to the Odeon" hanging cards in doors.

Seats Go on Sale For 'Foxes' Premiere

More than 1,000 general, unreserved admission tickets went on sale Monday at the Roxy Theatre and United Hospital Fund Headquarters for the gala American premiere Dec. 22 of 20th Century-Fox's "Prince of Foxes." All proceeds go to the United Hospital Fund.

Hollywood and Broadway stars, society and political leaders will take part in the opening-night festivities together with a group of 200 nurses from numerous hospitals in the metropolitan New York area and a 50-voice choral group from the Italian Folklore Society who will sing from a raised platform.

'Francis' to Bow in Berlin on Jan. 20



World premiere of Universal-International's wartime comedy, "Francis," has been tentatively set for Jan. 20 in Berlin, with a contingent of Hollywood celebrities headed by Donald O'Connor, star of the film, flying to Germany for the festivities.

The U. S. Air Force and the Army are cooperating with U-I to bring the premiere to the amusement-hungry GIs abroad. The gala event will be completed with all the customary Hollywood trimmings, including arc lights, movie celebrities, music and speech-making. The presence of highranking Army and Air Force officers, as well as a group of Hollywood columnists and correspondents, is expected to furnish added international flavor.

After the premiere, the stars headed by O'Connor will entertain GIs at several points in American-occupied Germany. The movie contingent will be flown back by the Air Force, returning to Hollywood February 1. Arrangements for the event, in the planning stage for many weeks, are in charge of Lieut. Col. Joseph F. Goetz, Chief of the Motion Picture and Entertainment Division, U.S.A.F. and David A. Lipton, U-I's national advertising-publicity director.

Meanwhile, U-I announced a series of invitational "sneak previews" in the 31 exchange centers and other key cities so that all exhibitors may have the opportunity to see "Francis" with an audience. Policy to hold showings in theatres, instead of the customary exchange screenings, was decided upon by U-I sales executives as a result of "Francis" being hailed as one of the funniest pictures of the year.

His pen-and-ink people live for laughter...

BORN on the drawing board, though they are, these little people have the breath of life and laughter that captures hearts the world around—thanks to the creative genius of the animator.

His knowing lines belie the fact that they are folk of fantasy... of pen and ink and paint. For each and every one has the human touch . . . has been fully endowed with character and lifelike movement, through the animator's artistry.

Yet—for all his wit and skill—the animator could not present his gift of laughter to the moviegoing world without the help of film. And this—in types especially adapted to his needs—he finds in the famous Eastman family, whose Fine Grain Master Positive and Background X Negative have been the animator's faithful mediums for many years.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Woman in Hiding

Univ.-Int'l Drama 93 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) The keen pitch of action and suspense in this murder thriller should keep patrons on the edge of their seats.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Exploited as a picture of tension and suspense, the film will fulfill any promises made, and with the Ida Lupino name it should do well in most situations.

Cast: Ida Lupino, Howard Duff, Stephen McNally, Peggy Dow, John Litel. Credits: Produced by Michel Kraike. Directed by Michael Gordon. Photography by William Daniels. Screenplay by Oscar Saul. Adaptation by Roy Huggins.

Plot: On the day of her wedding a young woman learns that her husband has murdered her father and married her to gain control of her wealth. To silence her the murderer tampers with the brakes of her car. The car crashes into a river but she escapes and hides while trying to establish his guilt.

Comment: "Woman in Hiding" is exciting entertainment. Ida Lupino gives an excellent performance as the victim of shrewd, ruthless Stephen McNally whose nearly successful attempts to kill her keep the picture at a keen pitch of tension. Howard Duff's effort to help Miss Lupino, whom he loves and believes to be suffering from delusions, by tricking her into the hands of her husband, will keep patrons on the edge of their seats. When Duff finally realizes that Miss Lupino is sane and in danger, he finds her at the family industrial plant where McNally is following her over catwalks high above the floor to push her to her death. The story is well plotted and offers some original and effective bits, as where McNally, mistaking his mistress, Peggy Dow, for Miss Lupino, pushes the wrong girl from the catwalk. Howard Duff is good as the nonchalant young war veteran who rescues Miss Lupino. Peggy Dow is very capable and Stephen McNally gives a strong characterization. Michel Kraike's production values are good and Michael Gordon does an excellent job of straight-forward direction.

Francis

Univ.-Int'l Comedy 91 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A cinch to win audiences because it's loaded with laughs—not the kind induced by slapstick but genuine, spontaneous rib-tickling laughter. Folks will fall for Francis, the Army mule that talks.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do big business, once the word-of-mouth starts getting around. Better get behind it with a strong exploitation campaign for the initial opening. After that, your patrons will be talking billboards.

Cast: Donald O'Connor, Patricia Medina, ZaSu Pitts, Ray Collins, John McIntire, Eduard Franz, Howland Chamberlin, James Todd, Robert Warwick, Frank Faylen, Anthony Curtis, Mikel Conrad, Loren Tindall, Charles Meredith, and Francis, the Talking Army Mule. Credits: Produced by Robert Arthur. Directed by Arthur Lubin. Screenplay by David Stern. Adapted from the novel by David Stern. Photography, Irving Glassberg. Special photography, David S. Horsley. Art direction, Bernard Herzbrun and Richard H. Riedel. Technical adviser, Major M. H. Lencer, Corps of Engineers, Res. Music, Frank Skinner.

Plot: Lost behind the enemy lines in Burma, Second Lieutenant Donald O'Connor makes the acquaintance of an Army mule, Francis, who has the ability to talk. The mule saves O'Connor, and when the soldier relates his experience to his superior officers, he is sent to the pyscho ward where he is kept busy weaving baskets. Later, O'Connor gets tips from the mule which save the outpost from enemy attack; but each time he tries to explain how it was done, he is sent back to his basket weaving. A superior officer meets the mule and is convinced of its talking ability, but he, too, causes suspicion among the other officers. Finally, newspapermen meet the talking mule, and a girl with whom O'Cononr had fallen in love is revealed as a spy. Francis is flown back to the United States and apparently dies in an air crash, but O'Connor later finds him in the Kentucky hills.

Comment: Universal-International has an audience and box-office winner in "Francis." Now when we say "audience" we don't mean the Park Avenue or Main Line kind, exactly; we mean that great mass of movie-going people. And when we say "box-office" we don't necessarily mean the art theatres or the ultra-ultra houses; we mean the thousands of box-offices in situations of all kinds throughout the country. With David Stern writing the screen treatment of his own novel, and with Robert Arthur giving the picture top production values and Arthur Lubin providing expert direction, "Francis" is a cinch to win audiences and influence box-office receipts to a considerable degree. Donald O'Connor is better in this comedy than ever before; nevertheless he must take second place to Francis—and all because of the Army mule's ability to talk and to say the things he does. It would be easy to put words into the mouth of almost any animal, but to do it so perfectly that the animation is not noticed and the animal appears to actually talk is high tribute to whoever was responsible. It isn't only Francis but the consternation he causes in the Army outpost in Burma that loads the picture with laughs—not the kind induced by slapstick but genuine, spontaneous rib-tickling laughter. The mule and O'Connor are very capably supported by Patricia Medina, ZaSu Pitts, Ray Collins, John McIntire and others. Don't be afraid of this one, because the folks will fall for "Francis" and your grosses will rise. But get behind it with a strong exploitation campaign for the initial opening. After that, your patrons will become talking billboards.

MGM Drama 108 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) For the more sophisticated audience, this film has a definite appeal. It is a beautifully produced and enacted dramatic offering with four top star players in the leading roles.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: As a showcase production scintillating with star names, this sophisticated drama should do business in the metropolitan areas, but it has less appeal for audiences in smaller communities.

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, James Mason, Van Heflin, Ava Gardner, Cyd Charisse, Nancy Davis, Gale Sondergaard, William Conrad, Raymond Greenleaf, Douglas Kennedy, Beverly Michaels, William Frawley, Lisa Golm, Tom Powers. Credits: Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Screenplay by Isobel Lennart. Based on the novel by Marcia Davenport. Photography, Charles Rosher. Produced by Voldemar Vetluguin. A Mervyn LeRoy Production.

Plot: A young married couple have settled their differences, but when the husband's former paramour returns from abroad he cannot resist her advances. When the siren's amorous activities result in her murder, the husband is accused but saved by a family friend who acts out of love for the wife. The wife is finally forced to leave her husband because of his weakness for other women.

Comment: This drawing-room drama is based on a best-seller by Marcia Davenport. It is a beautifully-enacted, splendidly-produced picture that has four name-stars handling the leading roles. Being a sophisticated tale of a rich playboy's amorous adventures, its greatest appeal lies with the moviegoers in the metropolitan areas. For the average patron in the small town, its appeal is more limited. James Mason gives a workman-like, true-to-type performance of a man born to wealth who cannot resist other women. Barbara Stanwyck does superbly well in the role of Mason's wife, while Van Heflin as the writer who falls in love with her, and Cyd Charisse as the girl who is in love with him, both turn in strong and humanly recognizable characterizations. Ava Gardner as the siren who keeps leading Mason astray, is understandably attractive. Direction was by Mervyn LeRoy; production by Voldemar Vetluguin.

Produced by Irving Allen. Directed by Burgess Meredith. Screenplay by Harry Brown, based upon Georges Simonon's novel, "A Battle of Nerves." Photography by Stanley Cortez and associate Tony Braun. Music, Michel Michelet. Musical direction, Constantin Bakaleinikoff.

Plot: A wealthy American woman and her maid living near Paris are murdered. The crime is pinned by Maigret of the Paris Surete on a knife-grinder who had gone there to rob her. He stumbles over the bodies and his bloody hands leave fingerprints all over the place. He loses his glasses and is unable to see the man who steps on them and then offers to help him escape the police, but later attempts to murder him. Maigret believes the man innocent and traces the murder to a brilliant former medical student who had been hired for a million francs by the woman's nephew to commit the crime. The nephew is murdered. When the crimes are traced to the medical student, he climbs the Eiffel Tower to cast himself down, but becomes dizzy and descends to be tried and guillotined.

Comment: A Parisian murder story of sustained and accumulating interest and fascination, beautifully photographed in Ansco color, with several superb acting performances and entertainment, excitement and more than a hint of horror in the final sequences. It has many shots of Paris from the Eiffel Tower, a chase over the rooftops, night club and street scenes. In fact the City of Paris is listed among the stars of the production along with Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone, Burgess Meredith, Robert Hutton, Jean Wallace, Patricia Roc and Belita. The film possesses nostalgic interest for all who have visited the city and is a pictorial guidebook for those who have not. Irving Allen has produced it commendably and Burgess Meredith directed with sure touch for its drama and the picturesqueness of Paris. His directorial job equals his acting performance, which is the best he has done in some time. Also, Franchot Tone as the superiorly-grinning hired murderer has never done better work; his role is that of a once brilliant medical student who thinks he is too smart ever to be trapped by the phlegmatic, cool and slow-moving and speaking Maigret, played by Charles Laughton. Audience interest is centered in Laughton as he patiently seeks the evidence that pins the murders on Tone, clearing Meredith, a poor and humble knifegrinder who had gone to the aunt's home to rob in order to meet the incessant demands for money from his wife, Belita, and been traced by Laughton through his thick glasses which Tone had crushed, leaving him blind. Robert Hutton acts persuasively as the weak, young husband who hires Tone to kill his aunt that he may inherit her fortune and buy off his wife, Patricia Roc, so he may wed Jean Wallace.

Republic War Drama 109 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) War drama that pulls no punches in its portrayal of the heroism and horrors of one of the historic battles of the Pacific theatre in World War II. There is ringing sincerity to this drama and great theatrical effect in the outstanding characterization contributed by John Wayne in one of the most vigorous roles of his successful career. Another important point in favor of audience reaction is the effective emotional impact of the personal dramas of several appealing characters.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: With the magnetic potency of John Wayne's popularity to give it impetus, "Sands of Iwo Jima" has the prospect of bigger draw than automatically attaches to war drama at this time. It can become an outstanding grosser—and will—if properly exploited.

Cast: John Wayne, John Agar, Adele Mara, Forrest Tucker, Wally Cassell, James Brown, Richard Webb, Julie Bishop, James Holden, Peter Coe, Richard Jaeckel, Bill Murphy, George Tyne, Hal Fieberling, John McGuire, Martin Milner, William Self. Credits: Associate producer, Edmund Grainger. Director, Allan Dwan. Screenplay, Harry Brown, James Edward Grant. Photographed by Reggie Lanning. Art director, James Sullivan. Music by Victor Young.

Plot: John Wayne, veteran Marine, is sergeant of a squad he commands and trains with unrelenting severity. There is conflict, especially with one boy—John Agar—whose father was a Marine colonel under whom Wayne served. The boy is bitter, rather than proud of the fact that he comes from a long line of soldiers. But he and others in the squad learn in battle that Wayne's insistence upon strict dicipline is in line with his devotion to the rules of the soldier. And those remaining in the squad after the heroic victory at Iwo Jima pay him final tribute when a sniper's bullet finds its fatal mark in his breast just as the last of the enemy are driven from the barren island.

Comment: This is a picture that dares to portray war in all its gory detail and with all the heroism that devolves upon the individuals who make up the disciplined mass of humanity which moves into enemy territory against the fury of the defenders' matching skill, clever plan and mighty armament. The very sincerity of "Sands of Iwo Jima" is its greatest asset as a motion picture—that and the almost perfect casting and effectively written personal drama and romance of appealing characters. John Wayne never did a more convincing characterization than that of the brittle-surfaced Marine who knows no creed but that of the soldier. But, unlike so many of the stereotyped tough sergeants of war pictures, this squad commander is flesh and blood as well as bone and sinew. For that reason Sergeant Striker measures up to the dramatic necessities as the centrifugal force in the conflicts that set man against man during the interludes between battle action. For another point of advantage, "Sands of Iwo Jima" has a script that holds itself down to the drama of a relatively small number of men and relates them to the panoramic holocaust of a major battle in World War II. Few war dramas have so successfully associated the personal lives of men in battle with their home ties and families as does this one, and these elements of clean romance and sentimental ties may prove an important factor in giving "Sands of Iwo Jima" more appeal to the feminine patronage than the war picture ordinarily enjoys. Allan Dwan's direction is thoroughly effective in developing the drama and the spectacle of his story. John Wayne's support is excellent, with a stand-out performance by Forrest Tucker as a veteran who has had his differences with the sergeant in the past; a good portrayal by John Agar of the soldier who is serving merely out of duty, and convincing work by James Brown, Wally Cassell; by Adele Mara and Julie Bishop in the two brief feminine roles, and all of the others. "Sands of Iwo Jima" is an ambitious essay in production and stands as a credit to its studio and sponsor—Republic Pictures.

'The Hasty Heart'

The climax in this adaptation of the stage play of the same name is reached when he who fears the hasty heart, a proud Scot soldier, learns that he is about to die and suspects that his companions in a Burma hospital have been guided only by pity in breaking through his reserve. It's unusual, moving, and strongly angled for women, as STR's London review indicated (Sept. 24, 1949), and fortunate in the selection for the central role of British newcomer Richard Todd, who "literally dominates the screen." Patricia Neal, as a nurse, and Ronald Reagan are among the group. Vincent Sherman produced and directed; release is through Warner Bros. 99 mins.

Cinderella

(Color by Technicolor)

RKO Disney Feature Cartoon 74 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Technically this is top-grade Disney, with gorgeous Technicolor, happy animation, some extravagant characters and a story that will appeal to all ages. Various animal characters introduce novelty and fantasy and charm approaching, though not quite equaling "Dumbo."

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A "must" for every theatre in the country, or in the world. Exhibitors have only to let the public know it is superb Disney animation of the age-old fairy-story romance that has enchanted humanity since its first telling.

Credits: Presented by Walt Disney. With the vocal talents of Ilene Woods, Eleanor Audley, Verna Felton, Claire Dubrey, Helene Stanley, Luis Van Rooten, Den Barclay, Rhoda Williams, James MacDonald. Special processes by UB Iwerks. Music editor, Al Teeter. Musical direction, Oliver Wallace and Paul Smith. Songs by Mack David, Jerry Livingston and Al Hoffman. Orchestration, Joseph Dubin. Story by William Peed, Ted Sears, Homer Brightman, Kenneth Anderson, Erdman Penner, Winston Hibler, Jerry Reeves and Joe Rinaldi. Effects animators, George Rowley, Joseph Meader and Jack Boyd. Directors, Wilfred Jackson, Hamilton Luske and Clyde Geronimi. Production supervision by Ben Sharpsteen.

Plot: The old nursery story of Cinderella, made a drudge by her stepmother and stepsisters, but winning the heart of the Prince at the ball and becoming his bride when hers is the only foot in the kingdom to fit the glass slipper which she left behind when she fled the ballroom at the stroke of twelve. There are various animal characters introduced, birds, mice, a dog, cat and horse, with consequent new action. Story is animated throughout with no in-person human characters.

Comment: Technically, this is top-grade Disney, with gorgeous Technicolor, clever and happy animation, some extravagant characters and a story that will appeal to all ages—the first Disney animated love romance with a special crook-of-the-finger to girls and youths in the middle and later teens. Parents and grandparents will enjoy it too, for the story of the drudge becoming a princess has been standard for storytellers for ages. Artistically, "Cinderella" does not quite equal "Dumbo" in charm, fantasy or originality, for in "Cinderella" the basic story, characters and action are limited by the very familiarity of the story. Too many liberties, therefore, could not be taken with the plot. The element of surprise is introduced through the animal characters, the blue birds, red birds, mice, the dog, cat and horse, all of which do valiant service in behalf of Cinderella—with the exception of Lucifer, the big lazy cat which shares the villains' roles with the stepmother and two stepsisters. This is legitimate screen and animation technique in expanding a short nursery story into a 74-minute screen divertissement. Animation and beauty of color photography has never been better in a Disney production and the expanded story interest is maintained, sometimes heightened, by the introduction of the extraneous animal characters. Cinderella herself is the cynosure of all eyes and attention throughout—a very human animated girl who steals into the heart by her nobility and long-suffering patience. Of the half-dozen songs in the feature, easily the best are Cinderella, So This is Love and A Dream Is a Wish Your Heart Makes. By and large "Cinderella" is superb Disney with an appeal as universal as the original story and a "must" for every theatre in the country, or in the world for that matter. Exhibitors have only to let the public know that the feature is top-grade Disney animation of the favorite childhood story that has gripped the imagination and sympathy of mankind, pictured in brilliant color.

Malaya

MGM Adventure Drama 98 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Slow-paced at the beginning, this story picks up speed and contains some exciting sequences of bold adventuring that will hold the interest of moviegoers and give them an evening of solid, often exciting, entertainment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The star-studded cast, a secret wartime operation and the destruction of the Japanese war vessels will pull in patrons who like action and adventure in strange lands. Should do good business in all theatres.

Cast: Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Valentina Cortesa, Sydney Greenstreet, John Hodiak, Lionel Barrymore, Gilbert Roland, Roland Winters, Richard Lee, Ian MacDonald, Tom Helmore. Credits: Produced by Edwin H. Knopf. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Screenplay by Frank Fenton, based on an original story by Manchester Boddy. Photography by George Folsey.

Plot: Adventure yarn about getting raw rubber out of Malaya under the noses of the Japanese occupying forces, with ex-newspaper man James Stewart and adventurer Spencer Tracy, freed from Alcatraz for the purpose by the government, aided by a Dutch saloon keeper of Penang, Malaya, and by the Navy.

Comment: Slow-paced at the beginning, this story picks up speed and contains some exciting sequences of bold adventuring that will hold the interest of moviegoers and give them an evening of solid and often exciting, entertainment. Work in all production departments has been effectively handled, making the story credible and suspenseful in the later sequences. It is reported to have been based on a hitherto secret naval operation during the war against the Japanese. Spencer Tracy gives one of his more picturesque portrayals as the adventurer, who resumes his often interrupted romance with Valentina Cortesa, singing girl in Sydney Greenstreet's Penang saloon, acting with debonair insouciance, with an iron fist underneath. James Stewart plays "straight" and seriously his role as the newspaper man who is out to help his country get much-needed rubber, and to avenge the death of his brother at the hands of the Japanese. Sydney Greenstreet's quiet acting of the Dutchman is another of his finely shaded characterizations. Miss Cortesa, while not strictly-speaking beautiful has a slowly-emerging charm that engages the interest. Lionel Barrymore, John Hodiak, Gilbert Roland and the others are good in lesser roles. "Malaya" should attract patrons who like action and adventure, and the star-studded cast won't hurt, either.

'Kenji Comes Home'

This 35-minute documentary, produced in Japan with an all native cast by Paul F. Heard for the Protestant Film Commission, is intended for release through the Religious Film Association Inc. for use in schools and churches, with the possibility of a more general commercial release considered. Narrator William Caufield conveys the story of Kenji, a Japanese soldier who returns home to a war-torn Japan now torn by political strife. In his struggles for orientation he finds two courses open, the communists who offer strong though violent leadership, and the church which represents human dignity and a democratic way of life. The picture ends with Kenji's problem unsolved, and the implication is that all Japan, represented by puzzled Kenji, stands at the point of decision. Capable performances by the principals and good narration give the film an undeniable power, and the view of present-day physical and political Japan is highly interesting. The film is well worth seeing.

Industry Men on Industry Problems

Just about every exhibitor I've visited in recent months has had a veritable Pandora's Box of problems to be examined, explained and/or, in instances, excused. Here, then, are drops of wisdom dropped from the great and near-great attending the Memphis Tri-State confab in October. Probably in these remarks, from far more qualified authority than this writer, some of you who read these weekly discourses will find the answer to some problem of particular moment to you or your theatre. Any and all are deserving of being filed away for future reference because you can't tell when the advice of personalities such as these will come in mighty handy.

On the much-mooted Federal Tax and the possibility of its reduction, Gael Sullivan of TOA expressed the opinion that there was hope for remission of the burden at the January session of Congress. He gave out with an interesting example in figures that might prove of great weight when you talk with the elected national legislators from your state and district. Here it is:

With movie attendance batting in the vicinity of 90 million weekly, it is determined that the average family patronizing our theatres pays Uncle Sam the sizable sum of $36 per year as a tax on its ticket purchases.

Mayhap a little investigation along this line concerning the attendance at your theatre would provide material for a screen trailer that would "get up the dander" of the customers who foot this bill. Even a petition, huh? It might be wise to remember that your Congressman should be admonished about letting any bill for theatre tax reduction be tied to measures opposed by strong lobby formations. The last bill got mixed up with the bill to eliminate the margarine tax and ran smack into the combined defense of the dairy states. Could be that the combo of butter and budget resulted in failure.

With film rental on the constant rise, just about every owner and manager is becoming more and more aware of concessions as a major factor in potential theatre profit and looking for ways and means of improving the "side" revenue. Alfred Starr, of the Bijou Amusement Co., Nashville, Tenn., gave out with some alluring information about the profits to be realized from an alliance of popcorn and screen corn and making the candy bar and hot dog a companion of the theatre arts. Today, as never before, the concession stand is the exhibitor's most loyal and potent ally in profitable distributor negotiations.

Suggest Old Process of Free Popcorn With Admission be Reversed

Starr told how one of his circuit's red ink operations had gotten into the black via the process of "dead-heading' the box-office and depending on the concession sales. He facetiously suggested that the old process of free popcorn with admission tickets be reversed and then, in all seriousness, recommended that TOA set up a committee to meet regularly to discuss concessions and ways and means of improving the revenue therefrom. He declared that through good merchandising methods theatres could increase their concession sales from $50 to $1,000 per week. He related details of an interview with one of B&K's major executives about the long argument in that circuit about whether or not their "showcase" Chicago Theatre should give popcorn a place on the menu. When one week's trial resulted in $4,000 gross sales, all arguments ended and the "kernels" held the fort.

Herman Levy, general counsel for TOA, threw light on two subjects that rate pretty close to tops on the exhibitor's puzzle sheet. Regarding the new wages-and-hours law, Levy explained that exhibitors doing business in one state only were not affected. Exhibitors doing business in two or more states would be required to comply with the letter of the Federal law in wages paid their office force and others handling reports or performing services in the general offices, warehouses, etc. for theatres located in other states. However, the service staffs, maintenance, cleaners, etc., of individual theatres in other states remain outside the law's scope.

He pointed out the failure of the Hollingshead Company to make their Drive-In patents hold good in court and the action of ASCAP in letting their New York appeal remain unheard. In connection with the ASCAP dispute, he referred to the possible results to exhibitors regard-

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Pointers on Projection and Sound

Whenever the auditorium is re-painted or redecorated, sound distribution at all frequencies needs to be re-checked very carefully. Not all the sound the patrons hear comes directly to them from the loudspeakers; a substantial percentage of it arrives via reflection from wall or ceiling surfaces. Any change in those surfaces, even simple painting, may alter their action toward sound of some frequency or of all frequencies, and thus affect the quality of the sound patrons hear. The service inspector can make the necessary check-up.

It is a good practice to operate every switch and volume control in the projection room each morning before turning on power, regardless of whether such switches and controls are normally used or not. The effect will be to wipe tarnish off the blades and contact points and prevent it from accumulating to an extent that may make the contact inoperative or noisy when it is needed.

Whenever it is necessary to solder or resolder internal sound equipment wiring, internal rectifier wiring, etc., future trouble may be prevented by placing a double thickness of newspaper in position to catch any hot solder that may drop during the procedure. Otherwise tiny droplets of solder, falling unnoticed, may create a short circuit at the time; or may be moved long afterward by vibration into a position where they can cause a permanent or intermittent short-circuit.

Wherever rubber is used for insulation in any electrical equipment, it is very important to protect that insulation against accidental seepage of lubricating oil. Oil decomposes rubber. Then the insulation can break down very unexpectedly, stopping the show. Finding and curing that kind of trouble may take so long that the theatre will be compelled to issue refunds. The sensible precaution against that possibility is to keep lubricating oil where it belongs.

In wiring up the projection room of a new theatre, or in making any wiring changes in an existing room, ultimate economy is always served by specifying conduit and conductors somewhat larger than are needed at the time. This means using material that is slightly more expensive; but the labor cost remains the same. And the next time some change is needed in that projection room, the oversize conduit will carry extra wires; the oversize wire will carry additional current, and a very great economy may thus be effected.

In some types of projection equipment, projector and/or lamphouse move slowly out of optical alignment because of vibration. When that happens, the quality of the show suffers. In theatres in which this fault is possible, the management should allow occasional overtime for accurate re-check of optical alignment and correction as needed.

Loew's Theatres in New York City are cooperating in the campaign to "Save Water." Three short trailers repeating the slogan are being inserted into each program; 22x28 cards appear in every Loew lobby; "Save Water" copy is being inserted in Loew's Movie Guide and on heralds and other advertising.

Movie Quiz Shorts Details Revealed

Details of the new shorts to be released by Movie Quiz Sales Company (STR, Dec. 10, p. 28) starting in February, 1950, were announced in Hollywood this week by Frank Moser, president.

The one-reel shorts are emceed and narrated by Grant Withers, who explains the procedure in handling the cards received by patrons. Each question has a point rating, thus lessening the possibilities of a tie in the final tally. When the reel ends, the usher collects the cards, leaving an identification stub with the patron. Scores are computed from a master key card in a few minutes, and the results are announced at the conclusion of another one-reel short.

Individual theatres will post local prizes, and the highest scorers of a 13-week series in each region of 250 houses will be brought to Hollywood to compete over an American Broadcasting Show for the final prizes. A total of $200,000 in merchandise will be awarded in each of four 13-week contests. A press book, mats and exploitation material are furnished to exhibitors subscribing to the Movie Quiz shorts.

Vaudeville Return Becomes Civic Event

When vaudeville returned to the boards of the Orpheum Theatre, Fox West Coast Oakland house, the event was turned into a civic enterprise with Mayor Clifford Rishell proclaiming "Vaudeville Week". Many stunts to evoke attention were utilized by the F-W staff including wide usage of banners and decorations. Contests, personality interviews are being utilized to keep the live-shows moving and before the public. Hanns Kolmar handles the publicity.

For there on the front page, right up at the top, was the headline: "Don Campbell, Rio Theatre Proprietor, Praised by Clyde."

Of course there was a reason for this front-page coverage, and Don must have realized it once he got over the initial shock. You see, he is an active participant in community affairs. Here is what he read:

"One of Clyde's most civic-minded citizens is Don Campbell, proprietor of the Rio Theatre. He has been highly commended by the citizens of Clyde for his cooperation and goodwill in all matters, even though his business of running a really first-class show in Clyde may suffer financially.

"Mr. Campbell has furnished loudspeaker equipment and brought a man from Abilene to give a play-by-play announcement of each game. He has closed his show during the ball games, and then so no one would miss seeing some scheduled picture, he has opened the theatre after the games.

"He has given liberally of his time and business to all the organizations of the town. The City of Clyde is extending him their thanks and appreciation in this public manner. May success attend you in every way.

"Mr. Campbell is bringing the very best in motion picture entertainment to Clyde. He has as good screen and sound equipment as can be found in theatres many times larger than the one here. Clyde is indeed fortunate to have a theatre such as the Rio."

There's only one way you can gain spontaneous press and public recognition such as has been accorded Campbell, and that is to devote yourself just as wholeheartedly to the affairs of your community as to the management of your theatre.

Ice-Cream Eating Contest

A tieup was made with a local dairy to supply the ice cream for an ice-cream-eating contest on the stage of the Capitol Theatre, Middletown, Conn., by Owner Sal Adorno, Sr. The dairy also sponsored the contest.

Jackson . . .

ing ASCAP's request to the Government for the privilege of collecting both synchronization and performance tribute from producers. If and when the producers agree to absorb the double assessment, Columbia's action on "Jolson Sings Again" may possibly set the pattern for rental demands. Columbia paid a flat fee of $50,000 on "Jolson" and are reported as asking 60 per cent deals for exhibition rights.

Henry Reeve, president of Texas Theatre Owners, drew attention to the "saturation demands" of flat rental contracts—predicted on top percentage figures of previous engagements—as eliminating all prospect of relief from exorbitant film costs. In comparing the long-ago to now, he drew the picture of the once free-for-a-pass help against the present high cost of incompetent labor and the absence of the "sleeper" from film release schedules. To illustrate the impossibility of the low-grossing ($700 per week and under) theatre to profitably operate under existing demands for 35 and 40 per cent rentals, he offered this figure picture:

"From the first 100 tickets at 35 cents admission—and frequently 100 represents close to mid-week total daily attendance—$7 goes for transportation, another $7 for Uncle Sam. At 35 per cent the film company extracts another $12.25, leaving $8.75 with which the exhibitor must pay rent, light, help, shorts, advertising."

Admitted that the first 100 customers is not a normal average of accounting, this still is a pretty good job of illustrating just what the low-grossing house is up against to make ends meet and leave a surplus in the bank. His observation about Uncle Sam's tax bill frequently exceeding exhibitor profit is well known to every little theatre operator and a mighty convincing argument to use on your Congressmen.

The 16-mm. situation drew fire from Gael Sullivan, Herman Levy, M. A. Lightman and others. Levy spotlighted the recently discovered activities of grocers, etc., on the Atlantic Coast who run midget shows in a back room, or on an adjoining lot at night, admitting the children or shoppers in return for the purchase of a candy bar or some other item. The practice is growing and digging into theatre receipts.

Treasury Dept. Best Ally

Sullivan contended that the best ally in such instances was the U. S. Treasury Department, which could be called upon to check and prosecute instances where there was a violation of the Federal tax laws. The Government has repeatedly ruled that admission—so far as the law is concerned—to any entertainment is the cost of any item required to be purchased as a condition to attendance. Since taxes start at 10 cents this lets the average candy bar out. But Sullivan contends that in any group of 200 children—the average attendance at these shindigs—there is certain to be many adults who would not have been admitted without patronage to the store. Maybe he's got something. At least it's worth trying, and visits from the Treasury Department officers with consequent examinations are considerable nuisance to any merchant.

M. A. Lightman came up with the best possible avenue of approach when he suggested that the big companies be asked to quit releasing features to the 16-mm. market—why not the smaller companies too? He acknowledges the practice to be beyond cure in such instances where the producers have sold their copyright and exercise no control over the product. But such lapses from the good business path, now that they've been pointed out, can be avoided in future. An outstanding example is that of Paramount which withdrew its films from the pint-sized arena when Leonard Goldenson showed the top brass that the 16-mm. department had been able to show a yearly profit of a meagre $200,000. Since that is approximately comparable to the profit of a good "B" picture, the amount was considered more of a hazard than asset and exclusive 35-mm. sales decided upon.

Knowing Paramount to be among the most aggressive of distributor sales organizations, it is difficult to believe that other majors are finding any great quantities of pay dirt in the 16-mm. field. Organized action such as M.A. suggests might serve to mitigate—they can't entirely eliminate—the ravages of the 16-mm. films on theatre box-offices. It's worth a try and should be on the agenda of Allied, TOA and all the state organizations.

Lester Cowan, Hollywood independent producer, gave those outfits who buy on a basis of participation in production costs something to think about. Cowan declared that he has managed to put some pretty good grossers— "GI Joe," as an example—on the market at costs well below the half-million mark. "Not Wanted" was brought in at $140,000. However, when he offered the film for distribution, the distribution heads cautioned against letting the low cost be known and insisted on padding the score to "build prestige" and influence opinion.

Paramount's Duke Clark, southern division sales manager; Francis Harmon, MPAA; 20th's Al Lichtman; Si Fabian, George Murphy and others pitched vocal barbs at the industry's failure to get attendance from the "past 40" crowd. Fabian got his figures down to the "past 30" nest. Believe me you that all the reports are mighty discouraging and, without getting out my pencil and paper, I'd say that the composite of figures given shows that we are, at best, only getting about 33 per cent of the attendance potential.

This is one place where the ball is right in the middle of the exhibitor's lap. The score is pretty disgraceful and I kinda take it personally because for the past three or four years I've been haggling and nagging, while, at the same time providing ways and means of reviving the interest of that immense gang who "just got tired of movies." The national campaigns of producer-distributor origin are directed to all groups and ages. The coverage is—on most of the better pictures—close to saturation. But the trouble is that the local exhibitor has grown to depend on such "assist" media and fails to exert the necessary pressure when the picture is playing his theatre. When Duke Clark brought out figures to show that "Blue Skies"—which was given a "full coverage" national ad campaign—failed to attract 25 per cent of potential and that attendance fell below 15 and 20 per cent in some states, it's time to point the finger of blame—yes, and shame too—right in the exhibitor's kisser.

Analyze Your Community

Why not set down tonight, fellows, and analyze your own community? Find out who and where this strata of potential patronage exists and then figure a way of getting them back in the box-office lines. It can be done, and I wish I had space to elaborate on the ABCs of going about the job. But you can figure it out if you take the time—and it's well worth the time.

There was no end of comment on competitive bidding, the probability of divorcement resulting in higher prices for films and thereby becoming a bust rather than boom so far as the independent exhibitor is concerned. the prospect of the newly organized exhibitor's production company as a palliative for this threat, and no end of other matters of interest to all of you. I'll try to get around to them all later, but right now my blond biscuit-baker is jingling the Christmas shopping bells, so I'll have to call quits.

Big Brother Show For K.C. Orphans

"Big Brother Day" carried out at the Missouri Theatre in Kansas City recently proved to be one of those promotion projects which develops goodwill for all connected with it. The plan was carried out by Lawrence Lehman, manager of the Kansas City link in the RKO circuit, and the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with George Wilson, president, and Preston Russell, chairman of the event, cooperating.

The theatre, showing "Ichabod and Mr. Toad," played host to about 1,000 orphaned and underprivileged boys at a special Saturday morning show. The JCCs laid plans for gathering up the boys from 21 social agencies in greater Kansas City, and arranged with other firms and agencies to make the program one of complete enjoyment for them.

The Public Service Company cooperated by providing busses to deliver the boys from the orphanages and agencies to the theatre and return. The National Biscuit Company furnished cookies for all, and Jianas Brothers Green Mill Candy Co. furnished candy. Lehman then played host to the boys and their escorts for the show. Five cartoons were added to the regular schedule as special entertainment for the show.

'Exhibitors Know What People Want'—Marshall

"Pictures should be made for the exhibitor, not the movie-maker," declares Director George Marshall. "Exhibitors know what people want. They are the ones who have the finger on the box-office pulse."

Marshall, who recently completed Bob Hope's "Fancy Pants" at Paramount ("I feel it is an exhibitor's natural") is now at RKO Radio directing Irene Dunne in "Come Share My Love," which, he says, "will take advantage of her genius for light comedy."

Miss Dunne and Marshall joined in stating that the picture should prove to be a personal triumph for each of them. Marshall was enthusiastic about the script which, to the actress, represents the end of a patient year-long search.

"I wanted a change of pace," she said. "While my last three pictures all had a certain lightness, and 'Life With Father' was essentially pure comedy, there is almost inevitably a feel of heaviness about a period picture. I wanted something on the dashing side . . . definitely something modern. . . . . Besides, to be purely feminine about this, I wore hoop-skirts for 'Anna and the King of Siam,' bustles for 'Life With Father,' and heavy padding all over for 'I Remember Mama.' I wanted to get out of those trappings and into some luxurious modern clothes. I waited for a story because I felt I had to wait. 'Come Share My Love' is the right script for me."

George Marshall

For Marshall, the picture fulfills his idea of what a picture should offer the exhibitor and the moviegoer.

Goldsmith Launching Gloria Film Productions

With Associate Producer Tony Landi at the Algonquin, New York, seeking new talent and story properties, I. G. Goldsmith is now launching his new company, Gloria Film Productions. First to go before the cameras in Hollywood will be Vera Caspary's "Three Husbands," a romantic comedy which Edward Eliscu is adpating for the screen and which Irving Reis will direct. Second production of the company will be "The Dungeon," an original screen story by Goldsmith and Edwin Rolfe.

Aside from scanning the Broadway plays, Landi, a brother of the late Elissa Landi, is conferring with publishers to obtain rights to forthcoming novels which may make good screen material. Goldsmith has previously produced "The Stars Look Down," "Hatter's Castle" and "Bedelia." He has not yet arranged for the release of his Gloria productions.

Ayres to Co-Direct, Star In Allen-Dembow Film

Lew Ayres has been signed by Irving Allen, producing partner in Allen-Dembow productions, to star in and co-direct (with Allen) "New Mexico," a screenplay by Max Trell, which will go into production in January.

The picture, to be photographed in Ansco Color, will be the first of a group to be made by Allen-Dembow for United Artists release. It is a western of the period following the Civil War.

Lippert Starts Four Films in December

Lippert Productions has placed four features before the cameras this month. They are "Everybody's Dancin'," "West of Brazos," "Western Pacific Agent" and "Fast on the Draw."

The studio has scheduled 33 pictures to be made between June, 1949, and June, 1950. By Jan. 1, 19 of the 33 will have been completed. Last year, Lippert produced 16 during the full year.

"OKAY BOYS, TAKE THE BOWS, BUT THE NEXT ACT IS GOOD TOO!"

Those two smart performers "BATTLEGROUND" and "ADAM'S RIB" definitely rate the cheers and huzzahs!

But there's a very cute number waiting in the wings with whom those record-busting boys are going to have to share the lime-light!

Yes, indeed, this kid's a honey!

She's breaking in her act at Radio City Music Hall and in the first 4 days she set an all-time non-holiday record. Saturday and Sunday grosses are highest in M-G-M records. And this is the pre-holiday lull!

Isn't it interesting that M-G-Musicals have set a standard for the industry. The folks know that those Technicolor glamor shows from M-G-M are tops, as for instance "Take Me Out To The Ball Game," "In The Good Old Summertime," "Barkleys of Broadway," just to mention a few.

"ON THE TOWN" is Leo's way of saying Happy Holidays because it's chockful of joy and a foretaste of the happiness waiting for you with "M-G-M Nifty in 1950"!

Competitive Market

As progress in divorcement is made, exhibitors are beginning to realize that a more advantageous market in pictures will result from keener competition among the distributors.

Under the old order, distributors were assured a large segment of their revenue from cross-deals with circuits they controlled. Now all potential playing time has to be sold separately and, as divorcement creates two or more customers where only one existed before, it is going to be up to the seller to go out after the business.

This should make all of the Sacred Cows very happy because they can see that companies failing to advertise their pictures strongly through the trade press may find a diminishing interest in the product.

The attitude of too many company executives toward trade advertising is a most astounding one. They harp on the old chestnut about "too many trade papers" and that too much has to be spent to do a good trade advertising job. Soberly analyzed, that is a lot of hog wash. Maybe it would hold some water if the distributors were merchandising some gimmicks for the five-and-dime counters. But they are, instead, marketing a product in which the investment is anywhere from a quarter of a million to two million dollars and—on sad occasions—even more.

What they are really doing is trying to save a few bucks to offset their own too-high production costs.

The present warped viewpoint toward trade advertising hasn't the slightest connection with "too many trade papers." It was born of a period of hysteria and penny-pinching induced by a case of the jitters resulting from a chain of circumstances spearheaded by the loss of foreign revenue. According to old reliable Dame Rumor, it was not advertising and sales executives, but financial wizards who dictated the cuts. It made them look good on paper—like real f. w's., maybe. But what it did to the business is something else.

Perhaps the coming of a more competitive market will revitalize the sales end of this industry and make it necessary for distributors to put on a real pitch to get screen time for their product.

Leaders of the Industry

Once again SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW presents its annual check-up on pictures and stars during the past season with the annual edition of Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry. It is Part Two of this issue and speaks for itself. As in the past we want to express our sincere appreciation to the theatremen who cooperated by registering their votes in the selection of the Leaders.

'Francis' for the G.I.s

There is something reminiscent of old-time showmanship in the current plans of Universal-International for their forthcoming production of "Francis."

One of the industry's finest efforts was the world premiere put on in many theatres of war where American soldiers could see the latest and best films.

U-I is reviving this idea—but in spades. In addition to premiering this great laugh attraction in Berlin for the U. S. occupation troops, they are sending all of the stars of the picture along to entertain in person.

The entire project measures up to smart showmanship that will give plus angles to "Francis" at the box-office and prestige for the industry as a whole.

'Twelve O'Clock High'

Despite all the proof to the contrary, the U. S. film industry still hears the cries of the carping critics who howl about the lack of "vitality" in pictures. Well, let them take the time to see a picture which cuts through every cliche, all obvious theatrical tricks and cleaves sharp to the outlines of one of the most dramatic military developments of World War II—daylight precision bombing. Let them see "Twelve O'Clock High."

A picture bearing the name of Darryl F. Zanuck as producer is always an event in the film industry. His latest—"Twelve O'Clock High"—adheres to the tradition in that it is a picture vibrant with the qualities of artistic and dramatic growth which have characterized many works by Producer Zanuck, who here brings to the screen a sharply etched portrayal of a military tactic conceived, and executed in terms of destruction to the enemy, by the "brass" and flying personnel of the American Air Forces.

The Holiday Spirit

In keeping with the occasion, STR extends to its army of friends in the motion picture industry, a sincere wish that they and their families may enjoy a most Merry Christmas loaded with good health and good cheer.

WHAT'S NEWS
In the Film Industry This Week

EXHIBITION

'Twas the night before Christmas and all through the house
Not a creature was a stirring not even a mouse . . .

These lines from Moore's rhymes, canonized by repetition over the years, fell with a truthful but sour note on many an exhibitor ear this season, as the worst pre-Christmas business period made itself felt with such effect that many more houses than usual were closed on Christmas eve. The situation was highlighted dramatically in Columbus, Ohio, where the number of neighborhood theatres which closed, not for the "night before Christmas" but for an entire week, rose to 28. However, some alert showmen who wanted to go after the trade, found that they got somewhere. In San Francisco the Golden Gate Circuit came up with a novel idea where one group of houses sold organizations the thought to hire the theatre for their Christmas parties, pointing out that they could get a feature and a cartoon for entertainment, have a place to party—and wouldn't have to clean up afterward!

The general outlook for business, too, was improving, with exhibitors seeing better product on the way and a little more oomph being noticed with exploitation, this side of the picture being dramatized by the circussy opening of "Samson and Delilah" in both the New York Paramount and Rivoli after a giant ballyhoo campaign.

And the exhibitor front continued active this week, with Paramount's new organizational set up, which takes place Jan. 1 as a result of a consent decree which splits exhibition from distribution-production,—alone accounting for a great deal of movement. Officers of the new United Paramount Theatres, it will surprise no one to learn, will be President Leonard H. Goldenson, Vice-President Walter Gross, Secretary-treasurer Robert H. O'Brien. Meanwhile out in Arizona, Paramount Arizona Theatres, which takes over the houses Paramount receives as a result of the Paramount-Nace split, another consent decree action got under way headed by President George H. Aurelius, with Jesse Chinich as head booker-buyer.

United Artists Theatres, on the other hand, was busy expanding, taking over a half interest in United California Theatres (Mike Naify enterprises). In Connecticut, exhibitors had to give up New Year's Eve shows because they would run over into the hours on Sunday when the state says movies can't. In Los Angeles, National Theatres President Spyros Skouras, discounting reports that he had abandoned the idea of theatre television network which would bring attractions to Fox West Coast theatres through a proposed microwave relay system, was unable to say when the set-up would get under way (since it requires Federal Communications Commission approval). Skouras, back from Europe, said the British situation would not improve until Great Britain lightened her amusement tax.

And in the east, an exhibitor was telling a producer what to do about pictures and a distributor was telling an exhibitor what to do about building stars. Exhibitor Sidney Lust, Washington, D. C., circuit operator, wants better films, lower production costs and more exploitation assistance for neighborhood theatres, Distributor Vice-President William A. Scully (Universal) was telling exhibitors how important stars were at the box-office, how producers were trying to build new faces and when they did the exhibitor had to get on the job on the local level and help sell the public on said new faces.

DISTRIBUTION

Paramount will introduce a new sales plan in Chicago, Jan. 1—when it divorces production and distribution from exhibition—which will open up product to bidding but which apparently will not open the bids to those who bid and will not require Paramount to accept the highest bid. The plan divides the town into 16 zones, the first of which is the Loop, where any house may bid for first-run and where only one first-run will be granted. First-runs in the other 16 are open to bids, again with only one first-run granted, while subsequent runs can be either bid or sold by other methods on a multiple run basis. (P. 4)

Universal moved Charles J. Feldman from the post of western sales manager to that of eastern sales manager to replace Fred Meyers, resigned, and promoted District Manager Foster Blake to western sales manager, throwing Blake's former district into that of Portland District Manager Barney Ross. Columbia opened a new department to handle foreign films under direction of Morris Goodman.

LITIGATION

The Tennessee Supreme Court this week ruled in the celebrated "Curley" censor suit, upholding the lower court on the point that Producer Hal Roach and Distributor United Artists, being out of state corporations which had not complied with Tennessee law were not entitled to sue the Shelby County Censor board and the city of Memphis over a censor ban on the picture. The court further ruled that since both plaintiffs were not exhibitors, their freedom of speech rights (a point made by them under the federal constitutional provisions) were not violated, and bluntly told Memphis Censor Lloyd T. Binford that he had no right to ban a picture because there were Negroes in the cast. (P. 5)

The Justice Department this week asked the Oklahoma federal court to compel the Griffith circuit to divest itself of 93 of its 224 theatres within three years and for an order which would limit its operations. (P. 6)

In Philadelphia federal court Masterpiece Productions sued United Artists for $750,000, claiming that it had not received an accounting on 38 pictures which it had purchased for distribution.

TAXATION

The taxation committee of the Committee of Motion Picture Organizations Tuesday elected Abram F. Myers its permanent chairman and settled down to a long fight for the repeal of federal amusement taxes with a campaign expected to arouse interest at local levels and another expected to gain support of the House Ways and Means Committee, which enacts budget legislation.

Bidding a Must In Paramount's New Chicago Plan

Paramount's new sales plan for the Chicago area, which goes into effect Jan. 1, calls for competitive bidding in each of the 16 zones which comprise that territory but apparently does not require Paramount to accept the highest bid or to make its bids public, trade sources indicated this week.

While Paramount officials in New York were not available for comment on these phases of the new set-up, it was further learned that all of Chicago's 13 Loop theatres have been grouped in one zone, and that any of them may bid for first-run in that zone though only one first-run will be granted

The other 15 zones, which include the neighboring communities of Gary and Hammond, will have a first zone run and subsequent runs. Any theatre may bid for first-run in the zone where again only one such run will be granted, while all subsequent-runs will be on a multiple-run basis, also subject to bid. Though Paramount has made up a list of theatres it believes eligible for first-runs, this apparently does not preclude any other house in the same zone from entering the bidding. The basis of acceptance apparently will not be the highest bid but the bid which Paramount considers will offer the greatest revenue.

The plan, which starts off concurrently with Paramount's divorce of its exhibition interests in accordance with the consent decree, is said to be experimental. First pictures to be offered will be "The Heiress" for Loop first-run and "The Great Lover" for first-run in the other 15 zones.

NLRB Orders Publicists' Vote

The National Labor Relations Board in Washington, D. C. this week ordered an election to be held in the major studios to determine whether the publicists are to be represented by the Screen Publicists Guild, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes' Motion Picture Publicists Association, Local 818, or neither.

The board rejected a petition by the Guild that the election should apply to independent producers and limited it to members of the Association of Motion Picture Producers (Johnston office). The reason appears to be that while bargaining relations between unions and an association have been recognized in Hollywood, there has been no such bargaining between the union and more than one employer association acting as a unit.

Fire Damages Gem

Fire of undetermined origin which occurred after the theatre had closed, this week destroyed the projection room and damaged the Gem at Covington, Tenn., 50 miles north of Memphis.

No New Year's Eve-ers

Connecticut's motion picture theatres won't run midnight New Year's Eve shows this year because of the law requiring theatres to remain closed until 1 P.M. on Sundays. As New Year's Eve falls on a Saturday this year and the shows would run over on Sunday, some theatres are scheduling New Year's shows instead which will not conflict with the law.

Admission Levy Groups Dig In For Long Fight

The taxation and legislation committee of the Council of Motion Picture Organizations met in New York Tuesday, elected National Allied President Abram F. Myers permanent chairman and dug in for a long-drawn fight to repeal admission taxes.

Abram Myers

The committee designated work for sub-committees, to be appointed, and mapped out a three point program:

1) To unite the entire industry — production, distribution, exhibition — on a regional and local basis in a nation-wide fight on the federal tax.

2) To spearhead this attack with a concentrated drive on the House Ways and Means Committee, which meets after Congress convenes early in Jauary, and where finance measures, usually originate.

3) To campaign throughout the nation against box-office taxes,—federal, state and municipal.

Now, or . . .

Myers, who had held the post of temporary chairman before being appointed permanently, told a press conference that unless the industry could do something about eliminating the federal tax "at this session of Congress, it may be a long time before it has a chance again."

"We recognize the fact," he continued, "that this all-industry job cannot be completed over night We plan for a long, carefully-detailed campaign stretching over many weeks."

Myers praised the cooperation the committee had received to date. The financing of the tax fight, it was reported, would be on the basis of voluntary contributions and would have nothing to do with the funds the Compo plans to raise eventually for the all-industry public relations program.

Present at Tuesday's meeting were Myers, Oscar A. Doob, Jack Bryson, Jay Emanuel, Julian Brylawski, Morton Sunshine, Henderson Richey, Gael Sullivan. On the committee but not present because of the distance they have to travel were Art Arthur, Carter Barron, Marvin L. Faris, and Rotus Harvey.

Duals Enter 3 B&K Downtown Houses

Three of Balaban and Katz' Chicago loop houses were playing double bills this week, leaving only the Chicago and the State Lake on a single feature basis. The three duallers were the Roosevelt, United Artists and the Garrick.

In the neighborhood area Irving Davis is trying out triple bills at his Bugg in an effort to boost business.

Binford Sings New Tune; High Court Rules on 'Curley'

Will Drop Ban on Negro Actors, Censor Says As Tenn. Tribunal Decides

Memphis Censor Lloyd T. Binford this week declared he would no longer censor motion pictures which had Negroes in the cast, a reversal of a long-established policy, which he announced shortly after the Tennessee Supreme Court handed down its ruling on the "Curley" appeal.

The high court, sitting in Knoxville for the current term, Saturday rendered a decision in "Curley" which while a defeat for Producer Hal Roach, and distributors United Artists, at the same time appears to have officially limited Binford's actions.

The high court agreed with the lower court that Roach and United Artists being out of state corporations and not complying with the laws of Tennessee were not entitled to sue the Shelby County Censor board, of which the 80-year old Binford is chairman, and the city of Memphis. It was on this point that the case was thrown out in the lower court.

The high court also declared that since neither Roach nor United Artists were exhibitors, their claim that their rights of freedom of expression, guaranteed by the first Amendment of the U. S. Constitution, and the Fourteenth Amendment, which makes the granting of these rights mandatory on the states, was not violated.

But in ruling the high court commented that the Shelby County Board of Censors "had no authority to disapprove the picture 'Curley' because of the presence of Negro actors in the cast."

It was shortly after this ruling that Binford, who has long controlled the three-man censor board, said in an interview:

"We will have to stop banning pictures with Negroes in the cast."

Handwriting on Wall?

That the aged censor may have been moving in this direction is indicated by the fact that he recently permitted showing of "Home of the Brave," "Intruder in the Dust," and "Pinky." He had however, banned "Lost Boundaries," which was taken to indicate that in the main he was sticking to his beliefs that pictures which showed Negroes in relations with whites under conditions not existing in the south, would not pass.

Trouble

Apparently this had caused the trouble with "Curley" when Roach refused to cut a scene of some Negro children in a white school. Binford claimed that such scenes were not representative of the south and Roach counterclaimed that the scene represented Los Angeles, not the south. It was over this that Roach and United Artists backed by the Motion Picture Association of America, finally went into a state court and sued.

'Curley' Status Thought Doubtful

Just what status Saturday's rule by the Tennessee Supreme Court gives "Curley" was not known in New York late this week.

Whether Roach and United Artists could return to Binford and ask once more for a censor seal in view of the high court's opinion is problematical. True the high court apparently tied Binford's hands when it came to barring pictures with Negro casts, but it also affirmed the lower court's view that neither of the defendants were entitled to seek court aid in Tennessee.

And if "Curley" were to get a license that apparently would close the case and leave the question of censorship unsettled.

Some lawyers thought that both Roach and United Artists had an out in that they might appeal their claim that their rights were being

Stage Play Plus Movie Is New Dual Policy on Trial at Brandt's Selwyn

A double-bill policy consisting of an actual stage play presented by live actors plus a motion picture was scheduled to go into its tryout run at William Brandt's Selwyn Theatre on West 42nd Street off of Broadway, Friday.

The theatre, built for legitimate but in recent years housing double features, will present the new policy on a five-a-day policy with a minimum admission of 35 cents and a maximum which will be determined by the popularity of the experiment.

With 'Respectful Prostitute'

The first scheduled bill consisted of the late Broadway hit, "The Respectful Prostitute," whose short length makes it ideal for the combined bill, and Republic's "Flame of Youth." Three sets of principals will be used alternately for the stage play in order to provide proper rest periods.

The length of the runs have not been determined.

Other plays which Brandt may try if, the first is successful, are "Behind Red Lights," "The Last Mile," "Sailor Beware," "Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath," and "School for Brides."

Maybe That's It

Showers of religious films at churches may find it hard going when it comes to competing with the neighborhood show, even when they call in Mickey Mouse to help—that is if the following incident Jack Brittain tells is typical. Brittain, assistant manager of the San Francisco Coliseum, claims a small boy approached him and said he preferred going to the Coliseum because at the church showings all he ever saw was "Mickey Mouse and St. Peter."

Drop 93 Theatres, U. S. Asks Court to Order Griffith Chain

The Justice Department this week was on record as seeking to have the federal court of Oklahoma City order the Griffith circuit to divest itself of 93 theatres within three years.

Two chains are involved in the request, contained in a proposed decree arising out of the Government anti-trust suit against the Griffith interests. They are Griffith Consolidated Theatres and Theatre Enterprises, Inc., the latter of which is not a defendant in the suit, though the Government has asked the court to have it included. The two chains, combined, now operate 224 houses in the southwest, exclusive of holdings in Oklahoma City and Tulsa.

In a proposed final judgment filed last Friday, the Justice Department asked the court to require Consolidated to dispose of 45 theatres in Texas and Oklahoma, and Theatre Enterprises to give up 48 in Texas and New Mexico.

On Again

The suit, whic his based on monopolistic allegations, is being reheard by the federal court on the order of the U. S. Supreme Court which overruled the lower court's original judgment of no monopoly.

Under the decree proposed by the Justice Department, one-third of the theatres would have to be sold each year.

In addition the defendants would be prohibited from licensing pictures in competitive towns for five years after the entry of the judgment, unless the pictures had first been offered to competitive exhibitors and rejected.

The theatres to be sold would include all those "acquired as a result of abuse of the defendants' circuit-buying power," plus one theatre in each "closed" town which might remain after the first group had been divested.

Say No Competition

At present Consolidated is said to have no competition in 25 of 47 locations where it operates, and its existing theatre competition, exclusive of Oklahoma City and Tusla, is limited to 34 theatres. Theatre Enterprises is said to have no competition in 40 of the 47 towns in which it is operating and its existing competition is said to be confined to 11 theatres.

The proposed decree further would separate the corporate defendants from any connection, either financial, common officers, directors or employes. Each defendant would have to license pictures entirely on his own behalf, on the "theatre-by-theatre picture-by-picture basis" and asking for discriminatory terms or conditions not available to other exhibitors would be forbidden. Finally the defendants would be forbidden from acquiring any new theatres unless authorized by the court after it had been satisfied that the new acquisitions would not restrain competition.

Included among the theatres the Government is asking Consolidated to sell are the drive-ins at Berger and Midland, which the Justice Department claims were "acquired for the purpose of eliminating the competitive exhibitors there."

Bidding Won't Do It

In its proposed decree the Justice Department rejects the contention that competitive bidding changed the situation under which the alleged monopoly had grown.

"There can be no doubt," the Government declared, "that the purchasing power possessed by Griffith Consolidated and Theatre Enterprises is much greater than that of any of their competitors, and that under the system of competitive bidding (they) will be able to continue to preempt the product of the major distributors and that their competitors will only be able to obtain such product as the defendants do not see fit to purchase.

"Griffith Consolidated includes the Griffith Amusement Company, one of the three original defendants, which it absorbed in 1945 and 1946. The other two corporations named in the 1939 suit—R. E. Griffith Theatres and Westex Teatres, were acquired by Theatre Enterprises in 1945 and 1946. . . . The Government has asked the court to make Theatre Enterprises a defendant in this case. But the court has not yet acted on this motion."

Maybe

Asked by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW whether similar action would be taken to include theatres formerly part of the Griffith chain but recently sold to a group of former employes, a Justice Department spokesman said the only information they had of the sale so far was what they read in the trade papers. It seemed probable, he added, that the Government would treat the new set up as it did Theatre Enterprises—that is by asking the court to include it as a party to the suit—unless it can be proved that no chain of affiliation exists between it and the Griffith interests.

Sinatra Breaks Record

According to reports in the Connecticut amusement trade, the recent two-day personal appearance of Frank Sinatra, the Hollywood-singer-actor, at the State Theatre, Hartford, Conn., broke all existing house box-office records. The Sinatra vaudeville show, it was said, took in more than $18,000, thereby smashing all previously-set records for receipts. A previous record high, it was noted, was set sometime ago by a vaudeville show featuring Arthur Godfrey.

Goldenson To Head Paramount Theatres

Leonard H. Goldenson, present head of Paramount's theatre operations will be president of the new United Paramount Theatres, which takes over the Paramount theatre properties on Jan. 1, 1950 as a result of the consent decree Paramount reached with the Justice Department in the Government anti-trust suit.

Leonard Goldenson

Officers who will serve with Goldenson in the new company are Vice-President Walter W. Gross, Secretary-Treasurer Robert H. O'Brien, Comptroller Si Siegel, Assistant Treasurer J. L. Brown.

Directors are: Goldenson, O'Brien, John A. Coleman, Walter P. Marshall, William T. Kilborn, E. Chester Gersten.

Balaban Follows Balaban

John Balaban succeeded his brother Barney Balaban as president of the Balaban and Katz circuit Monday. The move is in accordance with the principles of the Paramount consent decree, which separates exhibition from production-distribution. While the B&K circuit will remain as part of United Paramount Theatres, its former president, Barney Balaban, will stay in production and distribution, remaining as head of the new Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Aurelius Heads New Paramount Arizona Circuit

George H. Aurelius will head the newly-formed Arizona Paramount Company by which Paramount takes its split of the theatres it formerly held with Harry L. Nace and Harry L. Nace, Jr., in Arizona, Leonard H. Goldenson, head of Paramount's theatre operations, announced Monday.

The split, which is the result of the consent decree Paramount reached with the Justice Department in the Government anti-trust suit, gives Paramount the following properties; the Orpheum, Palms, Rialto, Strand, Aero, Ramona, Studio, in Phoenix, and the Paramount Catalina and State in Tucson.

Aurelius, who will headquarter in Phoenix, will have associated with him: Jesse Chinich, head booker and buyer; Dane Roehrig, Paramount city manager, in the same post at Tucson; Maurice J. Pyle, former manager of the Palms, now head of the warehouse department. The managerial set-up is: A. G. Pickett, remains manager of the Orpheum; E. L. Hapner, moving from assistant of the Orpheum to manager of the Aero; William Sale, formerly manager, Rialto, to the Palms as manager, with Donald Johns, formerly of the Strand, moving to the Rialto and being succeeded by A. V. Polley, formerly of the Aero. Jose Requena and Harold Stetson remain as managers of the Ramona and Studio, respectively.

In Tucson, Will Eyles is manager of the Paramount, R. L. Hanson, manager of the Catalina, and P. Tannous, manager of the State.

The Naces have resumed operating their own properties.

United Artists Theatres Buys Into Calif. Circuit

United Artists Theatres, which recently changed from an investment company into an operating unit, this week was reported to have bought a 50 per cent interest in United California Theatres.

Terms of the agreement, which was reached by Joseph M. Schneck of UA and Michael Naify, president of the circuit, which operates 100 houses in California and Nevada, were not divulged. However, it was reported that there would be no changes in policy of UCT, which operates the Golden State, T&D, Jr., Enterprises, and San Francisco Theatres, Inc.

The circuit also has six drive-ins with others planned.

LONDON observations

by Jock MacGregor

Sir Sidney Clift had no enviable task replying to the Right Hon. Anthony Eden's toast to the industry at the Annual Dinner and Dance of the London Branch of the CEA. The deputy leader of the opposition was in terrific form and was a very popular choice among exhibitors. Over 500 attended and applauded vigorously.

Jock MacGregor

While giving no lead on what the Tory policy on the film industry would be, Mr. Eden made it abundantly clear it was strongly opposed to a state ownership or control of the industry. Having mentioned that figures showed that every Briton, including children, visit the cinema an average of thirty times a year, he stated, "It is of the utmost importance that kinema ownership and managements should remain in free and competitive hands."

Sir Sydney claimed that so long as the Treasury takes £38,000,000 out of the £108,000,000 paid at the box-offices annually, there can never be a healthy British film industry.

"For over 30 years," he continued, "I regarded myself as a showman, but I gave that up when the Board of Trade started to book my films for me."

Theo Fligelstone, vice-chairman, proposed the toast of the guests, in a concise, pointed and extremely well delivered speech.

The evening which gave the branch its biggest attendance since the war and was so oversubscribed that 250 applicants had to be turned down, was once again brilliantly organized by Arthur Taylor.

Firmly established as the leading sounding board of opinion is the annual forum organized by the Kine Weekly. This year, it was attended by Sir Philip Warter, Sir Alexander King, Sir Alexander Korda, Sir Michael Balcon, Sir Henry French, J. Arthur Rank, Sam Eckman, R. P. Baker, Arthur Dent, Randolph Richards and W. R. Fuller.

The debate which stemmed mainly from the Plant committee's recommendations for reforms in exhibition and distribution, was lively and revealing. Korda was in a particularly talkative mood and rose to the bait when Warter asked how he could have got more out of "The Third Man." He claimed that in Greater London the renter received £35,000 and the producer £25,000. He believed he should have received £100,000 for this area.

Warter stressed that the whole basis of the industry is people going to the cinema each week and that if you kept a picture on indefinitely in London it would be a disaster.

Sam Eckman supported Warter on this and could not see any advantage of a free London market. He concurred that irrespective of where films came from, they could not stand up to 60, or 70 or 80 or 100 concurrencies for longer than a week. The industry's system of releases must be based on the majority of offerings and not just on "The Third Man."

How much suspense can a motion picture hold?

Minn. Judge Rules Lotto Illegal

Lotto games, known by various trade names, are illegal under the Minnesota state anti-gambling law, District Court Judge Paul W. Guilford ruled in Minneapolis this week.

Judge Guilford's ruling may open the way for theatremen to attack the Minneapolis city ordinance, which permits such gambling when sponsored by charitable, fraternal or benevolent groups. In fact, North Central Allied President Ben Berger indicated that such action was contemplated, declaring that the games have "been draining dollars off our box-office."

'Thief' Heads Board's 10 Best

The Exceptional Films Committee of the National Board of Review this week selected "The Bicycle Thief," Italian import, as the best film of 1949 and cited its director, Vittorio de Sica, as the best director of the year.

Other selections were in the order named:

Film Document's "The Quiet One;" MGM's "Intruder in the Dust;" Paramount's "The Heiress;" AFE's French-made "The Devil in the Flesh;" Eagle Lion's British-made "Quartet;" Rosselini's "Germany Year Zero;" United Artists' "Home of the Brave;" 20th Century-Fox's "Letter to Three Wives;" Sir Alexander Korda's "Fallen Idol."

Acting honors went to Ralph Richardson for his work in "The Fallen Idol" and "The Heiress," as the best performance of 1949, while meritorious citations were awarded Gerard Philippe for "Devil in the Flesh," Lamberto Maggiornia and Enzo Staiola for their work in "The Bicycle Thief," and Pierre Fresnay for "Monsieur Vincent." Graham Greene was cited for the script on "Fallen Idol."

Conn. Showmen Face Wage Law

Connecticut theatres this week faced the possibility that they might be brought under the state's widened minimum wage law as Gov. Chester Bowles and State Labor Commissioner John J. Eagan agreed on a resurvey of four fields of employment affecting approximately 150,000 workers.

Included in these four fields are some 8,500 employes in theatres, shooting galleries, bowling alleys and other places of "recreation" who are said to average $19.90 a week.

Gov. Bowles, unable to get a 75-cent minimum wage law from the legislature, asked Eagan to cover more employes by minimum wage orders, which the state's Minimum Wage Board is empowered to make effective by order.

28 Columbus Houses Shutter Before Xmas

The number of neighborhood theatres in Columbus, Ohio, which closed during the pre-Christmas week to beat the slump, had risen to 28 this wek with many scheduled to be closed on Christmas Eve.

The 28 included the Arlington, Avondale, Beechwold, Boulevard, Champion, Cleve, Columbia, Dixie, Drexel, Empress, Esquire, Garden, Grandview, Hollywood, Hudson, Indianola, Lane, Linden, Livingston, Main, Northern, Old Trail, Parsons, Pythian, University, Victor and Westmont.

The J. Real Neth Theatres—the Eastern, Markham, Bexley, Clinton, Cameo, Lincoln, and the State; the Perkas-operated houses—Ritz, Rivoli and Oal, and the World, the Little of the H & S Group, the Southern, Uptown, Majestic, and the Wilbur and the Fifth Avenue, remained open.

MPAA Adds Advice Unit for Foreign Films

The Motion Picture Association of America this week approved a plan to set up an "informational and advisory" unit to assist producers of foreign-language pictures who may wish to distribute them into the United States. The organization, which will act purely as an advisor, will be headed by International Chief John G. McCarthy, and at present consists of Loew's International President Arthur M. Loew, RKO Foreign Distribution Vice-President Phil Reisman; 20th Century-Fox International President Murray Silverstone, and Joseph M. Seidelman, president of Universal-International's foreign department.

Further expansion with paid and advisory personnel is planned.

Rountree Will Rebuild Blasted Theatre

Exhibitor Leon Rountree, whose Holly at Holly Springs, Miss., was wrecked Dec. 15 by a blast thought to have been caused by a leaky line in a recently installed natural gas blower-type heating system, this week announced that he planned to rebuild the 400-seat house immediately.

The blast, which shook the town, occurred between 10:30 and 11 P.M., after the theatre had closed for the night and emptied a full house.

Theatre Management in Action

Dances Draw Teen-Age Crowd

Manager Solves Attendance, Friendly Relations Problem With Lobby 'Rug Cutting'

Lobby dances not only kept the teen-age trade for the RKO Paramount at Peebles Corner, Cincinnati, but they gave Mrs. Florence Kipp, the house manager, a chance she had sought for a long time—to get acquainted with her younger audience.

For Mrs. Kipp, who didn't get to be RKO's only woman manager or receive its honor title of "Manager of the Month" in an RKO theatre manager contest, by saying "Woe is me," had a problem.

Trouble

The teen-age trade she had, was giving her trouble with its conduct. She knew this could be settled with no hard feelings if only she could get acquainted with the youngsters. And she knew she wanted their trade.

So, inasmuch as the Paramount had a large, tiled lobby, and the youngsters wanted to dance, why not let them chop the tile, instead of cutting the rug? And why not use the social to get acquainted? As a result, the RKO house now has Saturday night dances from 9:30 to 11:30 P.M., with music furnished by a juke box which Mrs. Kipp promoted and a teen-age bar serving soft drinks. On the opening Saturday in fact, Mrs. Kipp even had doughnuts and apple cider.

Every Saturday now, attendants sprinkle the tile floor of the lobby with talcum powder or starch, the dancers bring their own records, which makes things clubby and friendly, and there is a short exhibition dance plus 15 minutes of dancing instruction furnished by Rosedale and Roberta of the Rosedale Dancing academy.

After that the jitterbug sweepstakes are open.

So far the thing has been what the business doctor ordered. Not only do the teen-agers come, pay for their ticket to see the show, which also gives them the right to participate in the dance, but extra tickets are sold to adults who come for the early show and stay to watch the youngsters' antics, sitting on the lobby divans and providing a type of additional chaperonage.

Passers-by Try Look-in

In addition the theatre gets the attention of passers-by on the outside who stop to watch through the doors.

The dances are announced through a screen trailer, through high school paper ads and stories, as well as similar space in the local dailies, and over WCPO, where Paul Dixon, favorite teen-age disc jockey, announces the event.

The trailer copy reads:

There's Going to be Added Fun
Every Saturday Night at THE RKO PARAMOUNT THEATRE

Something new is going to be added to our regular screen show. Every Saturday night will be Paramount Teen Club Night. There'll be dancing in the lobby from 9:30 P.M. to 11:30 P.M. — Refreshments — dancing — Exhibitions by Rosedale and Roberta as well as dance instructions by this popular pair.

Make up a Screen and Dance Party and come down and have fun Every Saturday night. Regular Prices prevail.

Sometimes some of the kids give trouble. Often they are noisy. But so far it has not been anything that the management cannot handle—gently. And the reactions from regular patrons in the immediate neighborhood are good. They've been praising the management for keeping the kids off the streets and giving them something wholesome to do.

(This is another in a series on Theatre Management in Action. For additional Theatre Management activities please turn to P. 24.)

RIGHT ON THEIR TOES are these youngstersters enjoying themselves at the regular Saturday night dances of the RKO Paramount at Peebles Corner, Ohio, and right on her toes is Miss Florence Kipp, manager of the house, who when she found youngsters wanted to dance and dancing might keep them away from her theatres, did something about it. Her regular weekly dances in the theatre's lobby, admission to which is included in the regular theatre admission, has caught on and held. Music is furnished by a juke box.

Beats the Dull Days

Renting the theatre outright for private parties and for the Yule celebrations of business organizations is one way which is rapidly gaining favor with San Francisco neighborhood houses to beat the pre-Christmas doldrums. The Golden State circuit alone has eight houses so lined up this year with its chief, William Coovert, contacting companies before holidays and selling them on the idea of having entertainment of a feature and a cartoon, sufficient space for their guests and no worries about cleanin gup.

Vaude Here to Stay, Showman Says

"Vaudeville is back and here to stay."

That anyway is the opinion of Robert T. Murphy, managing director of the 20th Century Theatre in Buffalo, who while noting the fact that screen entertainment is getting better, seems sold on live shows as business builders.

"Our observation during the last few weeks when we presented vaudeville bills," he declared to SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, "convinces us that Buffalonians are in line with other metropolitan cities in expressing their desire for this form of entertainment.

Buffalo showmen generally are bullish on forthcoming screen attractions. James H. Eshelman, district manager for Paramount Theatres thinks the future looks good.

"Variety in entertainment always has been an important factor in attracting patrons to the box-office and, in looking over our coming program, I am pleased to note the diversity of the new film productions.'

George H. Mackenna of the Basil Circuit's Lafayette sees better product also but anticipates that it will be in lighter vein.

New Daylight Screen Due for Drive-Ins

Cleveland Drive-in Owner Herbert Ochs and his associate, Gordon White of Ottawa, Canada, this week announced that they planned to place a new daylight screen for under-skyers on the market next spring. Engineering on the job was done by E. W. Clements and the screen is said to permit daylight operation.

Ampa Holds Xmas Party

Ampa—Associated Motion Picture Advertisers—held its annual Christmas Party at Town Hall, New York, Wednesday, with Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg as toastmasters. Harry K. McWilliams was party chairman; George Ettinger, entertainment committee chairman.

British Censors Ban Brutality

Great Britain's motion picture censors this week ruled that they would ban showings of any pictures which were basically brutal.

The British move, announced in London, was taken in the United States to be the result of certain films which appeare ' in the United Kingdom recently as well as probably a matter of policy which would have some effect in barring American product.

The announcement, which followed recent showings there of Warner Bros.' "White Heat," bars shootings or killings that play up brutality, or agony—such as repeatedly shooting a man; prolonged fight scenes with foul blows; torture scenes or those carrying brutality unneeded to the story; flogging closeups; men striking women in the face.

Scollard; Edmund Reek, newsreels; Max Youngstein, advertising and publicity.

violated under the First and Fourteenth amendments were violated by the high court's ruling and take the case to the U. S. Supreme Court. If this were possible, it would open the way for a decisive ruling which would affect all censorsh[illegible].

On the other hand, if the theory that because a producer or distributor is not the exhibitor of a picture, refusal of a censor seal does not violate his right of free speech, is read into the law, the similar case against the Atlanta censor would be knocked out. In Atlanta, Producer Louis deRochemont and Film Classics are attacking the city censor directly in federal court over constitutional issues involved in the ban on "Lost Boundaries."

Loew's Seeks to Build Theatres in Israel

Loew's International will build three theatres in Israel as soon as sites can be found, according to Sales Manager Samuel N. Burger. The towns contemplated are Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem.

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Nice Job

On the whole New York newsreels, especially Paramount, Movietone and News of the Day did a nice job reporting the waterless Friday "observed" by the city of New York because of a water shortage. Most of reporting was factual, with a few staged scenes to illustrate points on how to save water, and the clips used only in the reel for New York houses. One reel, used on television, however, went to a lot of trouble to stage a bar room, restaurant scene which was strictly fiction, indicating that the restaurant used paper plates and its bar refused anything but beer as whiskey chasers.

Selling the Picture

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

DeMille's Showmanly Selling Behind Premiere of 'Samson'

Producer-Director Worked Quietly, Effectively to Help Exploit His Biblical Drama

New York's Broadway traffic was jammed worse than "normal." The Paramount in Times Square and the Rivoli, slightly above Times Square, were ablaze with light and fancy fronts. Police, who must wonder why this should happen to them along with pre-Christmas wassailers, were holding crowds in line which gawked at folks who struggled into the lobbies of both houses. "Samson and Delilah" had come to New York.

That is, it had come to New York officially and for the paid customers. For "Samson" had been around quite a time now, being shown privately to a wide audience of influential people —the press, educators, religious leaders. And "Samson" had been looking down on Broadway from towering billboards clinching with a lion or clinching Delilah, while a steady stream of publicity material flowed to the various press.

Hostesses, who were supposed to be Hedy Lamarr doubles, stood in the lobby to greet the customers. Three thousand "Delilah" orchids were flown in from Hawaii as gifts for the lady guests. The event itself was broadcast over 200 Mutual stations and telecast over the WABD network which presented a program into which were cut film recordings of what DeMille and other Hollywoodites had to say.

Wednesday's night opening at both the Paramount and the Rivoli was a big opening following a big advance ballyhoo.

But behind all this glitter and glamor which National Director of Advertising and Publicity Max E. Youngstein and his staff worked out for the opening and the weeks preceding the opening, is a quiet, effective, and almost unnoticed piece of showmanly selling done by Cecil B. DeMille.

DeMille, veteran of the game, did not confine his efforts to producing and directing "Samson." He took off his coat, or rather put on his best suit and most conservative tie, and got to work on his picture.

What Shorts?

The extent of his interest is probably best shown by the fact that he wanted to know what shorts would play with "Samson" at its dual New York opening. The producer insised that they be black-and-white shorts, so that the public would get eye rest from color and "Samson" would gain added stature through the comparison of its riotous colors with what came on the screen before and after its two hours of melodrama.

The effect of his interest and advice is probably best indicated by the fact that the reason billboard and newspaper advertising show Samson fighting the lion, is because DeMille wanted it. The advertising department, wise in the ways of what brings people to the box-office, had concentrated on a picture of Samson clinching with Delilah.

DeMille claimed that if anyone remembered anything about Samson it was the episode of his fight with a lion and therefore that it should hold a foremost place in all advertising. Parenthetically, it may be noted that he did not rule out the clinch scenes, which are also being used.

DeMille's work in selling "Samson" started when Richard Condon got off the train in Hollywood and hiked to the DeMille office to keep a special appointment. Condon had hit upon the idea of utilizing the by-products of the picture —its research into history, customs and the like —to plug it from a cultural angle and to crash into circles which are not usually open to the motion picture publicist. Max Youngstein liked the idea, so he sent him out to talk it over with DeMille, who went for it the whole way.

The producer not only wrote the script, selected the scenes to be shown, recorded his personal introduction of Actor Herbert Wilcoxon, who was sent out to do the job, but also rehearsed "the act," after he had done a lot of rewriting and revising.

His interest didn't end with the Wilcoxon tour. When he heard Paramount planned a series of mailing pieces on the picture, he made available a list of "key people," universities,

'Battleground' Shown At Friendship Meeting

More than 1,000 exhibitors and their wives, local civic and state and educational leaders turned out for the special "Battleground" screening held at the Vogue Theatre in Chicago in connection with MGM's Friendship meeting. Also present were members of the 101st Airborne Division, Chicago Chapter, high ranking officers of the Fifth Army, executive officers of the American Legion and Miliary Order of the Purple Heart.

HEAP GOOD STUNT. I.M.P.S. Member Sol L. Sorkin, RKO Theatres city manager in Syracuse, N. Y., arranged to have Chief Big Tree, who is in RKO's "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon," appear in person on the RKO Keith's stage in connection with the film's showing. Above, Brother Sorkin shakes hands with the Indian following the performance.

EXPLOITORIALS

Are you taking advantage of national magazine advertising campaigns and motion picture publicity? For example, in the case of 20th-Fox's unprecedented campaign on "The Prince of Foxes," which is now current in many weekly and monthly publications, you might persuade newsstand dealers to slip inserts into each copy calling attention to your playdate, and a large display of many of the ads could be exhibited in the lobby. MGM has been getting some good publicity breaks in Life on "Battleground," "Nancy Goes to Rio" (Nita Bieber was the cover personality for this), "That Forsyte Woman" and "Intruder in the Dust." Did you let localites know that any one or all of these pictures will show at your theatre? And just recently Paramount got excellent publicity breaks in Life and Newsweek on "Samson and Delilah." The Newsweek cover, featuring Hedy Lamarr as Delilah, and the pictorial coverage in Life, provide you with the material for a dramatic, attention-getting display. By the way, Paramount is also running a colorful spread on "Samson" that would sell tickets if displayed prominently in the lobby or foyer. As we said, these are examples to show you just what can be done. Be on the lookout in these pages for news of national magazine campaigns, and keep an eye on the newsstands for possible tieins.

Here's a stunt to use when RKO Radio's "Bride for Sale" plays your theatre. Place this want ad in the newspapers: "Bride for Sale. Call (your theatre number)." Louise Cotter, RKO-Brandeis publicist in Omaha, did it, and she kept the box-office telephone ringing. Of course, the cashier gave out with information about the picture and playdate.

And while we're out Nebraska way, we might as well stop in Scribner where everyone looks up when Harry Hummel takes to the sky in his airplane. Why? Because Harry drops circular advertising his theatre and also includes a few free tickets to add interest. Wonder how many other flying theatre managers there are? If there is an airport near you, it should be fairly easy to prevail on some licensed pilot to do the job for you in connection with some important picture. If you own your own plane, then you could make it a regular advertising procedure, as Hummel has done.

Public Steals Show At 'East Side' Debut

With the public walking the plush carpets instead of watching celebrities do so from behind police lines, the popular-price world premiere of MGM's "East Side, West Side" was held Thursday evening in New York at Loew's State.

Twenty-three hundred seats were available for the general public, while the remaining 1,000 seats went to winners of a letter-writing contest, sponsored by radio's Tex and Jinx McCrary. Two tickets went to each of 500 winners for the best letters explaining why the writers wanted to attend the premiere.

Plan 'Mrs. Mike' U S-Canada Debuts

Plans are under way at United Artists for an "across the board and border" premiere of "Mrs. Mike," which will make its bow in mid-January in Boston, birthplace of the original Mrs. Mike, and simultaneously in the sister cities of the U. S. and Canada all the length of the 3,000-mile border.

Included in the "across the border" premieres will be Montreal, Toronto, Regina, London and Ottawa, with plans crystallizing for similar festivities in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Quebec. Premiere cities on the American side will include Boston, Buffalo, Dayton, Cleveland, Toledo, Detroit and Chicago, with Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Duluth, Spokane and Seattle still pending.

In addition, "Mrs. Mike" will premiere "across the board" in mid-January in Kansas City, New Orleans, Atlanta, Providence, Syracuse, Columbus, Washington, Memphis, St. Louis, Akron, Harrisburg, Reading, Wilmington, Pittsburgh, Nashville, Richmond, Louisville, Canton and many other cities.

U-I to Premiere 3 Films in January

Universal-International will mark the start of 1950 with "World Premiere Month," featuring the premieres of "Borderline," "South Sea Sinner" and "Woman in Hiding."

"Borderline" opens at the Paramount and Webber theatres in Denver on Jan. 24, and the Utah in Salt Lake City on Jan. 26, to launch several Colorado and Utah territorial openings. World premiere of "South Sea Sinner" at the Missouri in St. Louis on Jan. 12 and the 50 day-and-date openings are being tied-in with a homecoming celebration for Shelley Winters, star of the film, who will be on hand for interviews, personal appearances and a round of civic events. "Woman in Hiding" will bow at the Lafayette theatre in Buffalo on Jan. 7, climaxing an extensive promotion campaign.

Ornstein Gets Santa Claus Standees in Schools

A neat and inexpensive method of creating goodwill for his theatres—and incidentally also for himself—has been found by President Eddie I. Ornstein of the Ornstein Theatres, headquartering in Marengo, Ind. He succeeded in having large cut-out standees of Santa Claus placed in the corridors of schools in the cities where the circuit has theatres. Each cut-out figure of St. Nick is captioned with names of the theatre owners and of the local manager, name of the house, plus a "Merry Christmas" greeting. The stunt has gone over big with the school children and has created much favorable comment by their parents and the townspeople in general.—LOU.

Mezzanine 'Side Show' Is 'Task Force' Plug

Manager James Hardiman of the Odeon Theatre, London, Ont., arranged a "side show" on the mezzanine, consisting of a 16-mm. film, "The Navy Flies," which he screened without extra charge every night during the engagement of "Task Force." The side-show film was produced for the Royal Canadian Navy Fleet Air Arm and hence tied in well with the theme of "Task Force," as did the lobby exhibit of naval arms and equipment.—TOR.

SANTA GOLDWYN. Producer Samuel Goldwyn played Santa Claus this week to some 2,400 underprivileged children of Los Angeles at a two-day "My Foolish Heart Christmas Present Party" at the United Artists Theatre. There were presents for every child attending, and a forty-foot Christmas tree. Goldwyn was assisted by Pat DeCicco, operating head of the United Artists Theatre Circuit in California, and the circuit's Community Service department.

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

You would expect Danny Kaye to dominate the ads on "The Inspector General," and he does, although in some of the layouts in the Warner Bros. press book he gets some eye-catching feminine assistance from Barbara Bates in some mighty fetching poses. Kaye is seen cavorting in his "general" costume, whether dancing or apparently swinging through the air, while Miss Bates is seen at a window in most of the ads. Some of the catchlines: "Never Such Danny Kaye-pers!"—"There'll Be Laughter to the Rafters!"—"Everything Is Fine and Danny! Here's the Dandiest, Laughiest, Song-and-Danciest Delight Ever from Warner Bros." The Kaye figure in the 24-sheet will make an excellent cutout for the marquee.

It's difficult to heed the advice in the MGM press book cover ad on "Tension." The top catchline warns: "Stay Away From Her, Sucker, Or You'll Wake Up Dead!" And all one has to stay away from is a curvaceous miss (Audrey Totter), sitting in a sort of negligee with legs crossed. That ad should get plenty of attention and sell tickets. As a matter of fact, it looks as though most of the ads will get attention, for Audrey is in nearly every one of 'em in one eye-catching pose or another. As for the catchlines (as though any would be necessary, what with Audrey to grab and hold the eye), this one seems to stand out: "In Every Two-Timing Kiss You Will Feel Tension—In Every Thrilling Minute of This Exciting Story." A page is devoted to exploitation stunts that appear to be practical and productive, and the 24-sheet is the make-em-want-to-see-the-picture kind. That goes for the other posters and accessories, too.

O'Dwyer Chairman Of Premiere Committee

Mayor William O'Dwyer will be chairman of the committee sponsoring the American premiere of "Dream No More," a new feature from Israel, at the Ambassador Theatre on Jan. 5. Formation of a committee of notables has already begun.

State to Sponsor 'Montana' Debut

First motion picture premiere ever to be held in Montana will take place Jan. 10 at the Marlow Theatre in Helena when Warner Bros.' Technicolor "Montana" has its opening with the official resources of the state concentrated on the event.

Mort Blumenstock, Warners' ad and publicity vice-president, has concluded a series of conferences with Governor John W. Bonner and leading state officials regarding plans for the Montana Bonanza World Premiere and the statewide series of special events which will be conducted in connection with the opening.

Prior to his departure for the company's studio in Burbank, Calif., where he was to confer with studio executives, Blumenstock announced in Helena the appointment of Bill Steege, former Fox Theatres official and Montana's pioneer showman, as general chairman of the Montana Bonanza World Premiere.

Governor Bonner was host last Saturday evening at a special screening of "Montana" for all heads of state departments, newspaper executives, radio and wire service representatives. The premiere is being made an official activity of the state, with Al Erickson, Montana publicity director, and General Chairman Steege cooperating on the planning.

'Prince of Foxes' Bows As Hospital Benefit

With the United Hospital Fund as the beneficiary, the American premiere of 20th-Fox's "Prince of Foxes" was held Thursday evening in New York at the Roxy Theatre. One of the gala affairs of the holiday season, the premiere was attended by social and political leaders, and screen, radio and screen stars. Plans for the event, and the sale of tickets, were handled through a United Hospital Fund committee.

A highlight of the ceremonies in front of the theatre was a concert of Italian songs by the 50-voice Italian Folklore Society. Special tiers were built near the lobby entrance, and the group, wearing ancestral or authentic copies of Italian costumes, entertained "sidewalk superintendents" before the celebrities arrived.

Song Plugger in Audience Helps 'Doll' Campaign

An idea that Manager Joe Burns of the Glove, Gloversville, N. Y., had to promote his showing of "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," greatly stimulated audience interest in his next feature. He stationed a song-plugger in the audience a week in advance and had three songs from the picture rendered, with an old-time piano player furnishing the accompaniment, with slides giving the words of the songs so the audience could join in. A spotlight was turned upon the song-plugger in the auditorium. The song-plugger and slides were later used before an audience of 300 at a community center party.

'Duplicate' Window Stunt

To promote "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," Manager Ray Helson of the Seneca, Salamanca, N. Y., tried out the "duplicate" window display in the window of a tie-in drug store. Any person spotting a duplicate of an article in the window was accorded a pass to see the film.

Busy Showman Utecht Sees Only 4 Movies in 3.5 Years

Kiddie Shows, Civic and Community Affairs Keep Oak Park Manager Active

I.M.P.S. Member Leonard C. Utecht, manager of the Lake Theatre, Oak Park, Ill., a west side suburb of Chicago, is unique among theatremen. In the first place, Utecht has seen only four movies during the past three and a half years—and all on his nights off. In the second place, he is a year-around Santa Claus to the children. And in the third place, he participates in community and civic activities.

Betty Jane Merrill, writing in the Chicago Tribune, describes him as "the modern version of Jolly St. Nick to thousands of young moviegoers in the village. Utecht doesn't look like the Yuletide king. He's even minus a Mrs. Santa Claus, but his love for children and the radiation of his goodwill has spread throughout the west side like the tinkle of bells on a crisp winter night."

He's 'the Boss'

Besides being manager of the Lake, Brother Utecht is also a promotion and publicity agent, professional stamp collector, connoisseur of classical and jazz music, philanthropist, wit and (according to Miss Merrill) "belongs to more civic and charitable groups than a social butterfly."

As far as the kiddies are concerned, Utecht is "the boss," but they regard him as a pal and buddy. Utecht is fond of the kids, too, and he's always concerned with their welfare whenever they become his charges at the numerous kiddie shows he provides for them.

At frequent intervals the children from the Hephzibah Children's Home are the genial theatreman's guests at a kiddie matinee, and he gives them some sort of a treat, such as a bag of popcorn and a picture of their favorite star. He also plans contests and stunts for their entertainment and enjoyment.

Center of Activity

Because Utecht is more community-minded than his job requires, his theatre is the center of activity for many civic projects, including religious services. Recently such services were arranged with the Grace Lutheran Church of River Forest.

Whenever he tries out a new stunt, he calls it a "gimmick," and he always has the betterment of his theatre in mind whenever he tries it out. Of course, there are few stunts he hasn't tried.

Some time ago Utecht employed a professional model to pose with a gorilla (a real one? we don't know) as a stunt for "Mighty Joe Young." Seems the model backed out. Hurriedly the theatreman transformed one of his usherettes into a Venus with blonde wig, frilly evening gown and false eye-lashes. The show went on.

What does Utecht do about unclaimed articles of clothing left in the theatre? He takes them home to his mother, Mrs. Pearl Utecht, who washes and irons them and delivers them to a northwest side orphanage.

Getting back to his infrequent moviegoing—which has been only four movies during the past three and one-half years, one wonders why Utecht doesn't see more of them. Too busy seeing that everything goes according to Hoyle. From his office he can detect the least disturbance. But that doesn't mean he stays there—he's all over the place.

Back in 1932 Utecht was working as a sign change boy for a downtown Chicago Theatre. The prospect of a manager's front office seemed practically unattainable. Meanwhile, he did a lot of odd jobs: butcher boy, baker's helper, mail carrier, piano tuner, cleaning and dyeing salesman, music store clerk, doctor's receptionist, greeting card and magazine salesman, water inspector (they could probably use him in New York right now), skip-tracer and political precinct worker. Because he has done just about everything, met all kinds of people and gained practical experience, Utecht has been better able to cope with the thousand and one problems and requirements of theatre management.

As Miss Merrill puts it: "He's a showman from start to finish."

'Hartford Fury'

On the marquee "Arctic Fury" was billed as the second hit, but the street scene photo which appeared in the Hartford Times was top billing for the film. For while another attraction was billed more prominently, the photo itself showed pedestrians fighting their way through the season's first snowstorm in Hartford, Conn.

'High' New Year Plug

"It's coming! Twelve O'Clock High! In just 60 seconds it will be Twelve O'Clock High. . ."

This announcement, running 60 seconds at 11:59 P.M. on New Year's Eve, will blanket the entire nation via 1094 radio stations on behalf of 20th-Fox's "Twelve O'Clock High." The spot announcement breaks up the plug for the picture with 10-second breaks to announce the time left before midnight.

'Outlaw' to Open In 21 Key Cities

Scheduled for 21 major key city engagements for the new year, opening in Boston on Dec. 29, Chicago on Dec. 30 and in 19 other cities on Dec. 31, Howard Hughes' "The Outlaw" will have local advertising campaigns designed to dominate the theatre situation in each locality.

Keynote of the campaign is an artist's conception of one of the most dramatic scenes of the picture. The painting has been reproduced in all the lithographs and will highlight the display advertising.

A full 100 per cent 24-sheet billboard showing is set for each city, augmented by an extensive sniping campaign. The local newspaper campaign began 10 days in advance of the opening and runs continuously. Radio and television spots are also included.

Other cities in the "Outlaw" booking wave, besides Boston and Chicago, are Denver, Kansas City, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Omaha, Providence, Rochester, St. Paul, Syracuse, Washington, Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Des Moines, Dubuque, Lowell, Marshalltown, Sioux Falls, Waterloo and Buffalo.

DeMille's Showmanly Selling Behind 'Samson and Delilah' World Premiere

cultural circles and public life to whom he thought they should be sent.

Then came the day he arrived at New York and put himself at the disposal of the Paramount exploiteers. To date they have no complaints—expecting that they do wish Mr. DeMille didn't like to walk so much in a town where taxis are so convenient.

Outside of that little mania for physical exercise, he was their boy. He, as Youngstein said, "didn't blow a date." And the dates were piled fast and close together. All in all, he is estimated to have seen 150 representatives of the press, syndicates, trade press and foreign press. Some he took on in droves, others individually. And, take it from Herb Steinberg, who had to do some walking with DeMille, in line with drawing his regular pay as a Paramount contact man, DeMille always had a new angle for each new interviewee.

As an example, when Lou Schaeffer of the Brooklyn Eagle's turn came around, DeMille imparted the information that the DeMille ancestors had lived in Brooklyn and had fought in the Civil War. Schaeffer must have been impressed, for there is nothing a Brooklyn reader likes to read about better after he has spent from 15 to 60 minutes in a crowded subway train than that someone famous either lives or had relatives in Brooklyn.

With other newspaper men, he followed the same tactics—finding something new and if possible, something which had an angle which appealed to that particular newspaperman.

For the foreign-language press, he worked up a feature talk on Vladimir Jobotowsky, soldier and diplomat, who was concerned with the treatment of "Samson."

And he seems to have exercised tact at ducking questions he did not want to answer. To those who wanted to know how the lion fight was staged, or how the temple was brought down with a crash, he had a standard reply:

"I don't feel the public wants to know how a thing is filmed. They want to know if it's a good picture."

If pressed by newsmen who didn't accept that courteous evasion, he'd answer:

"There are things done in motion pictures today that are as fine as any magic act, that rival the tricks of Houdini or Thurston. No one had the nerve to ask them how they did it."

And he didn't miss any bets to get in a plug for "Samson." He took time out of a busy day to attend the Motion Picture Pioneers' dinner where he was cited for his work as a moviemaker and where he got in some goodwill talk on the industry. He took time out of a busy day to be the butt of the jokes at a Circus Saints and Sinners' luncheon. And he got up in the middle of the night to make an appearance at the New York Newspaper Women's Club Front Page Ball.

DeMille made the appearance as a combined "Samson" and goodwill gesture. But he met the United Nations' Carlos Romulo, who also made an appearance, got talking to him and came back with Romulo's acceptance to be one of the dignitaries at the "Samson" premiere.

Radio, Mayor Send 'Irma' to SRO Top

"A little well placed advertising and promotional stunt will certainly bring 'em in, which it did here, with the ol' S.R.O. sign getting a workout."

Just think of it—the old S.R.O. sign got a workout. How long since you dusted it off?

The report is from Ralph Hamilton, manager of the Santa Fe Theatre, Santa Fe, N. M. Ralph recently changed theatres, and the first campaign on his new job was in behalf of "My Friend Irma."

Three weeks before opening date, spot announcements were broadcast just ahead of the "Irma" show over the local CBS outlet, KVSF. The station cooperated on all stunts, even going so far as to place an ad in the newspapers (at its own expense) tieing-in the radio show with the picture.

Another radio program aired three times weekly was devoted entirely to "Irma" contests, with prizes going to winners who telephoned their answers to the station. "The local phone ops went nuts," says Hamilton.

KVSF furnished a 40 x 60 poster for display in the Santa Fe lobby a week ahead of the playdate. Copy: "You've Heard Irma on the Air, Now See Her on the Screen in the Funniest Picture of Your Life, etc."

Hamilton even got the mayor into the act. Mayor Frank V. Ortiz proclaimed the playdate "My Friend Irma" Week, and said, "I have laughed at the radio show and now plan to attend the picture and see these characters on the screen. I am sure they will be just as funny and lovable on the screen as they are on the air." Of course, the proclamation got newspaper publicity.

As a local touch in his newspaper advertising, Hamilton used a picture showing the mayor reading the press book on "Irma," while behind him were the theatreman himself, the ad manager of the local newspaper, and a representative of KVSF. The ad also contained the mayor's proclamation.

On opening day 5,000 handbills were dropped from a plane. Copy: "We're All Up in the Air Over 'My Friend Irma' etc."

Hamilton laments the fact that he couldn't do more because of the close booking ("Oh sure, Ralph, you just took it real easy!"), "but the ticket machine played a mighty purty tune."

Nightly Carol Singing At Broadway in Kingston

Choirs of five Kingston churches and organizations sang on the stage of Reade's Broadway Theatre in Kingston, N. Y., nightly during the week before Christmas, under arrangements made by Manager Betty Riseley.

The program, unprecedented in its scope, featured a different choir each night in a half-hour recital of carols and hymns.

A public address system was rigged up so that Christmas music could be carried to the lobby and street during the day, and the stage programs broadcast at night over radio station WKNY in Kingston.

Correction

A caption to a photograph reproduced on page 17 in STR Dec. 10, 1949, erroneously identified Earnie Sturm as Fox West Coast division manager. Mr. Sturm is Imperial Valley district manager. Division Manager for the So. Cal. Division is Dick Dickson.

IF THERE WERE any proper Bostonians who weren't acquainted with the fact that Columbia's "Jolson Sings Again" was going to open at the Loew's State and Orpheum theatres, it wasn't the fault of this attractively decorated sound truck which featured music from the picture. That sign on the back ("Don't Hit This Truck Because It's Playing Hit Tunes from 'Jolson Sings Again") brought smiles to Bostonian faces.

Levy Gets Cooperation On 'Columbus' Campaign

Practically all angles of local cooperation in the promotional campaign for "Christopher Columbus" at Loew's Theatre, Reading, Pa., were obtained by Manager Larry R. Levy and his assistant, Alton McHan, who went out after cooperation and got it due to their friendly standing in the community and the nature of the picture they had to exploit. Fullest cooperation was obtained from the public schools which not only made wide class-room use of the "Classroom Guide" on the picture, but made announcements on all school bulletin boards, along with "Columbus" stills and credit cards. Superintendents of both city and county schools made announcements urging the pupils to see the picture. Levy and McHan distributed 5,000 heralds to children leaving the schools in advance of playdate.

Local distributor of Coronet, which recently published a section dealing with Columbus titled "Discovery—1492," was provided with 150 specially made-up cards with a half-tone head of Fredric March in his Columbus makeup and the usual credits which were placed on view at every store and newsstand where the magazine was sold. The magazine distributor also took a nine-inch newspaper ad plugging both the picture and Coronet's Columbus section.

'O'Riordans' to Bow At N. Y. Park Avenue

American premiere of Universal-International's "The Rugged O'Riordans" will be launched at a special invitational performance to be held in New York at the Park Avenue Theatre on Jan. 4, under the auspices of the Australian Consul General in New York, Lieutenant General Edward Kenneth Smart, D.S.C., M.C. The sixty-six week engagement of "Hamlet" will terminate on Jan. 3.

Special ceremonies marking the premiere are already in preparation, with invitations being extended by General Smart to the Australian Ambassador to the United States, members of the Embassy staff and many other international dignitaries.

Katz Goes on Air To Boost Movies

Aware that the motion picture industry is faced with many problems at the present time, the most important in the opinion of Julian Katz, manager of the Lefferts Theatre, Richmond Hill, N. Y., is how to get the people out of their homes and into the neighborhood theatres.

"A step in the right direction was made," Katz admits, "when public relations reels such as 'Let's Go to the Movies" and 'This Theatre and You' were released—I am for them 100 per cent! However, the unfortunate thing about it all is that these reels are being shown to people who are already attending the movies, instead of those who are not."

And so, with this opinion in mind, Katz thought what a wonderful thing it would be if he could promote some radio time to tell a tremendous audience why they should come back to the neighborhood theatres, and what would be in store for them if they would.

One night recently while visiting Hutton's Restaurant in New York, where Bee Kalmus conducts her disc jockey program over WMGM, Katz sent a note to her asking if she would be interested in interviewing a theatre manager over the air—one branch of the industry seldom glorified by the air lanes. She rejected the offer that night for various reasons but agreed to an interview a few nights later.

On that night, with the microphone before him, Katz pointed out that motion pictures are still the world's finest entertainment at the lowest possible cost; that today the neighborhood theatres are more comfortable, more luxurious, more relaxing than ever before. He emphasized cleanliness and good service and other aspects of theatre management, and added that going to the movies "takes you away from your problems and gives you the opportunity to relax—a very healthy state of affairs."

Katz is glad he was able to speak in behalf of moviegoing to WMGM's radio audience, because he believes that the theatre manager can best build his business, not by knocking television or any other opposition, but by boasting about his own industry and letting others know what it has to offer.

If other theatremen throughout the nation could arrange to speak to radio listeners in their areas as Katz succeeded in doing in New York, it would indeed help in no small way to lure wandering patrons back to the movies.

2,000 Cans for Needy At Xmas Kiddie Show

Two thousand cans of food for distribution to the needy of Saratoga Springs at Christmas, were realized from the "canned goods" kiddie show staged at Reade's Community Theatre in Saratoga earlier this month by Harry Burke, city manager. The show, an annual affair, had the backing of the Parent-Teacher Association of that upstate New York city.

Nick Kelly's Free Show Kids' Christmas Treat

Nick Kelly, manager of the Badger Theatre in Reedsburg, Wis., gave a free show for children over 11 years of age, in cooperation with the local Chamber of Commerce. Gifts were distributed to the youngsters attending, Boy Scouts assisting Santa Claus in handing them out. The show that Manager Kelly put on consisted of cartoons and comedies which had been especially selected for the junior audience.

I.M.P.S. Member Report

There Wasn't Any Slump for Borland

Like his fellow exhibitors, I.M.P.S. Member Hugh S. Borland, manager of the Louis Theatre, Chicago, was faced with the pre-Christmas slump. And, wise showman that he is, Brother Borland did something about it.

With the cooperation of a merchant who ran an ad and paid for the cost of printing, Borland got up some four-page folders which he distributed in opposition territory.

Copy on the front cover, which was bordered and illustrated in keeping with the Christmas season, was as follows:

"Yes, There Is a Santa Claus . . . and to prove it, look inside for the gift he has for you."

On the third page (facing the merchant's ad on Page Two) were five "Christmas Movie Gift Tickets" separated from one another by a perforated line. Each ticket, when presented at the door with one 25c paid admission (plus tax), admitted two adults any afternoon or evening (except Sundays) up to Dec. 24. On the back cover was the announcement that the Louis was "celebrating its Pre-Christmas Jubilee of Greater Shows."

When Brother Borland made his report about ten days before Christmas, the stunt was clicking 100 per cent.

Hawaiian Band, Costumes Ballyhoo 'Blue Lagoon'

A three-piece Hawaiian band on a truck was the feature ballyhoo for J. Arthur Rank's "Blue Lagoon" at the RKO Grand in Chicago. Aside from touring streets, the truck was parked in front of the theatre at intervals where its concert attracted great crowds of passersby, with the picture's title in large letters on the marquee, and under it, plugging the Technicolor South Sea island film.

Two attractive-looking girls in leis and grass skirts formed another theatre-front ballyhoo. Title appeared on a sign over the head of one and a sign reading: "Romantic nights of endless kisses" over that of the other girl. They handed out heralds to patrons of the preceding show and to passersby who wandered into the lobby. The charming figures and beautiful faces of the girls were enough in themselves to bring in the youths and men, principally, for a closer look.

'Real McCoy' Contest For 'Roseanna McCoy'

Manager John Howe of the Schine Kentucky at Lexington, Ky., and his assistant, Bob Cox, garnered loads of publicity for "Roseanna McCoy" through a "Real McCoy Girl Contest" which was plugged by a seven-day-in-advance teaser campaign, the promotion of 10 prizes from merchants for the girl who won the contest through radio, newspaper, lobby, program and herald announcements, etc. More than 100 girls sent in their photos, impelled by a desire to win the prizes which consisted of a professional hair-do, costume jewelry, dinner for two, dress, photo, candy, use of a 1949 auto, etc.

A Roseanna McCoy dance contest, with more than 40 couples participating, was held at the Veterans of Foreign Wars night club, with the emcee giving passes for the best couples. All other exploitation avenues were used also.

TENSER'S 'LUCKY LEO DIP' STUNT AIDS CHARITY. As the highlight of his campaign on MGM's "Everybody's Cheering" ("Take Me Out to the Ball Game"), Manager S. Tenser of the Central Cinema, Cambridge, England, promoted a "Leo Lucky Dip" stunt which is described in the report below. A theatre staff member in lion costume (see above) rode around town with the Lucky Dip barrel to visit various hospitals.

Tenser's Novel 'Cheering' Gift Stunt Cheers Hospital Inmates in England

The three-fold purpose back of Manager S. Tenser's exploitation campaign for "Everybody's Cheering" ("Take Me Out to the Ball Game") at the Central Cinema, Cambridge, England, was attained through his Leo's Lucky Dip stunt.

Tenser promoted 150 gift vouchers from 22 Cambridge merchants for inclusion in a gaily-decorated barrel containing 10,000 slips which had film, theatre and playdate credits on one side, being blank on the other except for 200 which had the MGM trademark of Leo the Lion on the reverse side. Persons drawing the slips with Leo's picture were entitled to exchange the voucher for a gift at one of the 22 cooperating stores. Tenser called his stunt Leo's Lucky Dip and gained credit for the film, goodwill from the public and took cheer to the inmates of hospitals in Cambridge and some of its surrounding communities.

The stunt, being for charity, police authorities permitted the use of a taxi in which a Central Cinema staffer in lion's costume took the Lucky Dip barrel to the various hospitals, with the lions' giant head and the barrel protruding through the sunshine roof, thus getting a look from every person on the streets. The cab company gave use of the taxi at reduced rates and ran film credit posters on three other cabs for a full week in advance.

In addition to covering the hospitals Leo and his Lucky Dip made appearances at the Over 60 Club birthday party and at the Embassy Ballroom which ran a lucky dance night in advance of the film's opening, taking ad space to announce Leo's appearance with the barrel, awarding prizes of tickets for the Central Cinema and for dances at the ballroom and portraits of the stars of "Everybody's Cheering."

Many of the city's institutions for the sick, orphans, etc., phoned to Tenser asking that the Lucky Dip Barrel and Leo the Lion visit them. The theatre reaped much publicity through the appearance of Leo and the "dip" every night in the foyer where prizes of star photos, etc., were given out.

The Cambridge Daily News gave the stunt unusual space describing it in detail..

Leo's Lucky Dip received so much publicity that the name became a household word through the week's promotional campaign.

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Ambush

MGM Western Drama 89 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A slowly-developing western with the U. S. Cavalry tangling with Indians, that will find favor with the youngsters, and with adults who like "horse opera" with hard riding and fighting, capably acted.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do more than average business in theatres with a clientele that favors westerns. For more critical audiences, dual it with a comedy. There are three names for the marquee.

Cast: Robert Taylor, John Hodiak, Arlene Dahl, Don Taylor, Jean Hagen, Bruce Cowling, Leon Ames, John McIntire, Pat Moriarty, Charles Stevens, Chief Thundercloud, Ray Teal, Robin Short, Richard Bailey, cavalrymen and Indians. Credits: A Sam Wood Production. Directed by Sam Wood. Produced by Armand Deutsch. Screenplay by Marguerite Roberts, based on a story by Luke Short. Photography by Harold Lipstein.

Plot: Indian Scout Robert Taylor refuses to scout for Major Leon Ames to rescue Arlene Dahl's sister from the Apache Indians, who are on the warpath, until he meets Arlene, who is the sweetheart of Capt. John Hodiak. Taylor then changes his mind, goes as guide with the cavalry as it sets out to exterminate the Indians. The encamped Indians are defeated after Taylor stampedes their horses and rescues Arlene's sister. By hiding in fox holes in a plain the Indians ambush Hodiak's force and exterminate them before the second squad of troops arrive. Taylor kills the Apache chief and at the end he and Arlene are together.

Comment: A slowly-developing western with the U. S. Cavalry tangling with the Apache Indians in Arizona in 1878, that will find favor with the youngsters, and with adults who like "horse opera" with hard riding and fighting, capably acted. Several fight sequences arouse considerable excitement. Judicious cutting would speed up the action. The story has an extraneous love story of a lieutenant with an enlisted man's wife that could be spared. The Arizona desert scenery is majestic in its rocky barrenness, and often beautiful; its picturesqueness has been well caught by Harold Lipstein's camera. Taylor is his usual self, but in western costume, and acts the scout in his customary manner, though with more facial expression than is customary. His fist fight with Hodiak, in which he is defeated, is well staged. Hodiak acts the role of the opinionated and brash captain with self-righteous restraint, except for the fist fight. Miss Dahl is charming to look at, as usual, and gives a nice performance. Other cast members give good support.

Twelve O'Clock High

20th-Fox War Drama 132 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An extraordinarily well-produced drama of the Air Force which should impress all who see it. Even the women who would ordinarily not be interested in this type of man's picture should enjoy it for its performance and superb craftsmanship.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Men, of course, should flock to it, and the marquee strength of Gregory Peck should attract the feminine element.

Plot: This is the story of the difficulties encountered by an Air Force general in England who enforces stern discipline when he takes command of a group whose morale is low because of losses suffered in daylight precision raids over Germany.

Comment: Magnificently acted, produced and directed, "Twelve O'Clock High" is a war picture of extraordinary merit in all departments. This story of daylight precision raids over Germany in 1942, when morale was at low ebb because of serious losses and lack of replacements, has been brought to the screen with dramatic power. With Gregory Peck heading a splendid cast, Director Henry King has turned out a smooth-running production in which each individual delineation is sharply etched. Aside from Peck's outstanding portrayal of the outwardly stern but basically human commander, Dean Jagger scores an acting triumph in a characterization that is human, sympathetic and understanding. Excellent, too, in top parts are Millard Mitchell, Hugh Marlowe, Gary Merrill, Robert Arthur and Paul Stewart. As a matter of fact, all the supporting players do fine jobs. "Twelve O'Clock High" is bound to impress all who see it, even the most captious critics. From the audience standpoint, it is mainly a picture for men, for there are details of organization and other Air Force factors that will appeal mainly to them. Only one female cast member, Joyce Mackenzie, appears briefly as a nurse. From the box-office standpoint, women moviegoers must be reckoned with. Once they are in the theatre, of course, they are almost certain to be moved by the splendid performances and the admiration they will feel for the men who helped win the war through sheer courage during the early days of the Air Force. The Gregory Peck name should prove a strong box-office magnet for the feminine element, since it rates right along with the title in billing credits. Producer Darryl F. Zanuck and Director King deserve plaudits for their signal success in making a superior drama of the Air Force.

The Rugged O'Riordans

(Made in Australia)

Universal's Drama 88 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Shot against the magnificent background of Queensland, Australia, this story of a pioneer family hits a high note of interest and suspense and maintains it to the last scene.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Here is an Australian production that ranks with superior American films. Without star names, it will have to be exploited but it is worthy of effort.

Cast: John O'Malley, Thelma Scott, Michael Pate, Wendy Gibb, Ken Wayne. Credits: Produced and directed by Charles Chauvel. Screenplay by Charles and Elsa Chauvel. Photography by Bert Nicholas and Carl Kayser.

Plot: An Irish pioneer and his wife send their five strong sons to Queensland to carve a family home, large enough to support them all, out of the wilderness of a high plateau. This is the story of the sons' struggle with nature.

Comment: This Australian picture of a family's fight to conquer the natural forces of a new land, and of the rivalry between two brothers for the love of a woman, ranks with superior American product. The panorama of magificent natural scenery gives the film a sense of scope and the story itself is as rugged and vital as its setting and characters. Especially strong are the performances of Michael Pate, as the oldest son who supplies force and leadership in the struggle against the jungle, and of Ken Wayne, the dissenter. The rivalry between Pate and Wayne for the love of Wendy Gibb is as elemental as the earth they conquer and results inevitably in violence and serious injury to Pate. Thelma Scott as the mother and John O'Malley as the father give powerful and sensitive performances. Without exception performances are strong and natural. Production values are superb and direction excellent. The picture should repay exploitation.

Mrs. Mike

United Artists Drama 98 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Audiences will find inspiring entertainment in this appealing, heart-warming story of a great love between a man and woman facing the rigors of a harsh land in the Canadian wilderness. From every standpoint, this picture has been beautifully done.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Based on entertainment value alone, this should have a wide and enthusiastic audience. But the popularity of the novel should also account for a large public eager to see the screen version. The Powell and Keyes names provide additional box-office drawing power.

Cast: Dick Powell, Evelyn Keyes, J. M. Kerrigan, Angela Clarke, John Miljan, Nan Boardman, Will Wright, Frances Morris, Joel Nestler, Jean Inness, Chief Yowlatchie, Fred Aldrich, Clarence Straight, Gary Lee Jackson, Romere Darling, Archie Leonard, James Fairfax, Robin Camp, Donald Pietro, Janet Sackett, Judith Sackett. Credits: Presented by Nassour Studio in association with Huntington Hartford. Executive producer, Samuel Bischoff. Produced by Edward Gross. Directed by Louis King. Screenplay by Alfred Lewis Levitt and DeWitt Bodeen. Based on the novel by Benedict and Nancy Freedman. Photography, Joseph Biroc. Special effects, Lee Zavitz. Art direction, Arthur Lonergan. Musical supervisor, Max Steiner.

Plot: A North West Mounted policeman takes a Boston girl into the arctic north as his wife. Her adjustment to the demands of her new life is a difficult struggle, but she meets the challenge and through the tragedy of an epidemic and the loss of her baby becomes a mature sympathetic woman.

Comment: The power and simplicity of Benedict and Nancy Freedman's novel, "Mrs. Mike," have been brought to the screen in a heart-warming, sensitively handled film that will be inspiring entertainment to all who see it. The picture is even better than the book, for it has a stronger appeal to the emotions. It goes right to the heart and stays there. Dick Powell as Sergeant Mike of the Mounted, who serves unselfishly and with a deep sense of responsibility the people in his territory, achieves true depth and feeling in undoubtedly his finest performance to date. And equally as good, in a portrayal that stamps her as one of the screen's finest actresses, is Evelyn Keyes as his wife, the city girl who rises to the demands of a new and harsh life. Angela Clarke as the understanding and indomitable Sarah, Nan Boardman, Will Wright, Frances Morris, Joel Nestler and the entire cast are all excellent. The musical score under the supervision of Max Steiner admirably sustains the mood of the picture, and the direction of Louis King derives maximum value from both story and cast. From every standpoint, "Mrs. Mike" has been beautifully done. It's a picture to thrill and warm the hearts of all who see it, and based on entertainment value alone, it should have a wide and enthusiastic audience. The book upon which it is based was also very popular, which should account for a large public eager to see the screen version. The highest credit goes to Executive Producer Samuel Bischoff, Producer Edward Gross, Director King, Scripters Alfred Lewis Levitt and Dewitt Bodeen, and all who had a hand in the film's making, for their splendid accomplishment. Exhibitors will be glad they're in the movie business when they play "Mrs. Mike."

'The Amazing Mr. Beecham'

One of the most amusing of the little English comedies, this is also, it must be noted, one of the most British. It guys impartially the conservative traditions and the recent political trends in its country. That did not stop the play upon which it is based, "Yes, M'Lord," from playing Broadway. Like the play, the film stars A. E. Matthews. It has additionally the familiar Cecil Parker. Where English pictures are appreciated, and especially in art houses, this one should be very good. Jock MacGregor reviewed it from London when it was titled "Chiltern Hundreds" (STR, Aug. 27, 1949).

Battle of the Rails

(French Dialog—English Titles, Narration)

Mayer-Burstyn Documentary 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Very superior, powerful account of the resistance the Nazi invaders encountered from the French railroad workers.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Advance critical recognition and the exciting nature of the material should help more general houses using the proper co-feature, as well as art houses, to benefit from this.

Cast: Charles Boyer (introduction and narration), Clarieux, Daurand, Desagneaux, Tony Laurent, Leray, Lozach, Pauleon, Rauzena, Redon, Salina, Woll, and the railroad workers of France. Credits: Directed and produced by Rene Clement for the French National Railroads. Written by Colette Audry. Photography, Henri Alekan. Music, Yves Baudrier. English titles, Vera Cerutti.

Comment: A documentary on the resistance of the French railroad workers to the Nazi occupation forces, especially their constant sabotage of the Germans' frantic efforts to hasten reinforcements to the Normandy sector, this film won a Grand Prize at the Cannes Film Festival several years ago and has been shown (without sub-titles) at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. The consequent publicity has made foreign film fans long aware of it and they doubtless form a ready audience. The exciting nature of the material should attract other patrons both to art houses and to more general theatres which use the proper co-feature. Such audiences will find this picture very superior; though it's a documentary of long feature length, the director has so alternated suspense and impact that interest can never flag, and the technical and pictorial excellence of the photography keep constant the key of realism.

Theatre Management

Guide to Modern Methods in the Administrative and Executive Phases of Theatre Operation

Show Sense

Jack Jackson

Not in 1949? Then Do It in 1950!

This being the day before Christmas, probably the best wish that this column can offer all its readers is that the starting lines of that well-known nursery rhyme, "not a creature was stirring, not even a mouse," will never be an accurate description of attendance at your theatre. I sincerely hope—perhaps futilely—that you've been jamming 'em in all through December and that you've laid the kind of plans that predicate a pretty profit picture for 1950.

Barring extreme and unforeseen happenings, the week ahead is practically profit-proof. The 7-day vacation from revenue worries offers an excellent opportunity to throw the error-illuminating spotlight of "hindsight" on business acts and procedures of 1949. And, in case you haven't given 1950 prospects a thorough scanning, to make use of the experience of past mistakes to fabricate a pattern for future success.

What follows is, of necessity, speculative and not calculated as applicable to any particular individual authority or individual theatre. It is simply a resume in retrospect of 1949's general problems as related to theatre operation and general conditions as related to the industry. It is intended only to stimulate reflection and bring about examination of the reader's conscience as to the good-and-bad or the right-and-wrong of business decisions and actions during the past twelve months. Should it succeed in revealing instances of poor or improper analysis, careless planning, unwarranted expense, lack of consideration for the problems of business adversaries, failure to meticulously calculate eventual effect or any of dozens of mental lapses that boomeranged good intentions to the discredit and failure areas, the purpose of chronicling will have been fully accomplished.

Let's examine the hypothetical record.

Have you actually analyzed the attendance of your theatre to determine the very maximum rental you can afford to pay for film?

In view of the constant effort on the part of distributors to elevate revenue, this is extremely important. And, it is extremely important that you be very cautious yet very fair in arriving at your conclusions. You bear a double burden; first, in responsibility to the patrons of your theatre to provide them the best entertainment available and, second, to the producer and distributor faced with the necessity of liquidating extravagantly increased costs in a sizably reduced—because of foreign quotas, bans and restrictions—field of exhibition revenue.

Every Picture Deserves Fair Share of Its Exhibition Earnings

Understand that this is no argument for higher film rentals where they cannot be profitably absorbed. It is simply a matter of soliciting your acknowledgment of an existing condition that you, in the interest of industry welfare and the continuance of good film product, should give understanding consideration. If the quality of pictures should drop—and it must drop unless adequate revenue to assure the risk of high quality production is maintained—the attendance at your theatre also drops. It is imperative that you, as the public point of contact for this tri-cornered industry, shoulder your full share of responsibility in maintaining the product standard on which patronage depends. Every picture—and the higher-budgeted ones in particular—deserves a fair share of its exhibition earnings. It is your duty, to the perpetuation of your theatre and the industry as a whole, to make certain that your local engagement is as profitable for all concerned as you can possibly make it.

Have you always used the best possible judgment in arranging bookings?

Here again is a place where you can do great good or great harm not only for the immediate receipts of the attraction but for the future business of your theatre. If you have allowed your mercenary streak to get the best of you on occasions where some local event promised the presence of large crowds, and booked some just so-so film at flat rental that guaranteed exorbitant profit, you've been amiss. Such practice, while returning immediate dollars, does long-range harm in that it gives the spectator the impression of having been "took" or the victim of an unfair practice. The normal reaction is not so good for the industry, as it accounts for the saying of a lot of uncomplimentary things about your theatre in particular and movies in general. The wiser course is to use eveery occasion where unusual potential can be ex-

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Projectionists sometimes find a little difficulty in interpreting the "temperature rise" warnings found on the nameplates of some of their equipment. They know the warnings mean that the working temperature of the device in question must not be allowed to exceed the room temperature by more than the number of degrees specified. But manufacturers for some reason tend to inscribe these warnings in degrees Centigrade, whereas thermometers ordinarily available to projectionists in the U. S. are calibrated in degrees Fahrenheit. It may help to remember that 40 degrees Centigrade (the limit most often specified) equals 104 degrees Fahrenheit. To convert other C temperatures to F, first multiply the temperature by 9/5ths and then add 32 to the result. To convert F temperatures to C scale, first subtract 32 and then multiply the remainder by 5/9ths.

All electrical meters in the projection room are subject to loss of accuracy with passage of time, and should be checked occasionally, either against a master meter or at least against one another. Particularly in need of watching are meters mounted on the larger arc lamps, because these may be harmed in time by the powerful magnetic field that accompanies the heavy arc amperage.

Large sound amplifiers are not always electrically safe because they have been switched off. Unless there are bleeders across the filter condensers, those condensers may keep in storage a charge powerful enough to throw a man off his feet. Before working on any such amplifiers, first make sure current is off, and then short-circuit all the larger condensers with a screwdriver that has an all-wood handle.

To make sure of a good and permanent soldered connection, never use the soldering iron or other heat source to melt the solder. Use it to heat the surfaces to be joined, and let them melt the solder. If the soldering iron isn't large enough for that, it isn't large enough for projection room work.

For many years, projectionists in the larger deluxe houses have been supplied with binoculars, to enable them to observe their screen results accurately in spite of the great length of "throw." Managers of drive-ins might well consider making the same provision for their projectionists, seeing that the distanse from lens to screen in a merely average drive-in is apt to be more than twice that of the largest indoor showplace.

The old-fashioned slotted screw that took a simple screwdriver is becoming increasingly obsolete. If any of the newer apparatus in the projection room is put together with Phillips screws or other such devices, the projection room will also need a corresponding set of Phillips screwdrivers, etc., for proper maintenance and rapid repairs.

PARADE OF PROGRESS DISPLAY. Some $3,000 worth of prizes were displayed in the lobby of the Strand Theatre, Lakewood, N. J., for the 10-day Parade of Progress which the resort community staged recently. The Strand Theatre did a bang-up job in landing its full facilities during the event, according to Herbert R. Mandell, director of publicity for the Township of Lakewood, Department of Advertising and Civic Display. For details of the observance, see story below.

Strand's Lakewood Boosting Redounds to Its Own Benefit

Participation of the Strand Theatre was an important factor in the success of the 10-day Parade of Progress with which the winter resort season of Lakewood, N. J., was opened this year. The theatre's cooperation in the campaign redounded also to its own benefit, through both the immediate publicity and the goodwill engendered among merchants and town officials.

The activities at the theatre were numerous. In the lobby some $3,000 worth of prizes were displayed throughout the period. They bore famous brand names, being the products of members of Brand Names Foundation, Inc. That group, the Lakewood Chamber of Commerce and the Lakewood Hotel Association were co-sponsors of the Parade of Progress. Some of the prizes were for winners of essay and golf contests, but most were to go to a Brand Names Quiz Queen and her runners-up. She was chosen after five 20-minute preliminary run-offs as part of the evening shows at the Strand. Mornings, too, found the theatre busy, with a series of fashion and homemaker shows and a baby contest drawing full houses.

The theatre was performing a role in a drama that was town-wide. Participation under these circumstances meant all the publicity assistance that could be mustered by the three powerful sponsoring groups and the many individual cooperating merchants. It meant space in local publications, of which Lakewood has many for its size. It meant mention in all the stores where quiz contest entry blanks were distributed. It meant personal contact with the theatre for patrons previously unfamiliar with its facilities—especially important in a resort town.

Not to be underestimated is the goodwill. "A bang-up job," say public officials, "the community is paying high praise."

Loew's, Brooklyn Eagle Give Party for Orphans

With the cooperation of the Brooklyn Eagle, Loew's Theatres gave a Christmas party on Friday morning (23) for 2,000 youngsters and supervisors of Brooklyn institutions for orphans. The event took place at the Kings Theatre. In addition to the screen show, every child received a toy and a bag of Christmas candy.

pected to exhibit the finest available pictures and thereby make friends of all patrons for your theatre.

Have you always been awake to the prospect of effecting contacts on a local basis that tie to the national advertising campaigns of the producer—distributor?

Your local magazine dealer is usually amenable to approach for the insertion of handbills or mimeographed memo giving theatre playdate in magazines carrying stories or advertisements of big pictures. There is also the possibility of getting notices on newsstands, signs on his delivery vehicles, etc. More important is the effecting of local cooperation on national tieups. When nationwide radio hookups are arranged, when the cooperation of large manufacturers is secured, when units of merchandise are named for some star or feature film, make sure that you get every atom of cooperation possible from local dealers handling the product. With the radio station, buy time immediately preceding and following the program to announce playdates at your theatre.

Have you always been particularly careful in the makeup of your newspaper ads?

So many theatre operators turn this important job over to the newspaper ad solicitor or to some unschooled member of the theatre staff. If you check your advertising expenditure, you'll find that newspaper ads represent the largest portion of this outlay. As such, it evolves upon you to make sure that every word possesses the greatest possible magnetism to attract patronage. The same goes for radio announcements. Only through the use of extreme care can you make sure that your invitation to visit your theatre—and that's exactly what your news ads and radio announcements are—is couched in the kind of wordage you would use in extending an invitation to spend an evening at your family fireside. Attention to this department will also enable you to avoid instances where art or copy are not in keeping with the preferences of your patrons.

'Talk Shop'

Have you made it a point to visit and "talk shop" with the religious, social and civic leaders and groups of your community?

Setting aside several hours each week for seeking out the people at the heads of these groups and maneuvering the discussion around to the movies and what you have coming to your theatre—and depending on them to spread the news to others—has been the foundation on which many theatres have managed to build consistent patronage. It is always wise to check with the religious, social and civic leaders about activities being planned for their respective groups. Offering the services of your theatre to spearhead worthwhile movements, as a place of meeting, as a magnet to make their efforts successful, is a manifestation of unselfishness that will be rewarded times over in goodwill and patronage. It may even be possible for you to arrange the booking of some appropriate attraction that emphasizes or ties-in with the contemplated effort. And, it's certain that you can circumvent the inroads made by itinerants on the local amusement budget if you keep your theatre ever in the forefront of civic and social thinking.

Have you always made it a practice to carefully check the work of your cleaners and maintenance personnel?

Not only the "face" you show to the customers but the size of your bank balance is at stake here. Unchecked and unsupervised, the finest cleaning staff in the world becomes lax and neglectful. Your personal knowledge of your theatre, where the best work is needed and where extra care is essential, is the only way of guaranteeing the important factors of cleanliness, comfort and convenience to your patrons. It is also the only way of accurately gauging expenditures against accomplishment, and the number of dollars wasted in this department staggers the imagination. A schedule to guide the work is necessary for best results. See that each unit of service and accommodation is listed with instructions as to specified periods of attention. Then make sure each job is thoroughly done via the personal supervision routine.

Have you always lent your whole effort in assisting programs for the general good of the community or have you considered your share fulfilled when you've made some trifling contribution of cash or assistance?

Whether you are Mr. Big or Mr. Little in your community depends entirely on the extent of your cooperation in these events. The reward you enjoy, big or small, is an exact and accurate reflection of the importance the community attaches to you and your theatre. Get in the very forefront of every movement for community good. It's the safest, surest and cheapest way of making your business a solid part of the lives of the people. And that, my friend, is what assures consistent profit.

Have you always manifested ultimate pride in your business? Have you always explained its occasional sins and exploited its many virtues?

You can do yourself and the industry a heap of good by being on the alert for scandalous comment and checking it—through reasonable explanation—before it begins flying rampant through the vicinity. This industry has an unusually fine record in every field of national and human relations, but the media of news dissemination all to frequently exploits the occasional sin rather than the multitude of virtue. A visit with the editor will correct such an attitude in your local journal, and occasional chats with business friends and others about the accomplishments of the industry will serve to build resistance to the infrequent lapses from accepted public standards. Remember, Mr. Theatreman, you are Hollywood on the Main Street of your town. Don't let them speak disparagingly of you or your business. Be quick to discourage scandal. It hurts at your boxoffice.

How about your employe personnel? Have you taken the time to school them in the requisites of their respective jobs?

A few years ago we had a dearth of available helps that put us on the spot where we had to grab anybody who could wear a uniform to meet demands of flooding patronage. We've become aware of the fact that the patronage flood has ended, but somehow or other we're still lax in correcting the help situation. That upgrading the help will upgrade business must be accepted as fact. Polite reception and service, from "how many?" to "good night," will do an awful lot to increase ticket sales. Take the time to select the proper new employes and spend the time to acquaint them with their job. Try to instill in them a pride in their association with this glamorous industry and make them feel that the responsibility for proper reception and service to every customer is a privilege as well as a duty. Remember that no organization is stronger than its weakest member. Eliminate those who are weak and replace them with efficient, courteous help.

Selection of Shorts

Do you always use the greatest possible care in the selection of shorts and their placement in building a balanced screen program?

To many theatre operators this important exhibition duty is seriously neglected. Most build programs with the element of time, rather than audience enjoyment and entertainment, in mind. Shorts should be carefully selected to blend with and build the enjoyment quotient of the screen program. Occasional exceptions are permissable when all-comedy, all-terror, etc., shows are being presented, but the best normal program is one that includes a variety of entertainment and closes on a happy note. Now that the forcing of shorts is banned, it is possible for you to make a selective buy of the kind of reels that are best received by your audiences. From these—and if you find it necessary you can spot book—it is always possible to build a show of wide and varied entertainment appeal that will meet with majority approval. Using the short product to influence attendance of certain segments of patron potential has been practiced successfully by many theatre operators even to the extent of—on occasion—subordinating the feature attraction in appealing to the interest of the particular group for which the short holds appeal.

I suppose I should include a few words about your "Human Relations." How you treat your employes and the extent of their remuneration as compared to your profit, but I've been doing that for years and possibly aggravating your digestive tracts. Aside from that, your own observations will provide better food for thought than any suggestion of mine.

Anyway, this year I just want to close with MERRY CHRISTMAS, EVERYBODY.

Psychology Basic to Picture-Making—King

Henry King

Psychology plays an important part in picture-making, according to Henry King, ace 20th Century-Fox director, whose current release is the swashbuckling, adventure melodrama of feudal Italy, "Prince of Foxes," and whose "Twelve O'Clock High" is soon to be released.

"The top director must be a master of psychology," said King. "A broad knowledge of the subject and dexterity in applying this knowledge are indispensable tools of the trade. The subtle and intuitive feeling for audience reaction that is second nature to the successful director is neither an inherited trait nor a magical gift.

"The sure touch in casting types, the recognition of the kind of face that will be accepted by an audience immediately as belonging to the characterization desired, is given to no man as a natural endowment.

"Sensing the crucial point when rehearsals should stop and shooting should begin, knowing which player responds to sympathetic, easy handling and which does best under pressure from the director again is an acquired ability.

"These abilities are indispensable and basic to the qualifications of the capable director, and today they must be subtly and deftly evident in all his work. The blatantly obvious leer and mustache-twirling of the 'gay nineties' villain is not acceptable screen fare today.

"These abilities are not inherited. They are won through long experience, hard work, and a broad knowledge of humanity. Applied psychology is the director's assurance that a picture will be good, the exhibitor's assurance that it will bring dollars to the box-office."

'Streetcar Named Desire' To be Made by Warners

Negotiations have been concluded between Warner Bros. and Charles K. Feldman Group Productions for Elia Kazan's production of the Tennessee Williams stage play, "A Streetcar Named Desire." This is the second Williams stage play to be produced at Warners, the other having been "The Glass Menagerie."

"A Streetcar Named Desire" received the 1948 Pulitzer Prize award as the best play of the year and the 1947-48 New York Drama Critics Circle award as the best Broadway production of the year. Productions are currently running in England, Rome, Stockholm, Copenhagen and Mexico City.

Holt Begins Activities For '50-51 Productions

Returning to his offices at Motion Picture Center after a three-week vacation, Producer Nat Holt has begun active preparation for a 1950-51 production schedule designed to equal or surpass the trio of high-bracket western features completed in the past 18 months for 20th Century-Fox release. Heading the list of next year's productions will be a pioneer railroad construction story on an epic scale and in color.

Late in January Holt will leave on a three-week air tour of exchange centers in the U. S. and Canada. He will consult with distributors, circuit operators and leading exhibitors on his forthcoming production program.

PFC Begins Filming 'Second Chance'

At the request of the Presbyterian Church U.S.A., the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed Church, the Protestant Film Commission has started production on "Second Chance," Faith Baldwin story concerning a woman who re-lives her life and thus has a second chance to become a practicing Christian. Box-Office Slants to satisfy the average action fan's desire for this type of entertainment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Advertising and marquee strength of the Farley Granger-Cathy O'Donnell names should help put this across in most situations.

Cast: Farley Granger, Cathy O'Donnell, James Craig, Paul Kelly, Jean Hagen, Paul Harvey, Edmon Ryan, Charles McGraw, Ed Max, Adele Jergens, Harry Bellaver, Whit Bissell, John Gallaudet, Esther Somers, Harry Antrim. Credits: Directed by Anthony Mann. Story and screenplay by Sydney Boehm. Photography, Joseph Ruttenberg. Produced by Sam Zimbalist.

Plot: A young man steals some money so he can give his wife some of the comforts necessary for the arrival of their baby. In doing so he becomes involved in murder, blackmail and other nefarious deeds but clears himself in time to avoid a murder rap.

Comment: This involved murder drama gives one an interesting glimpse into the lives of a work-a-day young couple trying to straighten out their economic problems. It moves at a good pace, but has a plot that necessitates an audience's undivided attention, if no points are to be lost. The action addicts should like it, for it is packed with enough excitement to keep them absorbed and satisfy their desire for this type of entertainment. Picture reunites the team of Farley Granger and Cathy O'Donnell, both of whom turn in fine performances as the young married couple who are suddenly catapulted into a dramatic maze of robbery and murder. James Craig gives a convincing portrayal of the ruthless killer and Paul Kelly does a fine job as the Inspector whose business is murder. Film introduces a new personality in lovely Jean Hagen, who turns in an impressive performance in one of the top roles; the kind of portrayal that will arouse interest in her future work. Director Anthony Mann is to be credited with maintaining a swift pace and filling the picture with lots of tough action and some tender love scenes. Sam Zimbalist produced.

Johnny Holiday

United Artists Drama 92 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An interesting and absorbing drama dealing with juvenile delinquency. Filmed against the background of the Indiana Boys School the picture has authenticity, and performances are first class.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Highly exploitable subject matter should help this rack up good business wherever it plays. The William Bendix name on the marquee and the work being done with the Kiwanis Clubs gives it many a pre-sold audience.

Cast: William Bendix, Allen Martin, Jr., Stanley Clements, Jack Hagen, Herbert Newcomb, Donald Gallagher, Greta Granstedt, George Cisar, Leo Cleary, Leo Curley, Alma Platt, Jeanne Juvelier, Governor Henry F. Schricker of Indiana, Hoagy Carmichael, Buddy Cole and the Staff and Boys of the Indiana Boys School. Credits: Directed by Willis Goldbeck. Story by R. W. Alcorn. Screenplay by Willis Goldbeck, Jack Andrews, Frederick Stephani. Photography, Hal Mohr. Produced by R. W. Alcorn.

Plot: Influence of an older boy turns a youngster into a thief and he is sent to a school for rehabilitation. There he transfers his idolatry from the crooked boy to the man in charge of the farm and the horses. Trouble starts when the other boy also lands at the school. However, all ends well, for the older boy is sent to prison and out of the youngster's life when he tries to kill the man who won the youngster's affections.

Comment: "Johnny Holiday" is an interesting and absorbing drama. It is highly exploitable, for the subject is woven around the rehabilitation program instituted at the Indiana Boys School, where delinquent boys are sent for another start in life. Entertaining throughout, it gives an informati glimpse into the work done there, withc deviating from the main story of the youngster turned criminal under the influence of an older, psychopathic boy. The competent cast, headed by William Bendix and young Allen Martin, handle their assignments in first-class manner. Young Martin deserves special credit for his work, for this is his first appearance before a motion picture camera. Stanley Clements gives a strong, vigorous portrayal of the older boy. Hoagy Carmichael, Buddy Cole and Governor Henry F. Schricker of Indiana are also in individual sequences, while the staff and boys of the school are utilized for background. "Johnny Holiday" should rack up good business at the box-office because of the Kiwanis Clubs sponsorship throughout the nation. They have already held the world premiere in Indianapolis for the benefit of the National Kids Day Foundation, and plan on holding many more showings through their organization. Other local civic organizations should cooperate in bringing this film to the attention of the general public, for it is an entertaining, informative attraction. Producer Alcorn displays a thorough understanding of the characters, backgrounds and situations which he wove into his story and which Director Willis Goldbeck, with his fine direction, brought to life.

'Give Us This Day'

"A connoisseur's piece with undeniable popular appeal" were the well-chosen words of our London correspondent in his review (STR, Oct. 22, 1949) of this film version of Pietro Di Donato's novel, "Christ in Concrete." Director Edward Dmytryk has projected, now with soft warmth, now with harsh power, the life of an Italian bricklayer in Brooklyn in the 1920s: his family, his fellow-workmen, the depression, an unsafe but desperately undertaken building project. Performance of the leading roles by American Sam Wanamaker and Italian Lea Padovani (wonderful, both), plus the setting, remove this film from its "British" category. It's an art house "must" with the human drama and woman's angle to commend it to any situation not absolutely banking on star-names. Runs long—120 mins. An Eagle Lion release.

The Rocking Horse Winner

(Reviewed in London)

Rank. Drama 90 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Breaking away from the conventional, this is an intriguing adult drama about a sensitive child and a spendthrift mother, with particularly strong appeal for discriminating audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: While it is an art house natural, this will be a problem picture in most other situations. Greatly in its favor are the fine characterizations, sensitive direction and an enchanting performance by ten-year-old John Howard Davies. Weighed against it is the vaguely suggested supernatural background.

Cast: Valerie Hobson, John Howard Davies, Ronald Squire, John Mills, Hugh Sinclair, Charles Goldner, Susan Richards, Cyril Smith, Anthony Holles and others. Credits: From the short story by D. H. Lawrence. Screenplay and direction by Anthony Pelissier. Music by William Alwyn, played by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra (Leader David McCallum) Conducted by Muir Mathieson. A John Mills Production presented by J. Arthur Rank.

Plot: Valerie Hobson, an ambitious spendthrift, constantly nags her spineless husband to earn more. Their son, John Howard Davies, is extremely sensitive and believes their house is restless because of this lack of money. Neglected by his mother, his confidante is John Mills, the handy man who was once a jockey, who tells him tall stories of the turf and betting coups. While riding his rocking horse, the child gets inspirations about winners and with Mills' aid backs these and amasses a fortune to help his mother. His uncle learns of this but keeps his secret and arranges for a large sum to be diverted to Valerie without her knowing the origin. Things start going badly and the kid worries himself into a brainstorm trying to forecast the Derby Winner. This he does, but dies in the effort.

Comment: D. H. Lawrence's strange story of an unhappy little boy's uncanny foretelling of racehorse winners has been slightly adapted at the request of the censors who frown on the glorification of "Lady L---k." Frankly, it is not ideal conventional cinema and may be above the general run of cinemagoers. It is, however, extremely intriguing and thought-provoking. The performances are impeccable. Valerie Hobson's careless mother, Ronald Squire's kindly uncle and John Mills' understanding handy man are all beautifully drawn. John Howard Davies' neglected kid is a touchingly sincere piece of acting and will go far towards making the film acceptable to wider audiences. The supernatural angle is barely hinted at but nevertheless plays a vital part in the story. Anthony Pelissier has directed skillfully and has been helped in no mean manner by William Alwyn's brilliant musical score which accentuates the eerie atmosphere to an almost unbearable degree on occasions. This is an intelligent, polished piece of screencraft which should be among the most successful art houses offerings exported from Britain.

Paid in Full

Paramount Drama 104 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A strong dramatic offering for those who find entertainment in a story of love and sacrifice. Fine performances by a good cast help put over a tale which women will most readily understand.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Name-draw and exploitation possibilities should bring in satisfactory returns.

Cast: Robert Cummings, Lizabeth Scott, Diana Lynn, Eve Arden, Ray Collins, Frank McHugh, Stanley Ridges, Louis Jean Heydt, John Bromfield, Kristine Miller, Laura Elliot, Ida Moore, James Nolan, Rolland Morris, Geraldine Wall, Laura Lee Michel, Margaret Field, Jane Novak. Credits: Directed by William Dieterle. Screenplay by Robert Blees and Charles Schnee. Photography, Leo Tover. Suggested by a Reader's Digest story by Frederic M. Loomis, M.D. A Hal Wallis Production.

Plot: Having brought up a younger sister, the older one helps her win the man they both love. When the marriage fails because of the wife's selfishness, and because their child is killed and the wife cannot have another, the older sister sacrifices her life by bringing a child into the world and turning it over to the married couple.

Comment: Except for a slow pace, this tragic tale of love and sacrifice should hold the attention of any audience interested in fine performances and strong, dramatic fare. In the main it is a woman's picture, for women are more likely to understand the reason for a young girl sacrificing her life and the man she loves, because of an imaginary loyalty to a younger sister. A large and capable cast, under William Dieterle's direction, turn in good performances with Robert Cummings, Lizabeth Scott and Diana Lynn making up the triangle around which the plot revolves. Cummings, as always, is excellent in the role of the man both sisters love. Miss Lynn capably handles the part of the selfish spoiled sister for whom Lizabeth Scott sacrifices her life. Miss Scott gives a good portrayal of the older sister, although one finds it difficult to accept the character. That fine actress Eve Arden has little to do in a role that has nothing to offer for her exceptional talents. "Paid in Full" has good exploitation possibilities which, if taken advantage of, should bring in satisfactory returns at the box-office. Hal Wallis produced.

Without Pity

Lux Film Drama 95 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Italy in its postwar naturalistic vein again. Story of a Negro soldier and a destitute girl. Uneven.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Notable selling angles for foreign film theatres. Not real art house material and out of the running for the South and small towns.

Cast: Carla Del Poggio, John Kitzmiller, Pierre Claudc, Giulietta Masina, Folco Lulli, Lando Muzio, Enza Giovine. Credits: Director, Alberto Latuada. Story, Federico Fellini and Tulio Pinelli. Photography, Aldo Tonti. English titles, Clare Catalano.

Plot: An American Negro soldier in trouble with the Army, and a destitute Italian girl, decide to leave Italy together. He steals money from a blackmarket leader and in the following chase the girl is killed. The soldier commits suicide.

Comment: "Without Pity" is much too uneven to be real art house material and its sex and color business, plus the not flattering picture of American GIs, remove it from the running in the South and small towns. This latest Italian film in the postwar naturalistic vein does, however, have several notable selling angles for foreign film houses in the cities. Leading lady Carla Del Poggio is one of the Italian starlets featured in a Life spread Nov. 7, possible source of a nice theatre front blowup. Leading man John Kitzmiller is the Negro actor who made his mark in "To Live in Peace." Director Alberto Latuada, responsible also for "The Bandit" and the yet-to-come "The Mill on the Po," is being mentioned by highbrows in the same breath with Rossellini and DeSica. The predominant theme of this film is provocative. And the distinction of banning has been conferred in the American and British zones of Germany.

The Children

(Swedish dialog—English titles)

Scandia Films Drama 101 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Long and leisurely exploitation of child appeal. Performers capable.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Best bets are Swedish centers and not too urban situations which can take a foreign film.

Cast: Hans Lindgren, Siv Hansson, Anders Nystrom, Fiffi Honeth, Ulf Berggren, Paula Jagaeus, Christina Jagaeus, John Ericsson and others. Credits: Producer, S. Bauman. Director, Rolf Husberg. Screenplay, Rolf Husberg. Based on Laura Fitinghoff's novel, "Children of the Moor." Photography, O. Nordemar. English titles, A. Nostam.

Plot: A family of seven children, orphaned by their mother's death, seek to avoid the poorhouse by trekking to another part of the country. They encounter snow, hunger and a few unsympathetic adults, but one by one they are adopted by kindly people.

Comment: The nights are long in Sweden and the movies made accordingly, or so it may occur to some Americans who view them. A case in point is "The Children," a 101-minute opus with no relieving moments of speed. In deliberate and leisurely fashion it deals with the odyssey of these unfortunates and the havens they find, child by child. Accurately titled, the film exploits every possible facet of child appeal. The older performers happen to be capable and the younger ones, in their naivete, quite charming. The plot has drama, if not dramatically treated. Best bets for "The Children" seem to be Swedish centers and not too urban situations which can take a foreign film.

'Birth of a Ballet'

This 30-minute short is tops for art houses and very good for other theatres that can capitalize on the presence in town of a ballet troupe. The basic positions, movements and dances of ballet and the work of the composer, choreographer and set designer are illustrated by members of the Sadler's Wells Ballet and described by Robert Helpmann of that company and the film "The Red Shoes." The film concludes with a short ballet. Alexander Shaw produced for the Crown Film Unit in England and Muir Mathieson directed. Oxfoxrd Films distributes.

Enamorada

(Spanish dialog—English titles)

Azteca Films Drama 95 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Photography, performances and direction nearly lift story of a revolutionary and a lady above screenplay into "first rate" critical category.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Excellent for art houses and the Spanish-speaking audience.

Cast: Pedro Armendariz, Maria Felix, Fernando Fernandez. Credits: Producer, Pan American Films. Director, Emilio Fernandez. Screenplay, Inigo Demartino and Emilio Fernandez. Photography, Gabriel Figueroa. English titles, Herman G. Weinberg.

Plot: During the 1917 Mexican revolution an insurgent general occupies Cholula, enrages the daughter of a rich land-owner who opposes the uprising, falls in love with her and, after many setbacks, wins her.

Comment: This Mexican film comes close to being first-rate from a critical point of view and commercially should be in a class almost by itself among Spanish-language films in English-speaking territory. Outstanding are the photography of Gabriel Figueroa ("The Pearl" and "The Fugitive"), the sensitive direction of Emilio Fernandez ("The Pearl"), the unobtrusive singing of the Trio Calaveras and the performances of Maria Felix and Pedro Armendariz.

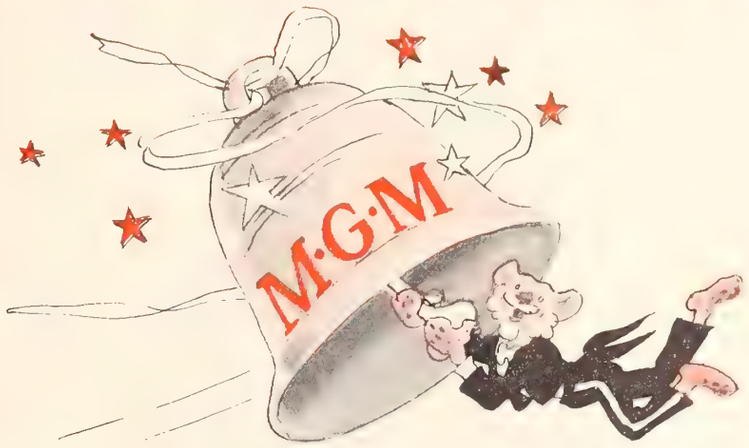
SWING INTO 1950



THIS SYMBOL OF GREAT ENTERTAINMENT APPEARED ON 100% OF THE NATION'S SCREENS IN CELEBRATION OF M-G-M's TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY!

The final returns are in. History has been written. Every regularly operated motion picture theatre in the nation, of which there was a record, has flashed the M-G-M Lion on its screen during the Friendly Company's Anniversary Year. Never an industry in the world until now in which every outlet has thus honored one product. With humility and gratitude M-G-M thanks this industry of which it is proud to be part.

Speaking of Good Will

An eminent jurist once summed it up rather neatly when he said: "Good Will is the disposition to return to the place where one has been well served."

We, in show business, are supposed to be experts in the field of promoting good will but if a careful analysis were made right now, we are afraid the net results would not be too flattering to too many of the guys and gals who run our movie theatres. This is no blanket indictment because we know quite a lot of showmen who measure up to the highest standards in catering to the public.

Like they used to say in the dime novels, "nobody ever talks about the good girls, people are too busy finding fault with the bad ones . . ."

Cultivating good will is one of the most important adjuncts of good showmanship because it represents something entirely separate and apart from the appeal of the screen fare offered in any man's theatre. The important point is that when you are getting patrons, don't take the attitude that if you give them the show you advertised you are discharging your entire obligation.

In addition to buying that ticket to see the picture they have also purchased the right to be greeted cordially, to be made welcome, and to be as comfortable as modern-day theatres and equipment can make them. They are entitled to find the theatre clean and properly ventilated and heated or cooled.

They have a further right to absolutely perfect projection and sound.

They have a right to a seat in which they can enjoy complete relaxation so as to fully enjoy the show on your screen. And another "must" is courtesy from each and every member of your staff they may come in contact with, from the ticket seller on down the line.

And get one silly notion out of your head that all of these are "extras" your theatre is offering. They are no such thing. They are all part and parcel of what that admission ticket buys.

If you bought a half dozen pickles and the counterman put them into your hands minus any wrapping, you'd raise merry hell and rightfully so. Well, movies may not exactly be called pickles (although we've heard some of them called worse) but without the wrappings outlined up ahead the simile may stand up.

The only way you can achieve genuine good will is to work for it through being an efficient and capable manager or exhibitor. The sum total of your theatre's ability to win and hold good will is the amount of personal supervision you put into it yourself. If you want to be a swivel-chair manager and leave the operation of the house to subordinates, then you are not a showman in the true sense of the word. For if, under those conditions, your house is well operated, it is not because of you but in spite of you.

Jerry Wald

There should be some sort of official recognition for a man like Jerry Wald for his accomplishments during the past year or so.

Checking over production activities the other day brought to light a phenomenal record from this outstanding producer. We didn't realize it and we doubt if many others did either.

Jerry Wald has eight top-flight productions in release or forthcoming in the immediate future. Sounds fantastic, doesn't it? Well, it is the truth and here they are: "Always Leave Them Laughing," "Caged," "Glass Menagerie," "Storm Center," "The Victim," "Perfect Strangers," "Inspector General" and "Young Man With a Horn."

Just how Jerry does it must be the secret of his success and ditto for Warner Bros. But the facts and the pictures speak for themselves and we doff our hats to a producer who talks little but accomplishes much.

Happy New Year!

We arrive at that moment of perennial thrill—the eve of a New Year, with all its high hopes and fervent wishes for a better, happier era of peace and good will. And we revel in the glow of good cheer that comes from giving expression to wishes for a joyous New Year of progress and prosperity and good health for all associated with this great and grand industry of ours.

To all our exhibitor friends who have favored us by reading our paper, to all the film producers and distributors who entrusted us with the assignment of carrying their messages to the trade, to all the artists of Hollywood who have addressed the theatremen through the medium of our columns, our sincerest thanks.

To all who read this message from the heart of the entire STR family—a Happy New Year, and may you long remember 1950 as a year of ideal achievement in performance of your obligations to your fellow men, your country, your industry, and one in which your merited rewards were very great.

WHAT'S NEWS
In the Film Industry This Week

GENERAL

Divorce and the New Year will walk into the industry picture hand in hand on Jan. 1 as Paramount follows the consent decree it reached in the Government anti-trust suit and sets up two new companies — United Paramount Theatres, which takes over the theatre operations and the new Paramount Pictures which takes over production and distribution. (P. 7.)

And divorce promises to take up quite a bit of the New Year with Washington reporting that the Warner Bros. consent decree is expected during the first half of 1950 while the 20th Century-Fox proposals for such a decree are to undergo study during the New Year. Loew's alone seems to be battling divorce to the last ditch. (P. 7).

In Washington, Abram Myers, chairman of the industry committee to fight the federal amusement tax praised the cooperation received to date, but warned against over-confidence. The tax reduction prospect looked brighter than usual for the coming term, however, with the Republicans calling on the Democrats to get in on the cut move and with a report to the President by an aide indicating that a personal check had showed considerable opposition to the levy.

DISTRIBUTION

A freer flow of product seemed likely during the New Year with January promising a total of 34 new features from 13 distributors compared to the average of 30 pictures a month put out by the same distributors in 1949. Furthermore, approximate figures for the first quarter of 1950, while strictly an estimate, indicate that 12 companies will release a total of 104 new features in three months.

Elsewhere on the distribution front J. Arthur Rank had sold the rights on 75 features to Standard Films for resale to television under a deal that provides a cash payment and percentage of the rentals from video beyond a certain point, and 20th Century-Fox indicated an expanded interest in television production, recently curtailed when it stopped making a daily video newsreel, with the appointment of Frank St. Leger of the Metropolitan Opera House to a television post in the corporation. The same company's general sales manager, Andy W. Smith, was appointed chairman of the Industry Distributors' Film Committee, which consists of members of the Motion Picture Association.

EXHIBITION

The old year, which had dealt the box-office many a staggering blow and added insult to injury with one of the worst pre-Christmas weeks, bowed out with a very graceful apology — a hearty Christmas holiday business which was led off by a bonanza in the Broadway houses in New York where records were again broken at the show cases and signs pointed to an upsurge which would hold well through the New Year festivities.

Meanwhile Treasury Department figures in Washington showed that the box-office for October revealed a tax take of $34,306,575 compared to $36,280,685 for the same period in 1948. And first-run houses were wondering what they could do to get a greater share of the trade downtown, a problem incidentally which is also bothering the British cousins in London where the palaces are off on the take. As a result MGM put stage shows back into its London Empire—and business on the first day zoomed higher than any past record-breaker. Shows follow the pattern of Radio City's Music Hall.

In Kansas City, Mo., Fox Midwest's Orpheum was set to install vaudeville on Jan. 6, making the second house in the town to turn to flesh. In Salt Lake City the Lawrence-Edwards chain opened its new $350,000 Villa. In Los Angeles Prin-Cor added the Forum to its chain of four houses in a day-and-date policy and in St. Petersburg, Fla., tax-fighting exhibitors won another victory as the state Supreme Court upheld a lower court ruling declaring a city amusement tax illegal.

In Minneapolis, Minnesota Amusement was said to be preparing to lease the Gopher in accordance with the Paramount consent decree.

In New York the Rivoli announced that for the first time in its 32-year history it would stay open all night—on New Year's Eve, and in New York also Paramount Usher Lawrence Ruisi, was knocked down a flight of stairs, beaten and probably seriously injured when a gang of approximately 15 leather-jacketed teenagers started a fist fight after one of them had been asked to leave for insulting an usherette. Paramount ushers mixed in and eight of the 15 were captured and now face charges.

Out in St. Louis Mayor Joseph M. Darst granted his fourth and probably last extension of the deadline by which theatres must comply with the building code. Up in Ontario, Canada, the Hydro-Electric Commission has put in brownouts on ads and marquees to save power during the water-short winter months. And out in New Lexington, Ohio, fire damaged the Perry to the extent of $30,000, while another blaze in the Holiday at Omaha closed the house.

LITIGATION

Citing the U. S. Supreme Court's rule that theatres not in competition are not entitled to clearance, the suburban Erlen Theatre this week filed suit for triple damages amounting to $1,108,000 in federal court with an action which, if successful, will upset Philadelphia's entire clearance system. The Erlen suit, against the eight majors, claims that the clearance was fixed and that since it is not in competition with the downtown first-runs because of its distance from them, it is entitled to first-run day-and-date with the major theatres.

Another effort to challenge clearance was seen to be shaping up in Hampton, Va., where the Center claims that present licensing practices have reduced it from a second-run to a third-run house and that it is entitled to day-and-date runs with the house that preceded it. This better-run argument also applies to a non-damage suit against the eight majors filed by the Olden Theatre of Trenton, N. J.

From Washington comes word that the Justice Department has asked Columbia to furnish information on how it sold "Jolson Sings Again." The reported request apparently is based on exhibitor complaints that Columbia tried to fix their admissions on the picture, complaints which Columbia has repeatedly denied. Down in New Orleans, MGM, Universal and RKO filed suit against William A. Lighter, Jr., charging incorrect film rental returns.

'Curley' Action Is Undecided

Whether United Artists will try to get Censor Lloyd Binford to grant a license for "Curley" to play Memphis now that the Tennessee Supreme Court has told Binford he could not censor a film because it contained Negro actors was an unanswered question late this week as the home office in New York apparently did not know what steps would be taken.

Memphis exhibitors however seemed certain of their opinions with a report from that city indicating that they were cool to the idea of playing the picture, even if Binford rescinded his present ban.

The high court decision slapped Binford on the Negro question but upheld a lower court on the legal aspects of the case which involved the right of United Artists or Producer Hal Roach to come into a state court when they were out-state corporations not licensed to do business within Tennessee. The lower court had denied them the right to sue the city of Memphis and the Shelby County Censor Board.

In Atlanta, Censor Christine Smith, Mayor William B. Hartsfield and the Trustees of the Atlanta Public Library faced with a similar suit by Louis deRochemont and Film Classics over "Lost Boundaries," were preparing to defend themselves when the case comes to trial early in the New Year.

MGM, Universal, RKO Sue Lighter on Rents

Three separate suits alleging incorrect reports of the rentals of percentage pictures were filed in the federal court at New Orleans this week by Loew's (MGM), Universal and RKO against William A. Lighter, Jr., and his Southeastern Theatres Company. The alleged fraud is charge in connection with the Franklin Center, the Baldwin Town Hall, the Berwick Ber and the Patterson Arcade—all in Louisiana.

Off Again, On Again . . .

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences this week decided to restore one of the Oscars it had cut out of the short-subjects field. This move will again give an Oscar for the best one-reeler, the best two-reeler and the best cartoon. A previous action had thrown all the live shorts into one competing group. The Academy further decided to restore an Oscar for the "Best Story and Screen Play" which had not been presented last year but had been awarded previously.

Decree Ontario Brownout

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission this week clamped down once more on electrical use to conserve power during the winter months in Ontario and prohibited the illumination of billboards, signs, show windows, and displays, etc. The prohibition also limits the lighting of marquees.

New Year Ushers-In Divorce

Paramount Plan Starts Jan. 1; Warner Consent Decree Likely in 1950

By BILL SPECHT (News Editor)

The New Year will usher divorce into the motion picture industry with the Paramount plan, reached by a consent decree in the Government anti-trust suit, taking effect on Jan. 1.

And the New Year promises that there will be more divorce. For not only is the Justice Department hammering away to get it in the very suit that Paramount and RKO escaped through consent decrees, but at least two of the remaining Big 3 Defendants—Warner Bros., and 20th Century-Fox—are reported willing to accept some type of divorce in a consent decree. This leaves Loew's alone in its determination, apparently, of fighting to the last ditch, and Loew's banks on the comparative smallness of its theatre holdings as an argument against monopoly.

Warners Next?

But Warner Bros., which was at one time as vehement in denying that it would ever consent to parting with its theatre interests, not only formally announced that the three Warner Bros. —Albert, Jack and Harry—were seeking to dispose of their share of the theatres, but are actually reported to be pretty close to signing a consent decree with the Justice Department by which they would drop their theatres.

Reliable sources in Washington declare that the Warner consent decree is all set but for the signing and that agreement has been reached on all major points with only a few minor differences of opinion to be reconciled.

Although the anti-trust division of the Justice Department is keeping the provisions of the reported Warner consent decree under wraps, Washington sources declared it would be certain to be as sweeping in its conditions as those previously signed by RKO and Paramount.

Of the remaining two major distributor-defendants, 20th Century-Fox has submitted consent decree proposals, a Justice Department spokesman acknowledged, but to date at least, Loew's has made no gesture in that direction.

Still to be Studied

The Fox proposals, apparently have not yet been studied by the Department, nor has point-by-point negotiation gotten under way. However, this is understood to be because only a few members of the Department's staff have a working knowledge of the film industry's anti-trust suit and they have all been working on the Warner case. When the Warner consent decree is out of the way, Washington said, consideration of the 20th Century-Fox proposals will begin.

Meanwhile, RKO, first to sign the decree, has been having divorce held up because of inability to get together with certain partners. And Paramount has greased the wheels so that its two new companies can get going. While Paramount's divorce is not officially due till Jan. 1, already separate phone numbers have been assigned to Paramount Pictures and the new United Paramount Theatres. Paramount Pictures, which will handle production and distri-

NEW YEAR, NEW DEAL, marks the divorce of exhibition from production and distribution at Paramount, one of the oldest motion picture companies in the history of the business, lineal descendant of the pioneer producing activities of Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky back in the days when the imported "Sarah Bernhardt" and the home-made "Prisoner of Zenda" were whipping up enthusiasm in a new industry. Under the terms of the consent decree reached with the Justice Department and effective Jan. 1, this descendant of pioneers, separates its exhibition from production-distribution by creating two new companies, each independent of the other. They are: United Paramount Theatres, which takes over 508 theatres of what used to be the old Paramount Theatre holdings, and a new Paramount Pictures, Inc. The latter company, which retains productions, distribution, Canadian and foreign theatre holdings as well as television patents, will continue its production under *Freeman as studio head and *Ginsberg as production chief. A subsidiary, Paramount Film Distributing Corporation, takes over domestic distribution. Another, Paramount International, handles foreign distribution. Directors of new Paramount Pictures are: Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, president, Manufactures Trust; A. Conger Goodyear, board chairman, Gaylord Container; Griffis; Duncan G. Harris, president, Brown, Harris, Stevens; John D. Hertz, partner, Lehman Bros.; Keough; Earl I. Elephant Wants Donkey's Aid In Fight on Wartime Excises

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin (Mass.) this week urged conservative Democrats to join with his party in forcing repeal of wartime excise tax increases, without any boost in other taxes. Such repeal would lower the admissions tax rate to 10 per cent, and came on the heels of Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer's report that requests for excise cuts were widespread.

The Republican leader called on the majority party House members to sign a "discharge petition" as soon as Congress convenes next week to force a vote on the bill he introduced last year. The petition, which he started circulating June 30 after charging that Administration leaders had "bottled up" his bill in the House Ways and Means Committee, has been signed by 136 House Republicans. However, it takes 218 signatures to bring a bill out of committee to the floor.

Negative Report

Meanwhile, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, reporting to the White House on his personal survey of business conditions, said that the most frequent plea for tax relief during his nationwide tour asked for reduction or elimination of the wartime excises.

Since early in July, Secretary Sawyer has traveled about 15,000 miles and conferred with some 3,000 businessmen and about 1,000 labor leaders and public officials in what he termed the most exhaustive survey ever conducted by the Commerce Department.

In his final report to Dr. John R. Steelman, the Assistant to the President, Sawyer had this to say regarding opinion on Government taxation policies:

Not Popular

"The taxes most frequently mentioned were the wartime excise taxes. There was a universal request that they be either reduced or eliminated. The basic argument, of course, was that taxes which were imposed during the war to discourage spending should not be retained at a time when such a policy is no longer necessary or desirable. It is clear from the great number of complaints made to me on this subject that these taxes have a depressing effect upon retail sales and that in the case of jewelry, furs, luggage, admissions, etc., the effects are, in specific cases, very serious. I might add that throughout my conferences there was a continuing volume of opinion from both labor and business that excise tax reduction will increase the number of business transactions as well as gross business earning subject to taxation, although, of course, there is no way to know in advance what the net effect of repeal or reduction would be."

To date President Truman has made no committments with regard to excise cuts, but one Democrat, Senator Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland, this week announced his support of the excise-repeal move saying it would have a "decidedly wholesome effect on business conditions generally." He said that returning the rates to their pre-war levels not only would aid the affected industries, but would also "make possible a greater tax return to the Treasury" from the increased sales and profits.

Big Boy Now

Tremendous growth in importance of drive-in business was indicated this week in Atlanta, Ga., as Harris Robinson, president of the Dixie Drive-in chain, pointed to the increase of equipment being especially designed for under-skyer operation.

"In contrast to the early days of the drive-in theatres, when most of our time was consumed in designing and manufacturing our own equipment," Robinson said, "the same time is consumed today in trying to select the best from hundreds of manufacturing concerns producing drive-in theatre equipment.

"These meetings are a must," he added, referring to the managers' meeting held recently in the Capitol City Club, "if we are to keep abreast of the new operating methods of this fast-growing branch of the motion picture industry."

'Mobilized', Says Myers

The motion picture industry will be "fully mobilized" early in January for its battle to obtain congressional enactment of federal amusement tax reductions in 1950, Abram F. Myers, chairman of the all-industry committee directing the campaign declared in Washington late Wednesday.

Myers said preparations for the campaign "are proceeding rapidly" and that "voluntary pledges of cooperation received by the committee show that the industry has joined in this effort en masse."

"But," he warned, "there must be no abatement of the fine teamwork thus far displayed. Anything short of our best effort will not serve," he added, pointing out that overconfidence could easily be fatal to the effort.

Further, he said, several proposed excise tax reduction measures do not include admissions and anything short of an all-out drive might leave the industry "out in the cold."

Rank Sells Video Rights on Films

A television rights deal for approximately 75 Rank features, was completed this week between the J. Arthur Rank Organization and Standard Television Corporation, Standard President Irving Shapiro, who is also head of Film Rights International, announced.

The deal, for which Rank receives an unspecified amount in cash, plus a percentage of sales beyond a certain figure, indicated to what extent Universal-International and Eagle Lion must have rejected Rank product during the past few years since many of the pictures are as yet unreleased in the United States, even for theatre use.

The list, which is subject to revision, includes, according to Shapiro, "I Know Where I'm Going," "Tawny Pipit," "Nicholas Nickelby," "Waterloo Road" and others which has been in theatrical release. A spokesman for Standard, answering a question on this subject put to him by SHOWMEN'S, said that the deal provided that the films could not be sold to television until a specified time after they had completed their theatre dates. However, he could not say what the time was, since it varied with each picture. Further, it appears that the initial release may be subject to revision, since the deal reached by Shapiro and Rank President Robert S. Benjamin is subject to contract which may have been entered into with other distributors. An example in case is said to be "Fame is the Spur," which was originally listed. Oxford Films, which handles "Fame" in the United States, claims that the picture is theirs for seven years and that by contract it cannot be sold for television during that period.

What provisions were made for situations like this could not be learned since the J. Arthur Rank office professed to be ignorant of details, stating that President Benjamin had negotiated the deal without imparting any information. President Benjamin, on his honeymoon, was not available.

Among the other films said to be on the list are "Bees in Paradise," "Flemish Farm," "The Lamp Still Burns," "My Heart Goes Crazy," "Millions Like Us," "Miss London, Ltd.," "They Knew Mr. Knight," "Bandwagon," "The Arsenal Stadium Mystery," "Murder in London," "Neutral Port," "Hi Gang," "Heart of Steel," "Good Time Girl," "Canterbury Tales," "The Blind Goddess," "We Die at Dawn," "Vice Versa," "Uncle Silas," "To 1,000 Women," "Time Flies," "Here Comes the Law," "King Arthur Was a Gentleman," "Johnny Frenchman," "It Always Rains on Sunday," "Root of All Evil," "The Gentler Sex," "Carnival," "I'll Be Your Sweetheart," "Give Us the Moon," "The Loves of Joanna," "Men of Two Worlds," "Man at the Gate," "Ghost Train," "Backroom Boys," "Secret Mission," "On Approval," "Dear Octopus," "This Happy Breed," "A Place of Our Own," "Don't Tell Your Heart."

Tain't Legal

Exhibitors of St. Petersburg, Fla., won another victory over the city council this week when the Florida Supreme Court turned down the town's appeal from a circuit court decision declaring an admission tax was illegal. The circuit court had ruled against the box-office levy, finding it to be an income tax, while income taxes are illegal in the Palmetto state. The Supreme Court rejected the council's appeal which claimed that the amusement levy was a license based on gross receipts.

Same Trouble In London

By JOCK MacGREGOR

London's first-run motion picture theatres seem to be having the same trouble as those in the United States—their patrons are staying at home and going to the neighborhood houses Swhere they can see a picture a short time after first-run at a lower admission and without having to go to the trouble of traveling a long distance and dining out.

This development, which has been more noticeable lately has resulted in action on the part of MGM's Empire which has introduced stage presentations with bargain matinees before noon along the line of New York's Radio City Music Hall. The Rank circuit has turned to double features on a number of recent occasions, and there is a general stir in the direction that the first-runs are going to have to offer that "something extra" to pull in the trade. Only outstanding films are drawing much attention.

The result of this new tendency has been to cut down the length of runs. In contrast to the legitimate theatres where plays like "Worm's Eye View" have four years to their credit while "Oklahoma" and "Annie Get Your Gun" are reaching their third anniversaries, few movies are having long-runs these London days. Among them are "The Search" with eight weeks at the 430-seat Ritz, "Pinky" which has five at 1600 Leicester Square, "Third Man," which has completed 11 weeks at the Carlton after five at the Plaza and which is now going into general release.

Rank May Sell 2

The Rank interests are said to be negotiating to sell the Marble Arch Pavilion and the Tivoli in London, both of which seat over 1,000, London reports said this week.

LONDON observations
by Jock MacGregor

Long, newsy letter in from Melvina McEldowney, who is out in India with her husband making the first Technicolor feature on that continent. In the true pioneering spirit they are finding themselves up against an astounding number of unexpected problems. Finance is coming from the U. S., Britain and India, and in respect to the last group, they are accepting local traditions and customs.

Jock MacGregor

Apparently the starting date for Indian pictures is fixed by a horoscope ordained by the stars—the celestial, not box-office type—and even if only one shot is got in the can and everybody goes on holiday for a period, superstition is satisfied. In their case, Dec. 24 was D-Day for "The River." Author Rumer Godden, Director Jean Renoir, Producer Ken McEldowney and all the international technicians and artists had to attend a religious ceremony when the project and themselves were blessed.

Nicest story "Mel" had to relate was about a pre-production conference in the grounds of the palace which they have taken for the picture. Wild monkeys watched with enormous interest and then formed up their own circle on the lawn with their leader in the centre. Wonder whether they had their paws on their eyes, mouths and ears like the "Three Wise Monkeys"?

I was extremely sorry to find myself having a farewell drink with General Lyman Munson who has been in charge of 20th Century-Fox productions here and has been responsible for "Male War Bride," Tyrone Power's "Black Rose," Richard Widmark's "Night and the City" and Dana Andrews' "Forbidden Street." Ill health has decreed that he must resign, and off to North Africa he is going with his car before returning to the U. S. in late January. After visiting relations in New England he will motor to Hollywood via Miami and New Orleans.

His employes, hearing this sudden news, immediately handed the hat around and bought him some gifts to remind him of their happy association together. The presentation was made by Ben Lyon who has become very much a part of the British scene and is proving as successful behind the cameras as he was before them.

MGM are doing a terrific job of publicity over here. Their 25th Anniversary Celebrations have been admirably exploited and now they have succeeded in achieving the first composite half-page advertisement in a British national newspaper for at least ten years. Tieup with the Daily Express was on "The Forsyte Saga" and the new stage regime at the Empire. Leading suppliers cooperated.

Employes of Langfords & Co. organized a lunch to celebrate Dickie Pearl's fifth birthday and there was a goodly turnout of trade celebrities. Surprise speaker, CEA General Secretary W. R. Fuller, quipped: "a successful film industry gets the most out of its screen advertising—and the sale of ice cream."

Jan. Release Schedules Hint At Freer Flow of Features

January, 1950, promises to be a good month for the exhibitor who goes to market for product with 13 distributors putting a total of 34 new features, exclusive of series westerns, into national release during that period.

TOA Officers, Directors To Meet Feb. 11-12

The Theatre Owners of America will hold its mid-winter meeting for officers and directors at the Mayflower, Washington, D. C., Jan. 11-12, Executive Director Gael Sullivan announced Wednesday. Among the subjects to be discussed are participation in the Council of Motion Picture Organizations, excise taxes, a national membership campaign and the request to Federal Communications Commission for allocation of television channels to theatres.

Illinois Theatre Owners To Meet Feb. 9-10

The United Theatre Owners of Illinois will hold its annual convention in Springfield, Ill., at the Hotel Abraham Lincoln Feb. 9-10, President Ed Zorn announced Wednesday. Dave Jones of the Kerasotes Circuit is in charge of reservations.

Disney Names Feitel

Walt Disney Productions this week appointed Chester Feitel, lately with Kay Kamen, to represent the company in licensing the use of Disney characters for advertising and merchandising.

Critics' 'Best'

The New York Film Critics Tuesday selected Robert Rossen's "All the King's Men," trenchant tale of politics, demagoguery as the best picture of 1949. Other selections made by the critics in their 15-year-old poll, are: Broderick Crawford, best actor, for his portrayal of politocrat Willie Stark in "All the King's Men;" Olivia DeHavilland, best actress, for her Catherine Sloper in "The Heiress;" Carol Reed, best director for "Fallen Idol" and "The Bicycle Thief," as the best foreign-language picture.

Off a Bit

Box-office receipts for October dipped somewhat below the level of the previous two months and were considerably off from the comparative period in 1948, the Treasury Department's report on federal amusement tax collections revealed this week. The November report, which reflects business in theatres for October, disclosed total collections of $34,306,575, compared to $36,280,685 for the corresponding period in 1948 or $35,074,207 for September, 1949.

Salt Lake's Newest, The Villa, Opens

Salt Lake City's newest theatre, the $350,000 Villa, got under way this week with an invitational premiere attended by 1,300 Utahans. The house, which boasts of a parking lot capable of handling 700 automobiles, is luxuriously equipped and decorated, with murals on both sides of the proscenium arch and drapes in green satin. Mayor Earl J. Glade dedicated the theatre, which is another link in the Joseph Lawrence-Dave Edwards chain.

Popcorn Oil Starts Holiday Theatre Fire

Oil poured in a hot popcorn machine started a fire in the Holiday at Omaha Sunday causing several thousand dollars' damages. Operators Harlan Jacobs and Jack Holiday were warned that they would not be allowed to reopen until the entire front was fireproofed and other safety devices, said to have been previously ordered by the Fire Department, had been taken.

Zanuck Does It

. . . "12 O'Clock High"

By CHESTER B. BAHN

OUT OF THE WEST, which means Hollywood, from time to time in recent months there have come, both by letter and by word-of-mouth from refugees from the Los Angeles smog, murmurings that Darryl F. Zanuck in his second personal production of the year, "Twelve O'Clock High," had something really special.

Those murmurings, which must have reached your ear as well, were eminently correct, your reporter is most happy to advise this Wednesday morn.

"Twelve O'Clock High" manifestly is one of the greatest war pictures ever to reach the world's screens, and, as such, of course a potential grosser of heroic proportions and an outstanding Academy contender as well.

And there is no out-on-a-limb risk in so advising, be it added.

AS AN HONEST STORY of aerial warfare, and of the men who fight it, "Twelve O'Clock High" has the Zanuck hallmark of quality . . . and there surely is none higher. It is taking nothing from the magnificent pictures of its type which have preceded through the years, starting, say, with "Wings" in 1927, to herald this new 20th-Fox offering as just about the cream o' the crop.

The Zanuck sensitivity and touch are in evidence throughout. That started, of course, with the snaring of the rights to the Sy Bartlett-Beirne Lay, Jr., novel. And Zanuck's unerring picture judgment dictated, as it certainly should, the signing of the authors to do the screenplay and the assignment of Henry King to direct. Here, if ever, was a picture that demanded its direction be entrusted to a seasoned air man. And that would be King, natch.

You may be certain, too, that the casting is Zanuck's. The sincerity of the performances from that by Gregory Peck right down the line underscores the honesty of story. Peck, the story's General Savage, rates an Academy nomination. So, too, Dean Jagger for his flesh-and-blood Major Stovall, the "retread" desk-bound adjutant of the 918th Bomb Group. And these are by no means the only stand-outs, as you in due course will see.

Meanwhile, for an excellent verbal preview, you are urged to scan what Your Favorite Industry Newspaper's critic, keen judge of box office and artistic values that he is, has set down in telling words on this page.

YES, "TWELVE O'CLOCK HIGH" is a fitting climax to a great Zanuck and Fox production year, a 12-month period which gave the country's showmen the stirring "Pinky," D. F.'s first personal production of 1949, and such box office stalwarts, produced under his supervision, as "The Snake Pit," "Letter to Three Wives," "Come to the Stable," "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College," "I Was a Male War Bride" and "Prince of Foxes," to single out those which quickly come to mind.

So it really is no mystery a-tall, is it, that Andy W. Smith's distribution forces to date have 42,342-plus more contracts and 43,584-plus more playdates under their collective belt than in 1948? (That "plus" is employed advisedly; the figures used prevailed Dec. 7).

A case of cause and effect, wouldn't you call it?

New Year Ushers-In Divorce

bution, retains the phone number of the old Paramount company—Bryant 9-8700. The new United Paramount Theatres got a new number —LOngacre 3-1100.

But the separation goes much farther than that. Under the terms of the Paramount consent decree, United Paramount Theatres must be free of any control on the part of the New Paramount Pictures Corporation, nor must it be controlled by any officers, stockholders, directors or executives of the old Paramount Pictures outfit.

Stock Shift

Stockholders of the old company, who receive one share of stock in the new Pictures Company and one share in the new United Paramount Theatres for each share they held in the old Paramount company, must dispose of their holdings in either one of the companies by a specified time.

There is, however, apparently no bar at a later date to prevent them from acquiring interest in both companies, but the theory is that both companies must be independent of each other.

There is also apparently no ban on the new Paramount Pictures, a producing and distributing outfit, from acquiring theatres in the future, provided such acquisition does not result in monopoly. And likewise there is no apparent edict preventing the new United Paramount Theatres from engaging in production and distribution in the future, subject again to the fact that the purpose of the result be not monopoly.

This point apparently has been causing some confusion judging from queries received. And for this reason, it may be a good idea to examine what is called "divorce."

No Such Word

In the first place as far as the court language is concerned, there is no such word as divorce, speaking of theatres. The Supreme Court, which told the lower court that some form of separation between exhibition and production-distribution might be in order, speaks of it as "divestiture."

But to the trade, divestiture took on the meaning of dropping theatres in instances such as those where a chain had to drop certain houses to break up a monopolistic situation. And divorce took on the meaning that exhibition and production-distribution must be separated. It is in this sense that the words are used here.

It must be remembered that at no time have the courts found that "vertical integration," to use what Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Augustus N. Hand once referred to as that "happy phrase," is illegal in itself. And vertical integration is a legal way of saying that an individual or firm manufactures the raw product, distributes and sells it. Hence companies which produce pictures, distribute them and exhibit them are indulging in vertical integration.

The present Justice Department action for divorce is not directed against vertical integration or the ownership of theatres by producer-distributor in itself, but is an effort to break monopoly which the Department says exists as a result of these particular ownerships by defendants and former defendants in the Government anti-trust suit.

So it is not altogether inconceivable that the future may see theatres again owned by producer-distributors or exhibitors owning producing units. But it is more likely that the function of production and distribution will be very widely separated, at least as far as the law is concerned, from exhibition, and that the competition both by the producer-distributor for a market and by the exhibitors to get business from each other will be much keener.

For in many places where there were once only Paramount partners, there is now United Paramount Theatres in competition with what were its partners and both ready to slug it out for business. It's still going to be a tough road for what is now the third man—the independent. But it is a road which offers many interesting possibilities.

Broadway Boom

Broadway, which has been suffering from box-office weakness during the past month, perked up with a jerk over the Christmas holidays and enjoyed a business boom which really had the crowds plunking down dollars for tickets in every house along the main stem which had a bill with pull in it. The upturn continued throughout the week and promised to run through the holidays.

Radio City Music Hall as usual had lines running a block long and around on Rockefeller Plaza on Christmas, which is usually normal business for this house with its annual Christmas stage show reinforced by "On the Town." At the Rivoli and at the Paramount, where "Samson and Delilah" are holding out, the picture did what Paramount said was $112,000 over Saturday, Sunday and Monday. At the Roxy, "Prince of Foxes" reportedly did $30,609 Monday alone, while the Capitol reported an attendance of 31,000 on Sunday and Monday, with "Adam's Rib" on the bill.

Minnesota May Lease Gopher Under Decree

The Minnesota Amusement Company this week was reported to be negotiating a deal by which it would lease the Gopher in the loop section of Minneapolis to other exhibitors. The move, if carried out, would be in line with provisions of the consent decree, which Minnesota's parent company, Paramount, reached with the Justice Department concerning divestiture of theatres.

'Casbah' Wins Universal Nice Load of Cabbage

Universal this week won a judgment of $329,486.07 from Marston Pictures and a foreclosure of chattel mortgage on "Casbah" in federal court at Los Angeles. In addition, the suit, which is the result of a cross-complaint filed by Universal after Marston had sued it for $250,000 claiming improper distribution of the film, resulted in an added award of $5,000 and $20,000 attorney fees.

Rivoli Open All Night For New Year's Eve

The New York Rivoli, will go grind and run through the whole night on Dec. 31-Jan. 1, Managing Director Montague Salmon announced this week. Salmon said the house would operate all night for the first-time in its 32-year history because of the anticipated attendance.

Is Everybody Happy?

When four-year old John (Happy) Mohr, son of St. Louis Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mohr, was found missing from his home, his parents notified the police at 10:30 A.M. But the youngster came walking in unharmed late at night. He had been looking at the movies in the neighborhood Melvin and it developed, since he had no money, he had just walked in before the house opened, took a seat and waited for the evening show to go on.

Neighborhood House Sues For Downtown 1st-Runs

Philadelphia's neighborhood Erlen Theatre Tuesday filed an anti-trust suit in federal court against eight major distributors seeking triple damages amounting to $1,108,000 and charging the house had been denied first-runs day-and-date with downtown theatres.

Owners of the Erlen—A. M. Ellis Theatres and the Gap Company—assert in their petition that their house is miles away from the downtown locations and hence is not competitive with the downtowners and should not be compelled to wait 28 days for film. Their contention, if upheld by the court, will upset Philadelphia's clearance system.

Defendants in the suit are: Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, Columbia, Warner Bros., and Loew's (MGM).

Wants First-Run With Competitors

Another effort to get first-run day-and-date with a downtown house seemed to be shaping up for Hampton, Va., where the Center Theatre is complaining that present licensing practices have reduced the Center form a second- to a third-and-fourth-run house.

The Center owners, according to Washington, D. C., attorneys Harold Schilz and John Claegtt, may go to court seeking triple damages amounting to $450,000, and demanding day-and-date runs with the Langley, in downtown Hampton and the Wythe. The Center, in a heavily-settled residential district, is two miles away from either of its competitors and claims the distance entitles it to day-and-date.

Asks Justice Dept. To Check Clearance

Attorney Louis B. Schwartz announced this week that he had asked the Justice Department to investigate the apparent inability of the Godlen Valley, Minneapolis suburban house, to get a 28-day clearance. Schwartz' announcement said that the distributors had neither acceded to nor denied the request for clearance.

3 More Ask FCC For Theatre Hearings

Three new petitions were filed with the Federal Communications Commission this week asking for immediate hearing on theatre television and the assignment of specific channels. This brings the total up to 16.

The latest petitioners are: Essaness Theatres Corp,. operating 29 theatres in the Chicago area; Lockwood and Gordon Enterprises, operators of 19 New England theatres, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, D. C., representing 75 Washington houses with a combined seating capacity of about 65,000.

Dan Michalove Services Held

Funeral services for Dan Michalove, 56-year old vice-president of 20th Century-Fox's National Theatres, were held in New York Sunday prior to shipping the body to Asheville, N. C., for burial.

Michalove, who died last Friday afternoon of a heart attack, had entered the industry as an exhibitor in 1915. He joined 20th-Fox in 1939, and ever since then, with the exception of a five-year period as president of the Atlanta baseball club, has been in show business, going as far west as Australia, and serving Universal and Warner theatre chains as general manager.

He is survived by his widow, Fanny, three children and three sisters.

FRANK R. TODHUNTER, 67, for two years vice-president of Local 103, AFM, Columbus, O., of a heart attack.

St. Louis Mayor Extends Building Code Deadline

Mayor Joseph M. Darst of St. Louis this week granted a fourth extension of the deadline by which theatres in the city limits must comply with the new building code. The extension gives theatre owners from Jan. 1, 1950 to Jan. 1, 1951 in carrying out the code provisos, the principal one of which applies to widening aisles so as to enable the houses to evacuate crowds more quickly in an emergency.

Mayor Darst, whose extension had been opposed by Building Commissioner A. H. Baum who contended the previous extensions had given the theatres time to comply, said this fourth extension would be the last as far as he is concerned.

Free Shows for Kids

Manager Harold Chestler of the Princess, Bingham, Utah, threw a free party for the children of that city last weekend with the local Lions Club cooperating. Manager Kostopolis of the Broadway, Salt Lake City, gave the kids his usual Christmas treat including a large Christmas tree, presents, a film show and eats.

NEWSREEL CLIPS

Something New

San Francisco Theatres this week hit on a new idea for its New Year's eve shows with a short entitled "Previews of Re-Release Soon to be Shown Throughout the Nation." The subject is made up of scenes from reissues which are popular and was procured through arrangements with the Favorite Films exchange. The San Francisco chain, which usually seeks a novel stunt for its end-of-the-year special show, used the new subject to replace its usual "Major Hollywood Studio Preview." Its Coronet, however, went in for something still different, when Manager Walter Chenoweth grouped a series of band shorts together under title of "Midnight Serenade of 1950" to bring in the New Year with "Music of the Moment" as he termed it.

Paramount Usher Injured In Battle With Hoodlums

Eight teen-age youths wearing leather jackets and peg-topped trousers were arrested Tuesday after a knock-down-drag-'em-out fight in the lobby of the New York Paramount during which Usher Lawrence Ruisi, 22, was injured, probably seriously. Approximately seven more escaped.

The fight started after the youths insulted an usherette and were told to leave the theatre by Usher Charles Diamond. The gang attacked Diamond, and Ruisi, coming to his assistance, was knocked down the stairs leading to the balcony, beaten and kicked. Other ushers, coming to his aid, with detectives, captured eight of the gang.

News and Ideas Concerning Profitable Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation

Dinner Spurs Drive For 'Treason' Film

Eagle Lion set off the publicity and exploitation campaign on "Guilty of Treason" Tuesday night when the Overseas Press Club of America staged a dinner and screening at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York for a thousand civic, diplomatic and religious leaders. The affair, which came on the first anniversary of the arrest of Cardinal Mindszenty (the Jack Wrather-Robert Golden production is based on his trial) guaranteed "Guilty of Treason" an open door to every key newspaper in the country because of the timeliness and news value of the film.

All local newspaper and wire service editors —many of them members of the Club—attended the dinner, with the proceedings covered by the working press, trade papers and syndicates, and broadcast nationally over radio and video networks. The dinner was also broadcast by the Voice of America throughout the world in twenty-seven languages.

The invited guests were headed by His Eminence, Francis, Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York. Others included Secretary of State Dean Acheson; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; Dr. Bela Fabian, author of the "white book" on Cardinal Midszenty; Senator Herbert H. Lehman; New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey; General Carlos Romulo, president of tthe General Assembly, United Nations; former Postmaster General James A. Farley; Clare Booth Luce; Seldin Chapin, United States minister to Hungary at the time of the Hungarian Prince Primate's arrest; Benjamin Cohen, assistant secretary-general, United Nations; David Sarnoff, RCA chairman of the board; David Dubinsky, president, International Ladies' Garment Workers Union; and others.

Leading newspaper and wire service executives were in attendance, as were also executives of Eagle Lion and other film companies, as well as heads of circuits.

'Samson' Bows at Victoria in Toronto

Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah" made its Canadian bow Wednesday evening at the Victoria Theatre, Toronto, backed by advertising and publicity similar to that which launched the Technicolor film on its 2-theatre world premiere in New York.

Paramount Exploitation Manager Sid (Mr. Rabbit) Mesibov was in Toronto to assist J. J. Fitzgibbon, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., in the supervision of the campaign and premiere. He was scheduled to return to New York on Dec. 30.

Barrel-Clad Boy

A male, old or young, appareled in a barrel, always strikes the risibles of Americans. Manager Milt Baline of the Glove, Gloversville, N. Y., took advantage of that fact to ballyhoo "The Great Gatsby" with a boy in a barrel, hairy legs showing, parading the town's main business streets.

'Francis' Standin To Help Promotion

As part of its all out exploitation campaign on "Francis," Universal-International has devised a unique mechanical counterpart of Francis, the famous talking mule. Arrangements are being made to have it appear at various key city openings of the picture.

The standin is designed to be put in lobbies, and while its mouth, ears and eyes move, a tape recorded speech invites the public to step right up and put their cash down at the box-office.

'Foolish Heart' Opens In N'Orleans, on Coast

Samuel Goldwyn's "My Foolish Heart" had its world premiere Dec. 24 at the Joy Theatre, New Orleans, followed by a California twin opening at the United Artists and Four Star theatres, Los Angeles, on Christmas Day. The Hollywood premiere was part of a citywide toy collection at which thousands of toys were collected for underprivileged children of Los Angeles.

The New Orleans engagement had a number of special features—a tieup with Jill Jackson, famous commentator on WWL (CBS); window displays with D. H. Holmes and a "Favorite Dress" series of pieces in the New Orleans States. A special screening for the girls of Newcomb College, women's college attached to Tulane University, resulted in a feature story in the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Weekend business in New Orleans was almost double that of last year's Christmas attraction, according to Owner L. C. Montgomery, while equally impressive records were set up for the Los Angeles playdates.

Color-Glo Stills

Color-glo stills of "Ichabod and Mr. Toad" were placed on all rural school bulletin boards in Norwich, N. Y., by Colonia Manager Bill Straub.

MAKE HIM SMILE. That's what pedestrians in Reading, Pa., were invited to do when they saw this mechanical man in the window of a leading department store. Whoever succeeded won two tickets to see MGM's "Adam's Rib" at Loew's Colonial. Manager Larry Levy handled the campaign on the picture.

EXPLOITORIALS

Guess this has been done before, but it's so infrequent these days that it might be revived—with good results—for that comedy you've got coming up. Of course, you won't be the first one to revive it, for the Minnesota Amusement Co. has beat you to the gun. As a stunt for Columbia's "Tell It to the Judge" at the Radio City Theater in Minneapolis, they conducted a laughing contest. They got the 25 competitors through want ads placed in the daily papers. The contestants saw the picture, and part of the laughing contest was broadcast by John Ford on his program over WTCN. Now how do you judge a laughing contest? The method used in Minneapolis was not revealed, but it seems to us that a board of sober-faced judges could score the laughers on points. Anyway, the best laughers were awarded prizes of cash and merchandise, ranging up to $25 for first place.

If the residents of College Point, L. I., are not aware of Mario Lanza by this time, it isn't the fault of I.M.P.S. Member Leo Raelson, manager of the College Theatre. Under Raelson's supervision, William Guest, a new member of the staff, placed a 40x60 in the lobby, with mounted heads of members of the cast of MGM's "That Midnight Kiss." The Lanza head got the most emphasis. Behind this display was an automatic record player which played all the numbers sung by Lanza in the picture. Alongside the display was this copy: "This Is the NEW VOICE That Will Thrill You in 'That Midnight Kiss'—Mario Lanza, the Singing Find of the Year." The records and player were promoted from a local radio station. The sign cost $2—a mighty small expenditure for such an effective bit of exploitation.

For the world premiere of Cecil B. DeMille's "Samson and Delilah" at the Paramount and Rivoli theatres, the Paramount publicity department sent out an alarm via special ads in New York newspapers for beautiful dark-haired women resembling Hedy Lamarr. These women, wearing the original costumes worn by the star, acted as hostesses when the film made its global bow at the two New York showplaces. This is a stunt for you when you play this picture, or you might seek a double for a star of some other important offering. As for the original costumes, fine if you can get 'em; but if you can't, either have a local stylist reproduce them, or just base the stunt on looks alone.

Over in Bogota, N. J., Manager Howard F. Purdue of the Queen Anne Theatre sent out letters to residents of the neighborhood and enclosed "Let's Get Acquainted" Courtesy Cards which entitled two people to attend the theatre for the price of one. In the letter, Purdue expressed his desire to acquaint the recipient with the Queen Anne, and then continued: "The Queen Anne is presenting the best in motion pictures at popular prices. I know you will appreciate our fine projection and sound, comfortable seats, and courteous service. I am sure a visit to the Queen Anne will give you a night of pleasure and relaxation." Well, go ahead and try it, but be sure your theatre is all that Purdue claimed his to be.

Ricketson Week Marks Return of Executive

Returning from a five-week business survey trip to Europe, President Frank W. "Rick" Ricketson of Fox Inter-Mountain theatres found more to be thankful for than just his "beloved America and Denver."

During his absence, the Fox Inter-Mountaineers, operating theatres from Canada to Mexico, promoted a "Rick's Rousing Return" week which produced results that shook the record books of the showmanship-conscious Denver territory.

'It Can be Done'

The special week exceeded in results anything delivered in 1949 by the circuit with an array of activities ranging from automobile giveaways to stage weddings. Disproving the old bogie, "Christmas Slump," the boys from the high country set a pace which proves "it can be done" if the incentive is right. "Rick's Rousing Return Week" proved to be just that.

Ricketson accompanied Charles P. Skouras and Elmer C. Rhoden on the junket which took them to seven foreign countries over a 22,000-mile route. They inspected economic trends, recovery programs, motion picture production and possible theatre locations.

Showmanship Contest Planned on 'Mother'

A nationwide showmanship contest for exhibitors, with winners reaping a total of $7,500 for engagements played between March 2 and May 7, will back the release of 20th-Fox's "Mother Didn't Tell Me" next March. Entry details will be announced via trade press advertising, contest brochures and through the company's exchanges.

The contest was prompted by the success of the "All-American Premiere Contest" staged this fall for "Father Was a Fullback." Hundreds of campaigns were submitted for the "Father" contest which ended Dec. 4. Judging by the national panel, consisting of William Ainsworth, Si Fabian and Lou Little, will take place shortly with results to be announced in January.

NEWSPAPERBOYS MOVIE GUESTS. This picture and caption greeted readers of the Arkansas Democrat when the boys who sell that paper were invited to the Arkansas Theatre in Little Rock by Manager Jimmy Thames. Newsboys are a favorite human interest subject, and what better time to remember that than during the run of Paramount's "Chicago Deadline"? Note the prominence of the film title in this nice space-grabber.

'SAMSON AND DELILAH' OPENS IN NEW YORK

GRIST FOR THE SHOWMANSHIP MILL

Following a canvass of exhibitors in various sections of the country to get their ideas on the best methods of building its new screen personalities, Universal-International has completed a teaser trailer on Shelley Winters as the first step to a campaign being devised as a result of the exhibitors' suggestions. While the trailer plugs the actress' latest picture, "South Sea Sinner," major emphasis is on Shelley herself and credits the public and press with playing a major role in her rise to stardom.

With 36 bookings of his 1950 winter personal appearance tour already set and 34 more in negotiation, Gene Autry is planning a trek which will carry him through 22 states and part of Canada. The cowboy star will open in Pueblo, Colo., Jan. 7. From there he will tour through Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, Ontario, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut. Autry and the 27 members of his Western Variety show will play auditoriums, from where Autry's Columbia network radio program, "Melody Ranch," will be broadcast each Saturday afternoon. The star has completed his latest Columbia western, "Beyond the Purple Hills."

One of the promotions in the merchandising campaign now being prepared by RKO Radio for the forthcoming release of Walt Disney's "Cinderella" is a tieup sponsored by the National Paint and Manufacturers Association and known as the "Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up Community Development Program. The campaign, beginning in February, will be highlighted by posters and streamers lithographed in color, the entire theme based on Cinderella, the characters and background of the picture. All were designed by Walt Disney artists. The campaign will be the theme of window displays in hardware stores and paint shops in every community in the country.

A special series of spot announcement trailers for television use are being prepared by Paramount Studios for use on "Dear Wife," soon-to-be-released sequel to "Dear Ruth." The general practice heretofore has been to adapt theatre trailers for television use, and in very few cases have trailers been prepard specifically for exclusive use on television. The "Dear Wife" spots are designed as chain breaks and run 30 seconds each.

Spotlighted Flowers

Flowers promoted from a florist were placed in the lobby of the Kent, Kent, Ohio, by Manager Ben Geary who had them "glamorized" by playing two differently colored spotlights on them, against a lobby background of "Story of Seabiscuit" stills and posters.

GIRL FIGURES HAIL COMING ATTRACTIONS. Five cut-out girl figures, four of which are shown here, have been on display in the lobby of Loew's Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., to herald such coming attractions as MGM's "That Forsyte Woman," "The Red Danube," "The Doctor and the Girl," "Battleground" and "Intruder in the Dust." We don't know for sure, but we'd guess that as each attraction plays, it is replaced by the announcement of a new one. You, too, probably have some big shows coming up. Why not try this?

Snow Doesn't Stop 'McCoy' Sq. Dance

Square dances, like the show, must go on, in the opinion of Manager Jim Burgess of the Chief Theatre in Pueblo, Colo., who let neither rain nor a light snow postpone the square dance he had arranged as part of his exploitation for "Roseanna McCoy." The only difference the inclement weather made in the arrangements was to change the locale from in front of the plant housing the Chieftain and Star-Journal, which were cooperating, to the spacious studio of radio station KCSJ which occupies an upper floor of the same building.

The change of place did not lessen the promotional effectiveness of the dance, for the editors of the two newspapers and the KCSJ personnel went all-out to help publicize the event. Many stories and art appeared in the newspapers for more than a week in advance and during the day of bad weather which forced the open-air dance to take cover in the studio. The station gave it special plugs and broadcasts in advance and on dance date.

Spectators, as well as the dancers, were invited up to the studio and, as a large number of residents had never seen the inside of a radio studio, there was a large attendance to spread word-of-mouth about the dance and the picture which it was designed to exploit. The picture did excellent business despite the weather, says a report from Pueblo. RKO Field Man T. Bidwell McCormick helped Manager Burgess put the promotion across despite the weather handicap.

Smiley Holds Search For Talented Youth

Smiley Burnette, who co-stars with Charles Starrett in Columbia's series of "Durango Kid" westerns, conducted a talent search in the lobby of the New York Theatre on Wednesday afternoon, with an eye to finding a city youngster whom he could take to Hollywood.

For the first 1,000 children who attended, Smiley provided free Cokes and free comics. All children had their pictures taken with him and were eligible to win a pony or its cash equivalent.

Notables Are Invited To 'O'Riordans' Premiere

Governor Thomas E. Dewey, Mayor and Mrs. William O'Dwyer and scores of other notables have been invited by the Australian Consul General in New York, Lieutenant General Edward Kenneth Smart, D.S.C., M.C., to attend a special invitational performance of Universal-International's "The Rugged O'Riordans" at the Park Avenue Theatre Jan. 4.

The showing, which will mark the American premiere of the film, promises to bring out a large number of dignitaries.

'Third Man' Bow Now Set for Jan. 18

Originally scheduled to be held Jan. 4, the American premiere of Carol Reed's "The Third Man" will take place Jan. 18 at the Victoria Theatre for the benefit of the Lighthouse of the New York Association for the Blind. Society, political, business and theatrical notables will attend the affair, proceeds of which will go to the Lighthouse, which serves over 4,000 blind people of all ages, creeds and races.

Baby Carriage Ballyhoo

An usher in football uniform, pushing a baby carriage with two kids in it about town, was the ballyhoo arranged for "Father Was A Fullback" by Manager Art Castner of the Seneca, Salamanca, N. Y.

Santa Stays On

Santa Claus stayed around Asbury Park and Morristowr, N. J., for an extra week to ballyhoo "Holiday Affair," the New Year's Eve attraction at Reade's Asbury Mayfair and Morristown Community theatres. St. Nick walked around the streets bearing this sign: "I'm staying around until New Year's Eve to see 'Holiday Affair'." Active in persuading the jolly old gentleman to hang around were Asbury City Manager Guy Hevia and Morristown City Manager Ralph Lanterman.

THE NEW PRESS BOOKS

That there is plenty to see "on the town" is amply evidenced in MGM's four-column newspaper ad on its Technicolor musical, "On the Town," which you'll find on the cover of the press book. Of course, the things to be seen are among the highlights of the picture, and they are illustrated and described in the outer edges of the ad which surround a tilted panel with advertising copy and silhouette illustration of the principal characters. This "outer-edge" material should prove just as potent a seat-seller as the material in the panel. Take a look at the other ads—they're gay and spirited and do an excellent job of creating a desire to see the musical. How about having that 24-sheet cut out for a marquee topper?

Some enterprising exhibitor will utilize the cover of United Artists' press book on "Mrs. Mike" in an advance or current lobby board, for it has definite attention-getting elements. It is better seen than described, so look for it. In some ad layouts the outdoor appeal of the Canadian wilderness is uppermost (for your outdoor and action fans) with the love interest underplayed, while in others the love interest predominates (remember the women, for probably more women read the book than men) with the outdoor appeal underplayed. Naturally, there is a book reproduction in every layout, for the novel was immensely popular. In connection with this, you'll find the line, "A Great Book Becomes a Greater Picture" in most of the displays, and you'd do well to use it wherever possible. It's no blurb—it's the truth!

Another novel-to-screen case is Columbia's "All the King's Men," and that factor is pointed up in this line, which appears in many of the ads: "The Pulitzer Prize Winning Novel Becomes a Vital, Very Great Motion Picture." The character of Willie Stark—"he might have been a pretty good guy . . . if too much power . . . and women . . . hadn't gone to his head . . ."—is outstanding in the layouts surrounded in some instances by the other characters who play important parts in the picture. One of the compelling catchlines is "The Story of a Big Shot . . His Morals, His Manners, and His Women." Along the exploitation line, book stunts are in abundance, and the reason is obvious. But there are also numerous other selling angles that should not be overlooked.

New Promotion Policy Set Up at Eagle Lion

A new policy under which special promotion men will be engaged and charged with the responsibility of creating national tieups and national exploitation angles on individual major films from the time they go before the cameras until their regional premieres, has been instituted at Eagle Lion by Leon Brandt, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

First film to receive the new treatment will be "The Sundowners." National exploitation and tieups for this film will be handled by Joe Clair, former United Artists exploitation representative, who has joined EL to operate under the supervision of Exploitation Manager Lige Brien.

200 Color Contest Entries

Two hundred entries in a two-day coloring contest on "The Story of Seabiscuit," featured Walt Brubaker's advance campaign at the Wooster Theatre, Wooster, O.

'Allegro' Promotion Presto, Four-City Report Indicates

"Johnny Allegro" is stimulating a quick showmanship tempo, reports from Cincinnnati, Minneapolis, Syracuse and Columbus indicate. The picture is a George Raft vehicle concerning a counterfeiting ring.

Most unusual gimmick is credited to Nate Wise, publicity manager for the RKO Palace in Cincinnati, who "plugged" the picture by arranging the running of a "Johnny Allegro" Handicap at the local River Downs race track. Stories and pictures with theatre credit hit the sports pages of three dailies. Playdate was also given over the track p. a. system and on station WKRC-TV's report of the race.

Definitely on target, too, was Bob Whelan of the RKO Orpheum in Minneapolis. He tipped the Minneapolis Archery Association on the bow and arrow stuff in the film; the organization did likewise for its members, via several thousand letters, and urged them to visit the theatre for an exhibition of fine archery.

Carnations for Critics

The critics got carnations in Columbus, from Manager Harry Simons of the RKO Grand. Regardless of what that did for Raft, it's good long-range policy. It may smooth a ruffled quill next time someone suggests the movies would be better off without those birds.

I.M.P.S. Member Saul Sorkin got in step with the adage that says a moving ad is a good ad. There was plenty of action in the five daily dancing exhibitions held for a week before playdate in a large shop window. Sorkin tied up for this one with the Ann Lewis Shop and the Arthur Murray Dance Studio in Syracuse, where he manages RKO Keith's.

These are just a few high spots. There were window displays in Cincinnati, Minneapolis and Syracuse (with archery and ever-popular money as tie-ins); radio and TV help in Cincinnati, Minneapolis and Columbus; flowers to the femmes in Cincinnati and Columbus; a Times-Star newspaper contest in Cincinnati (they were busy there); hotel lobby paging of Johnny Allegro in Columbus; library display in Minneapolis; and tie-ups with jewels, perfume and ice cream in Syracuse. If reports from these four well scattered cities mean anything, it is that "Johnny Allegro" is worth working on.

GOOD KAYE BALLYHOO. Unearthing an old double bass in a backstage store room, Manager David Williams of the Blue Hall Cinema, Islington, London, converted it into a street ballyhoo for RKO's "A Song Is Born." The theatre's probationer projectionist is partially inside of it. That's House Manager C. W. Field at the left. Mightn't American exhibitors adapt this stunt to the just released Danny Kaye comedy, Warners' "The Inspector General?"

Boy, Girl Kiss as Live Trailer—Fun!

A "live" trailer on the stage of the Colonial in Reading, Pa., which went immediately into the regular screen trailer, was a feature of the exploitation for "That Midnight Kiss" that evoked hearty applause from the audiences at every show during the week in advance of playdate. A spotlight was focussed on the right wing of a darkened stage where a beautiful young girl sat on a bench, with the spotlight then swinging to the left as a boy emerged on the stage. He joined the girl on the bench as a clock with hand set one minute to 12 was thrown on the screen. As the hands ticked around to 12 o'clock, the couple embraced and kissed whereupon the regular trailer was thrown upon the screen. (Wouldn't you love a job like that, boys?) This live trailer was a highlight of the campaign put on by Assistant Manager Alton F. McHan, MGM Exploiteer Ed Gallner and Colonial Manager Larry R. Levy, which started two weeks in advance with a "sneak" preview.

Lipstick Marks

For a spectacular ballyhoo the trio rented a truck large enough to take the film's 24-sheet poster on each side. This toured the streets for three days and was then stationed at a busy highway intersection for the rest of the week. Another ballyhoo that was also an excellent attention-getter, though smaller and "quieter," was an attractive girl wearing a specially-made dress covered with lipstick marks who toured the main streets presenting small envelopes containing candy kisses to passersby. Copy on the 2,000 envelopes she handed out read: "Here's a kiss—if it's a Midnight Kiss (chocolate flavor) you will receive a card redeemable to see . . ." etc. Twenty-five of the envelopes contained the guest ticket cards.

A radio contest that proved an excellent filmplugger asked entrants to submit lists of song titles in which the word "kiss" occurs. Another station gave a 30-minute Mario Lanza concert, playing his recordings.

Amateurs 'Shoot' Models In 'Holiday Inn' Contest

Vince Iorio, manager of the Trans-Lux theatre in Washington, D. C., with the aid of Paramount special representative Johnny Tassos, enlisted the aid of a bevy of Phylliss Bell models for the opening of the re-issue, "Holiday Inn." The boys had the girls pose for amateur photographers who came to "shoot" the lovelies in a competitive contest featuring over $400 worth of photo equipment and merchandise prizes. Contest called for pictures depicting most originality and of a holidayish theme.

The contest ran for four days. Entries were judged by the photo editors of the four leading Washington dailies.

TUTTLE WAS READY for the kiddies who converged on the St. Albans Theatre, St. Albans, L. I., for the annual Gala Thanksgiving Party held recently. Above are the toys and games which Manager Leonard Tuttle promoted for the occasion. Plenty of kids were on hand, you can be sure.

Word-of-Mouth Is 'Heiress' Buildup

Unusual word-of-mouth endorsement for "The Heiress" heralded the opening of that picture at Reade's Mayfair Theatre in Asbury Park, N. J., as the result of a special screening set up for prominent Asbury clubwomen at the Paramount home office in New York.

The women, members of the Literary Section of the Asbury Park Woman's Club, came to New York by special bus for the screening, which was arranged by Paramount for the Reade organization. The women, who represented many of Asbury's leading families—and including many who had not been to the movies in months and even years—filled out rave "reaction cards" which were used by the theatre for lobby displays and radio endorsement.

City Manager Guy Hevia also used a saturation campaign on Asbury Radio Station WCAP, including station breaks, interviews, and background material. Special 40 x 60s of New York critic's quotes were placed in the lobbies of all four Reade theatres in Asbury; teaser heralds were made up from the teaser cards in the press book, and an out-of-town newspaper ad campaign—unusual for the off-season in the resort area—was also conducted.

At the Community in Morristown, City Manager Ralph Lanterman also utilized special critics' quotes 40 x 60s, the teaser heralds, and an extensive newspaper and radio campaign.

Free 'Forsyte' Tickets In Two Press Contests

Two newspaper contests for prizes of free tickets to see the feature were lined up for "That Forsyte Woman" by Manager Fred R. Greenway and his assistant, Bob Genter, of Loew's Poli Palace, Hartford, Conn. First newspaper tieup was for the longest list of titles of books by John Galsworthy upon whose "Forsyte" novels the film is based. Second tieup with the same newspaper was an identification contest. The paper published a picture of a Hartford model with an announcement stating that shoppers in a named downtown store who walked up to the girl during a specified hour and said "You're the 'Forsyte Woman'" would be awarded free tickets. Window displays were made by four stores.—HFD.

TWO 'PORTS' CAMPAIGN PARADE. As part of the campaign for the recent world premiere of Eagle Lion's "Port of New York" at the Pilgrim Theatre in Boston, Miss Port of New York (Bernice Temple) and Miss Port of Boston (Linda Daye), took part in a mammoth parade arranged by American Theatres' Paul Levi.

Adapt Boston Premiere Campaign For 'Port of New York' Key Runs

The promotion campaign which led Eagle Lion's "Port of New York" to record-breaking holdover business in its world premiere at the Pilgrim in Boston is to be used as a pattern in all future key engagements, with full details made available to theatres in an 11-page brochure that supplements the regular press book.

Under the direction of Eagle Lion Ad-Pub-Exploitation Manager Leon Brandt the bow of the narcotics-smuggling drama was executed by Paul Levi, advertising director of American Theatres, and Eagle Lion Exploitation Manager Lige O'Brien and Exploiteers Joe Mansfield and Milt Overman.

Deciding upon a title-selling basis, the showmen first set up "Miss Port of New York" and "Miss Port of Boston" contests, the New York model chosen in citywide competition being dispatched via U. S. Customs cutter to the Hub City as the guest of her counter-part there. With her she took a print of the picture, a screening of which was held on board a large ship with officials of the Port of Boston, the Coast Guard and the U. S. Customs Office and representatives of the press and radio in attendance.

"Miss Port of New York" proceeded to 20 radio and many press interviews in Boston, and on Thanksgiving Day joined "Miss Port of Boston" in a three-hour parade of ship-floats, sound-trucks and bannered cars through the main sections of the city. The "ship" from which the girls threw candy kisses to Bostonians was later launched on a herald-distributing land voyage to New York City.

Also on a personal appearance tour, which included 14 radio shows, was Yul Brynner, one of the "heavies" in the film. Mass distributions included a "wanted" herald featuring Brynner's face and distributed to the Thanksgiving Day crowd at White Stadium; dope capsules ("This is the straight dope—see 'Port of New York'," etc.); and cards tacked to lampposts and parking meters and hung on 8,000 downtown store doorknobs (21 stores tied in their Thanksgiving window displays with the film). The Customs people provided the ad and publicity writers with highly quotable commendations of the picture.

Newspaper publicity breaks, as well as the already partially enumerated radio plugs, were tremendous. What other word when they cover three weeks and appear in every paper in town? What really has Eagle Lion—and Boston—talking, however, is the Post's use in its holiday issue of five separate publicity stories. This "Port" looks like a happy haven.

Kid With a Toad Free

Four days in advance of the "Ichabod and Mr. Toad," playdate, Loren Parker of the Liberty, Cumberland, Ky., ran a line in his newspaper ads that the first 25 kids coming to the box-office with a toad would be admitted free.

Taps All Outlets For Double Bill

No publicity outlets were left untapped in exploiting Eagle Lion's double bill of "Trapped" and "Down Memory Lane" at Warners' Strand in Akron, Ohio, through the united efforts of Manager Millard Oakes and EL Exploiteer Sid Newman. Having two pictures to promote, they had two different sales appeals—the drama and action of "Trapped" and the music, nostalgic appeal and big star names of the past in "Down Memory Lane." There were two barrels to their exploitation gun—but they kept the barrels together so that whichever had the most shot, there were some left in the second barrel for the other picture.

The Akron Beacon-Journal came through with a classified ad page contest in which names of Akron residents appeared here and there in the columns, plus liberal art and story breaks. It also had a large display box on both pictures in which residents whose names appeared in the ad columns were invited to identify themselves and receive tickets to see both films.

Akron's largest five and ten, Scott's, supplied thousands of lollipops for distribution around town and in the store, each attached to a card reading: "Don't be a sucker for the phony money racket—See 'Trapped' and 'Down Memory Lane'," etc. The Army recruiting service posted on its large display easels about town this copy: "Are you 'Trapped' without a career? Join the Army . . ." with film, theatre and playdate credits. The YMCA and the YWCA displayed posters and stills for both pictures and two radio stations played "Memory Lane" songs with full credits.

Polsky's department store lent its main window for a display of the Robert Lewis Taylor biography of "W. C. Fields."

The Box-Office Slant

Current and Forthcoming Feature Product Reviewed from the Theatreman's Standpoint

Montana

(Color by Technicolor)

Warner Bros. Western Drama 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Handsome Errol Flyn nand Alexis Smith, gorgeous in Technicolor, decorate the screen in a not unusual version of the cattlemen versus the sheepmen. It's still entertaining.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This big Technicolor western drama with the power of the Flynn and Alexis Smith names should play to good business in all situations.

Cast: Errol Flynn, Alexis Smith, S. Z. "Cuddles" Sakall, Douglas Kennedy, James Brown, Ian MacDonald, Charles Irwin, Paul E. Burns. Credits: Produced by William Jacobs. Directed by Ray Enright. Photography by Karl Freund. Screenplay by James R. Webb and Borden Chase and Charles O'Neal from a story by Ernest Haycox.

Plot: When an Australian sheepman brings sheep to the Montana range, he finds himself in conflict with the big cattle ranchers. In the resulting war he wins his place on the range and marries the girl.

Comment: "Montana" is the perennial range war story in a new setting. Decorated in Technicolor with Errol Flynn and Alexis Smith, it's still entertaining. Miss Smith never showed to better advantage, and Flynn handles his part with aplomb. With courage and reason and with force when necessary, he convinces Montana that sheep and cattle can graze the same range after all. The villains are killed during Flynn's forceful periods and Miss Smith, herself a headstrong, sheep-hating cattle raiser, shoots him, changes her mind, succumbs to his courage, and marries him. The tempo of the film is swift; Ray Enright's direction is sure, and the story ties up all loose ends. S. Z. "Cuddles" Sakall delivers comedy relief, and Douglas Kennedy, James Brown, Ian MacDonald, and Paul E. Burns all merit mention. The cast as a whole is competent, and William Jacobs gives the picture excellent production values. It adds up to another big western and exciting entertainment.

Tombolo

Grandi Films Drama 94 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A very human and appealing story of a father's search for his lost daughter among the homeless Italian outcasts in the forest refuge for black market operators known as Tombolo.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Art and foreign-language film houses should find this an acceptable and entertaining offering for their clientele. May go as a dual for English-speaking audiences.

Cast: Aldo Fabrizi, Adriana Benetti, Nada Fiorelli, John Kitzmiller, Dante Maggio, Franca Marzi, Luigi Pavese, Elio Steiner, Luigi Tosi. Credits: Producer, Mario Borghi. Director, Georgio Ferroni. Story by Piero Tellini and Glauco Pellegrini. Screenplay by Indro Montanelli, Glauco Pellegrini and Giorgio Ferroni. Photography by Piero Portalupi.

Plot: A story of black market operators in Italy after the war, of the homeless youths and girls in the forest refuge known as Tombolo, and of the search of an Italian army veteran, father for his lost daughter who is living with the leader of the black marketeers.

Comment: A very human and appealing story which, though slow-paced, is mainly one of action. The English titles make the action intelligible. The cast is headed by Aldo Farbizi, who played the priest in "The Lost City," as the father. His portrayal of the father, lured from the supply depot by the thieves so they can rob it, is thoroughly convincing and holds audience interest and sympathy. Adriana Benetti as the daughter is excellent and the rest of the cast give capable support, particularly Elio Steiner as the black market leader.

Traveling Saleswoman

Columbia Comedy 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Although this comedy strains every resource to entertain, the effort is not crowned with a signal success.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The Joan Davis radio program, where it is popular, may give this labored comedy an initial start, but subsequent word-of-mouth won't help much. As supporting fare to stronger entertainment it may be accepted.

Cast: Joan Davis, Andy Devine, Adele Jergens, Joe Sawyer. Credits: Produced by Tony Owen. Directed by Charles F. Riesner. Photography, George E. Diskant. Story and screenplay by Howard Dimsdale.

Plot: In a last attempt to save the family soap factory from disintegration, a young woman and her fiance go west after business. Through cold, gunmen and hostile Indians, the saleswoman pursues her purpose. The picture ends with the Indian tribe boxing soap in the home factory.

Comment: The story idea seems to offer possibilities for laughter that are seldom developed. Missing the swift pacing characteristic of good comedy, the picture lumbers ungracefully from scene to scene, giving an impression that its faults lie in a careless job of scripting. However where slapstick of the broadest variety is appreciated, it may be accepted. There is plenty here for kids of every age to laugh at as the picture trying to be all things to all men, shows Joan Davis plagued by cattle rustlers, hostile Indians, a bratty kid, close-fisted storekeepers and her own ineptitude as she peddles her soap through the west; but the long pauses between laughs will have to be overlooked. Andy Devine turns in a typical performance, as Joan's finance. The supporting cast does as well as can be expected with its material.

Bodyhold

Columbia Drama 63 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Patrons will find this drama an actionful, well integrated little yarn with a full quota of suspense.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Fashioned as supporting fare, it should suit generally. Virile enough for the most avid action fans, with an exposé angle that lends itself to exploitation.

Cast: Willard Parker, Lola Albright, Hillary Brooke, Allen Jenkins, Roy Roberts, Gordon Jones. Credits: Producer, Rudolph C. Flothow. Director, Seymour Friedman. Photography, Henry Freulich and Phillip Tannura. Screenplay, George Bricker.

Plot: A hefty young plumber, an ex-navy wrestling champ, enters the professional sport as one of the stable of the local wrestling czar. He finds the stable is kept in line by brutal ring punishment for disobedience. His exposé cleans up the sport.

Comment: "Bodyhold" is a tightly scripted, well-directed exposé of professional wrestling. Its theme contributes the suspense which is maintained to the end of the film. Wrestling Czar Roy Roberts keeps his performers in line by ordering them brutally punished in the ring for the slightest disobedience. His policy results in a broken back for Champion Gordon Jones. When Willard Parker joins the Roberts troupe, he, too, gets out of line, but the hatchet man proves to be not quite man enough to administer the punishment and Parker wins the match and exposes the racket. Willard Parker turns in a good performance as the hero and Allen Jenkins supplies unobtrusive comedy. Roberts is capable as the suave promoter and Lola Albright and Hillary Brooke are satisfactory as the feminine interest. Professional wrestlers load the mat scenes with action. The picture is good supporting fare and should be more than adequate for its market.

These Modern Mothers

Grandi Films Comedy 79 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Interest in this picture will be confined largely to those who understand Italian. It is unusually "talky," with its humor and appeal depending on the dialog.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Art and foreign-language film theatres may do a fair business if the major portion of their patrons understand Italian. Others are apt to fare badly. There are no cast members with a reputation here to draw patronage.

Cast: Carla del Poggio, Adriana Benetti, Ione Morino, Aroldo Tieri, Carlo Micheluzzi, Elvira Betrone, Ruby D'Alma. Credits: Directed by Luigi Zampa. Story by the director. Screenplay by Gherado Gherardi and Cesare Zavattini. Photograhy by Alberto Fusi.

Plot: Two girls just out of convent school are in love with two youths who reciprocate, but the course of true love does not run smoothly. One girl goes to live with her frivolous-minded aunt and after a quarrel with her suitor becomes engaged to one of the aunt's men companions. The other girl's mother, a widow, blossoms into a blond flirt and the daughter sets about getting a second husband for her in the person of a middle-aged bachelor. She keeps her suitor on jealous tenterhooks until the bachelor proposes to her mother.

Comment: This light Italian comedy depends so much on its dialog for humor and appeal that those not understanding Italian will have a difficult time trying to fathom its comedy implications. The English titles explain the outline of the plot but miss the finer points of comedy and characterization which the action suggests but cannot always make intelligible. Direction, production and photography are good, as is most of the acting. The cast is headed by two young Italian starlets, Carla de Poggio and Adriana Benetti, who gives promise of developing into competent actresses. Ione Moreno and Ruby D'Alma, as the aunt and the mother, are more skillful players. The two lovers of the girls act with considerable earnestness and good comedy sense.

Rigoletto

(Italian Dialog—English Subtitles)

Superfilm Opera 105 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Tops musically, though filming right off the stage is controversial technique of presenting opera on film.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: One of Verdi's most popular works and a cast headed by Tito Gobbi can expect a welcome in the established opera-film market.

Cast: Tito Gobbi, Mario Filippeschi, Lina Pagliughi, Marcella Govoni, Giulio Neri, Anna Maria Canali, Marcello Giorda, Giuseppe Varni, Gentilumini Alabardieri. Credits: Produced by Giulio Fiaschi for Excelsa Studios of Minerva Films. Director, Carmina Gallone. Camera, Anchise Brizzi. Tullio Serafin conducts the Royal Opera House of Rome orchestra. Singers from La Scala of Milan. The complete version of the opera by Giuseppe Verdi.

Plot: Rigoletto, jester in the court of a libertine Duke, receives a father's curse when he taunts one whose daughter has been seduced by the nobleman. When the jester's own secret, beloved daughter is victimized, he plots revenge. The sack that was to contain the body of the Duke, however, is delivered to Rigoletto with a willing substitute: his daughter.

Comment: Should an opera be filmed straight or should it be cinematically adapted? Whether "Rigoletto," photographed right off the stage, is good cinema or not, it is good opera and can expect a welcome in the established opera-film market. One of the most popular of Verdi's works, it has a dramatic plot (explained by pre-act notes), powerful score and familiar arias. It is excellently recorded here and sung by a cast headed by Tito Gobbi, of previous opera-films.

D. O. A.

United Artists Melodrama 83 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Top melodrama plus the strong, unusual and medically genuine angle of a "murdered" man hunting his own killer.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Highly exploitable. O'Brien in familiar characterization. Very good for most situations, especially with the deserved good campaign.

Cast: Edmond O'Brien, Pamela Britton, Luther Adler, Beverly Campbell, Lynn Baggett, William Ching. Henry Hart, Neville Brand, Laurette Luez, Jess Kirkpatrick, Cay Forrester, Virginia Lee, Michael Ross. Credits: Executive producer, Harry M. Popkin. Producer, Leo C. Popkin. Associate producer, Joseph H. Nadel. Director, Rudolph Mate. Story and screenplay, Russell Rouse and Clarence Greene. Music, Dimitri Tiomkin. Photography, Ernest Laszlo.

Plot: An accountant is dosed with a poison for which there is no antidote. He spends his remaining days tracking down his "murderer." It soon develops that the foul play concerns an innocently notarized document in a crooked iridium deal, but it takes time and some rough experiences before the real villain is detected and killed. The accountant finally reports to the police, dies.

Comment: D. O. A. is an established term in homicide bureaus. It stands for "dead on arrival," and it is the final report on Frank Bigelow (Edmond O'Brien), though he walks into the police station on his own two feet. The handling of this very unusual and highly exploitable angle by Director Rudolph Mate will not disappoint the flock attracted by the selling efforts of United Artists and theatre managers. The paradox is pounded home strongly and remains always genuine —according to a final note, it's based on actual medical facts. The manhunt staged by this "dead" man is top melodrama throughout. Pamela Britton's scenes, which serve as a sort of relief from tension, serve also to heighten the irony of the main story line. Left behind when O'Brien went to San Francisco on vacation, this loving girl gradually realizes that he is in real trouble. The mood is well established pictorially and musically, and there's plenty of action with an exceptionally realistic sniping sequence and some vicious pushing about by a psychopathic gorilla (Neville Brand). There are several sirenish women, and O'Brien is very good in the sort of characterization for which he is familiar.

'The Hidden Room'

This British film has the American style imparted by Edward Dmytryk and the all-around quality to rank as a sound offering for general audiences. It's a suspenseful drama of a doctor's efforts to liquidate his wife's men friends. Very good performances by Robert Newton, Sally Gray and American Phil Brown back up the super-exploitable acid bath murder theme. STR's London review (Aug. 6, 1949, when the title was "Obsession") called it expert. An Independent Sovereign Film presented by J. Arthur Rank, released here by Eagle Lion. 93 mins.

Hollywood Varieties

Lippert Prod. Variety Acts 60 mins.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do well in the small towns and rural sections in place of the usual second feature.

Cast: Robert Alda, Hoosier Hot Shots, Shaw & Lee, Glenn Vernon & Eddie Ryan, Peggy Stewart, De Pina Troupe, Lois Ray, Sandy and his Seals, Paul Gordon, Shavo Sherman, Charles Cirillo, Cliff Taylor, Three Rio Brothers, Britt Wood, Twirl, Whirl & a Girl, The Four Dandies, Hector and his Pals, Johnson Brothers, Dolores Parker Sammy Wolfe, Aurora Roche, Russell Trent, The Eight Carlyle Dancers. Credits: Directed by Paul Landres. Get the Most from Every Day in 1950

This is New Year's Eve!

With the close of this day the bells will start ringing and the whistles blowing to announce Mr. World's change of address to 1950 Opportunity Road. The old place at 1949 is such a shambles that salvage of anything other than experience scars and mistake blisters is impossible. There are a whole lot of folks hanging around trying to retrieve unused clock ticks, wasted endeavors and overlooked or disregarded advantages, but the caretaker, Old Man Minutes, is boarding the place up tight and loudly proclaiming to the surging, disgruntled hoards:

"Time and tide wait for no man."

A preview of the new establishment—free and unobstructed to any and all possessing "vision glasses"—reveals a scintillating structure of unequaled promise. Even the short-sighted and blinder-burdened must be impressed with the brilliance of the mountain-high sign reading, "TIME, 1950." Then, in smaller letters but still visible to the most distant observer, "Catering to the desires and endeavors of man." An immense arrow points to "You think and fabricate," and a similar formation at the right reads, "We supply the essential element." Past records of the age-old concern indicate that the company has never failed to live up to the letter of its advertising and that the only dissatisfied customers throughout the years are those who failed in planning properly or using intelligently, efficiently and effectively the elements the outfit places at their disposal.

Shiniest and Most Auspicious Harvest of Hours

The caretaker, who is also superintendent and general manager, Old Man Minutes, says that the 1950 crop is the shiniest and most auspicious harvest of hours in TIME's ageless history. A peak through the crystal-clear windows reveals shelf upon shelf, from floor to ceiling, stacked with glimmering, glittering packages of hours. Old Man Minutes explains that "for the convenience of patrons we've bundled 'em into packages. Each package contains 24 full 60-minute hours that are fairly bursting with opportunity vitamins. We label 'em days. All our customers have to do is plan and work each day to release a force for success that excels and exceeds the vaunted power of the atom."

He meditated a few moments and then went on: "You'd be surprised how discouraging this business is at times. You know, we operate on the longest credit terms known to man. Of course, the price is high, since the customer pays with his life for our merchandise. But, by and all, the long credit terms seem to nullify any and all consideration of the high cost, and the way some fellows scatter our precious wares to the four winds is a caution. This is particularly true of the youngsters who, with profligate abandon, toss one golden hour after another into the gutters and cesspools of wanton idleness and thoughtless or wasteful endeavor."

Leaning exhaustedly on his sheepherder's staff, he paused to take a few deep breaths before going on:

"Then, just before we close up on December 31 every year—that's when my new assistant always reports to 'tend things in the new place—you find them scatting and skitting like that crowd tonight. Trying to get back what they threw away and yelling for "another chance." Oh, yes, there's old folks too in that crowd but most of the oldsters have learned their lesson. You don't find the older folks running in grabbing at random as many days as they can load into the back of their jalopy and scootin' off to throw them into some hog wallow. But you'd be surprised how few of the older people use the proper discretion in picking their days. Some run in and grab a handful from the November shelf and try to make 'em work effectively in May, and vice-versa. Of course, sometimes they happen to work out swell, but most often those days mature best in calendar order, and those who use them out of sequence usually find out when the proper time comes 'round—and when it's too late—how much more effective they'd be in their right place. They wail like hungry coyotes 'long about mid-June when they come in for July 4 and it's not on the shelf. Then we have to go to the books and show them where they used all the July element back in March or April. The same goes for other holidays, and the number of overlooked and uncalled-for days that have to be thrown away at year's end

FOR BRIGHTER SHOWS

Pointers on Projection and Sound

Shows will be brighter than ever as a result of new projection equipment items already on the market or promised for the very near future. The largest theatres, indoor or outdoor, will be able to get enough light for their vast screens without risk of buckling film and without increased cost for electricity. Smaller theatres can use the same developments to enable them to light their auditoriums more brightly in the interest of safety. Managers, theatre owners and projectionists will want to watch these new developments closely, since it is a reasonably safe prediction that within not more than a year or two the currently accepted level of screen illumination will be generally regarded as too dim, and obsolete.

Since everything mechanical and electrical is subject to some deterioration with use and time, almost all projection room equipment needs occasional overhaul, tightening up and general adjustment. Some of this work can be done during show time, but a good deal of it cannot be carried out satisfactorily, or tested satisfactorily, except when no audience is present. Every projectionist should be prepared to have to do some work out of show hours now and then, and every theatre budget should allow for such work as a matter of course.

A cheap and tinny little radio may give the impression of putting out satisfactory sound until it is played side by side with a good one. Then the contrast not only shows up the inadequacy of the little set but makes it seem even worse than it really is. Some theatres that have good sound apparatus put in cheap and tinny p.a. equipment—speakers especially. It is poor policy; the contrast emphasizes the imperfect quality of such p.a. sound.

Some items of projection room equipment—the lamphouse most of all—seem to be growing steadily larger in size from year to year. Television may come to the theatre any time now. Television in the home seems to have promoted an increasing tendency toward returning live entertainment to the theatre, with resultant need for spotlight equipment. In planning any new theatre, the projection room dimensions of yesteryear should be generously exceeded, to make sure that space will be available in the future for larger apparatus items and a larger number of them. The Society of Motion Picture Engineers is currently revising its "Projection Room Plans" for the same reasons.

If a print arrives from the exchange with a break in the reel, or with a fault in the film that will cause it to break in the projector, no vigilance on the part of the projectionist can prevent an interruption to the show unless he is allowed time enough to inspect each reel very thoroughly before running it. If management will not allow the projectionist that time, it is beyond his power to guarantee continuous entertainment.

Show Business

The peace and goodwill season did not pass up theatres this year. In Louisville, William Rosenthal's Vogue tied in with the St. Matthews Chamber of Commerce for a special show with the kids bringing toys as admission and the toys in turn being turned over to the county fire department for the needy children. Approximately 1,200 kids came in with a second show given for approximately 1,000 orphans free. . . . . In Salt Lake, Harry Ashton, manager of the Uptown, held a "Make believe party" featuring story telling for the kids plus cartoons, candy and Santa Claus, which is a follow-up to the 30-men "Pops" concert he put on with a special orchestra. . . . . The Lyric, same town, gave a special Kris Kringle Corporal drive, to aid the needy with Republic donating pictures to Manager Warren T. Butler. . . . . The Bountiful, also Salt Lake, gave free shows for needy children under direction of Manager Julian Bills . . . . Dan McLean and Lee Dibble of the Embassy, San Francisco nabe house again served free cake, punch and cookies to all patrons.

Out in Omaha, the Children's Memorial Hospital received a complete portable movie set from the Ballantyne Company and R. D. Goldberg, staged a special Christmas show at the Dundee with the proceeds going to the World Herald Good Fellows Fund which provides toys to the youngsters and food for the needy. . . . . Tri-States also held a Christmas party for some 150 employes with District Manager William Miskell starting the party off with an at 8 A. M. breakfast.

Mrs. Jean Chenail, manager of the Williams at North Adams, Mass., has resigned with the E. M. Loew circuit not announcing her replacement to date. . . . . Max Hoffman, who recently resigned as Warner Bros. New England zone chief booker had a party thrown for him at the Reacebrook Country Club. . . . . Fanchon and Marco do not plan to raise admissions for their New Year's Eve show in St. Louis. . . . Their Fox went Vaude on Dec. 24 with a policy of eight acts which is scheduled to be varied occasionally by name band acts and personalities. . . . Fitzgibbon has recovered from his recent illness and is back on the job. . . . Estelle O'Toole, secretary to Henry L. Needles, Warner Theatres Hartford district manager, is back after an illness.

MANAGERIAL CHANGES: Dan McLean and Lee Dibble, co-owners of San Francisco's downtown Embassy, have taken over the 1,000-seat neighborhood Ellis from Bill David. . . . R. M. McKibbin has returned to the management of the remodeled Victoria, Toronto, which reopened Dec. 28.

Best Training

I.M.P.S. Member Lewis Turner, relief operator in Nashville, Tenn., contends that the best training an apprentice projectionist can get is to work without reel alarms. This will develop a sense of alertness and responsibility, Turner believes. He has been doing just that in a small-town theatre.

2,000 Kids Attend Dandrea Xmas Party

More than 2,000 children crowded the Stanley Theatre in Bridgeton, N. J., on Dec. 24 for the third annual Christmas Party instigated by Manager Dan Dandrea and sponsored by the Bridgeton Merchants Association, of which Dandrea is president.

Santa Claus made a personal appearance on the Stanley stage shortly after the children assembled for the matinee and proceeded to interview the smaller fry, presenting each of them a gift from his huge pack. Santa's visit was followed by games, carols and a screen show.

Toys and goodies by the bushel were donated by local merchants, including dolls, games, candy canes, comic books, fruits and other things dear to the hearts of the youngsters. The Bridgeton Evening News carried a front-page picture of gifts on display and a story, while an editorial praised Dandrea and the local merchants for their true Christmas spirit in doing everything to make the youngsters happy.

First to Use Video

First use of television by local theatres in Omaha came on Christmas Eve. Tri-State Theatres presented an 8-minute reel, "'Twas the Night Before Christmas," over KMA-TV.

'Stars in Making' Series in Piqua

Amateur talent that may develop into star material in the entertainment world abounds in many places. Manager Thor Hauschild of Schine's Piqua, Piqua, Ohio, is one manager who is determined to seek it out. His means of discovering the hidden talent among Piqua residents is a series of 13 half-hour shows on his stage recorded for radio broadcast. Only two of the series had been give nup to the first week in December, but their success has been astonishing even to Hauschild. The "Stars in the Making," as he called the series, is something easily to be duplicated in almost any sized town and will garner goodwill and civic standing for both theatre and exhibitor.

The merchants of Piqua have shown an unexpected and appreciative interest in "Stars in the Making" as shown through their donation of prizes which is snowballing into a whale of a lot of loot for the winners in the 13 shows. Among the articles to be awarded on the final night of the series, are: set of Rogers silverware, 20 pounds of butter, five $5 meal tickets, 25 gallons of gasoline, two $25 cash awards, a $15 set of stainless steel tableware, 20 spaghetti dinners, another 50 gallons of gasoline, camera, pen and pencil set, large barrel of groceries, case of motor oil, three $5 tickets, three 10-pound hams, ton of coal, more cash prizes, five individual gallons of ice cream—and more coming in every week.

Hauschild publicizes these live talent shows in his lobby display built around some of the donated prizes, with others listed on the "wings" attached to the display, all surmounted with a portrait of one of the talent discoveries, the "Stars in the Making" title standing out conspicuously.

Box-Office Slants

each entertaining in its own individual style.

Comment: "Hollywood Varieties" is a good offering for the small towns and rural sections where there is little chance for the average patrons to see a "vaudeville" show . . . the "vaudeville" whose return has been heralded throughout the country. This is exactly like the famous variety shows of the past—a collection of individual acts—and for those who have never had an opportunity to see this type of entertainment and also for the old-timers who have always enjoyed vaudeville, it is a film that should attract because it is a good show. There is no story-line to tie the various acts together. Just a group of vaudevillians doing their stuff to entertain the customers. Robert Alda acts as master of ceremonies and the Hoosier Hot Shots are starred. Among the twenty acts presented in sixty minutes are such old-timers as Shaw & Lee, Britt Wood, Hector and His Pals, Sandy and his Seals and many others, as listed in the cast above. Three songs include the title number, Ridin' Free and Be There My Love, the latter sung by Robert Alda. Production was handled by June Carr and Paul Schreibman, while Paul Landres directed.

Red Desert

Lippert Prod. Western 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Slow pace and awkward flashbacks lessen the entertainment values of this western.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Most western fans are not too critical, so this will probably get by in most situations.

Cast: Don Barry, Tom Neal, Jack Holt, Margia Dean, John Cason. Credits: Produced by Ron Ormond. Directed by Ford Beebe. Screenplay by Daniel B. Ullman and Ron Ormond from an original story by Daniel B. Ullman. Photography, Ernest Miller.

Plot: A U. S. Marshal is sent west by President Grant to recover stolen government gold and to block the intention of the bandit leader to establish his own kingdom within the boundaries of the United States.

Comment: "Red Desert" opens with U. S. Marshal Don Barry chasing bandit Tom Neal across the waterless wastes. When Barry sits down to rest, the film flashes back to explain the situation: Barry has been sent west to block a revolutionary plot, and Neal is one of the plotters. Although this approach is novel for a western, the thread of the story is lost, and Barry's abilities are not up to the demands of a difficult sequence. What was intended to be a chase of deadly intensity and grim suspense slows to a walk through mediocre performances and uninspired direction. Whenever the film does move forward, the action is up to standard, but there are ineptitudes to divert attention. Margia Dean, a very pretty girl, is given almost nothing to do, while the performances of Jack Holt and John Cason, the production values, narration and musical score are worthy of a better subject. Most western fans are not too critical, so this will probably get by in most situations.

Guilty of Treason

Eagle Lion Drama 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A compelling and thought-provoking screen document based on the "trial-behind-the-trial" of Cardinal Mindszenty. Charles Bickford combines human and kindly sincerity with dignity and authority in his splendid portrayal of the Primate of Hungary.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Because it is timely and newsworthy, it should have a wide audience. Its box-office success seems assured through the advertising, exploitation and publicity campaign which has just gotten under way by Eagle Lion and the Overseas Press Club of America.

Cast: Charles Bickford, Paul Kelly, Bonita Granville, Richard Derr, Barry Kroeger, Elizabeth Risdon, Roland Winters, John Banner, Alfred Linder. Credits: A Jack Wrather-Robert Golden Production. Produced by Jack Wrather and Robert Golden. Directed by Felix Feist. Screenplay by Emmet Lavery. Based on the book, "As We See Russia," by the members of the Overseas Press Club of America. Music, Emil Newman.

Plot: Based on actual case records, this is the story behind the trial of Hungarian Cardinal Mindszenty, accused of being a "traitor and enemy of the people" by the communist rulers of Hungary. The Cardinal is questioned and tortured for a month but refuses to break. Drugs are administered, and in this state he signs a purported "confession" which he confirms in court. He is sentenced to prison. A Hungarian patriot, Bonita Granville, helps an American newspaperman, Paul Kelly, in his search for the true facts about the Cardinal, but she is arrested and tortured to death, while the Russian officer she loves, Richard Derr, is "liquidated" because of his association with her.

Comment: Developed from the Overseas Press Club's book, "As We See Russia," this screen story of the "trial-behind-the-trial" of Joseph, Cardinal Mindszenty, Prince

THEY HELPED TO FEED NEEDY FAMILIES. All those cans of food you see above resulted from a canned-goods matinee held shortly before Christmas by I.M.P.S. Member Dick Peffley, manager of the Paramount Theatre, Freemont, Ohio. Peffley turned the mountain of canned food over to a leading charitable organization which distributed it to needy families. The special matinee got front-page newspaper coverage and the theatre received a world of goodwill from the townspeople on the project. That's Manager Peffley at the right with women of the charity committee and the youngsters who helped pile the cans. The little boy, by the way, may be a manager himself some day—he's Ricky Peffley, son of the Paramount skipper.

'The Glass Mountain'

This production which STR's London correspondent reviewed in the Feb. 12, 1949 issue should find much favor in this country since its star, Valentina Cortesa, has been seen here in several films recently, winning much critical praise for her work, notably in "Thieves' Highway." It is a "tender, romantic drama . . . will thrill feminine hearts," wrote the London reviewer. "Beautiful settings, fine music and an arresting performance by Valentina Cortesa . . . put this drama in the running for top stakes," he added, and "should draw big crowds to better class cinemas." All of which pretty well sums up its entertainment value for American audiences. The singing of the Italian baritone, Tito Gobbi of the La Scala Opera House, Milan, will delight lovers of good music.

Primate of Hungary, is a compelling and thought-provoking screen document of the clash between those who have a passionate faith in religious, political and personal freedom and the communist philosophy of suppression of freedom in favor of strict adherence to "party line" orders. While the picture deals principally with the arrest of the Cardinal, his tortuous questioning by communist rulers of Hungary for 40 days, the administration of drugs to induce a "confession," and his sentencing to life imprisonment, there is also running through it the thread of an affair involving a Hungarian girl patriot, the Russian officer with whom she is in love, and an American newspaperman seeking the truth behind the Mindszenty case. It is in the sequences devoted to the arrest, trial and condemnation of the Cardinal, however, that the picture achieves its most inspiring significance, and this is due in no small measure to the outstanding performance of Charles Bickford as the Primate of Hungary. Bickford endows his role with a human and kindly sincerity combined with dignity and authority. It is as though this man on trial were really Cardinal Mindszenty himself! While the other characterizations diminish by comparison, they are nevertheless capably enacted by Paul Kelly, Bonita Granville, Richard Derr and Roland Winters. Producers Jack Wrather and Edward Golden deserve praise for their courage and determination in bringing their project to fruition against direct and indirect pressure. And except for an occasional sequence bordering on the melodramatic, Felix Feist's direction is noteworthy. "Guilty of Treason" is a timely and newsworthy documentary drama that should have a wide audience, and its box-office success seems assured through the advertising, exploitation and publicity campaign which has just gotten under way by Eagle Lion and the Overseas Press Club of America.

Riders in the Sky

Columbia Western 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Audiences generally should be pleased with "Riders in the Sky," which is superior both in entertainment and technical values to the usual western of its class.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The popularity of the song should add draw to the Autry name. This is probably the best of the series and should do gratifying business where westerns are popular, and as supporting fare.

Cast: Gene Autry, Gloria Henry, Pat Buttram, Mary Beth Hughes, Robert Livingston, Steve Darrell. Credits: Producer, Armand Schaefer. Director, John English. Photography, William Bradford. Screenplay by Gerald Geraghty from a story by Herbert A. Woodbury.

Plot: Gene helps a young woman clear her father of a murder charge, fastens the guilt where it belongs, on the town gambler, and cleans up the town.

Comment: "Riders in the Sky" is superior both in entertainment and technical values to the usual western of its class and is probably the best of the series. The song, Ghost Riders in the Sky, is skillfully woven into the story and the ghost riders are shown, with some very capable photography and art work displayed in this piece. Autry sings and fights with telling effect as he clears an innocent man of a murder charge and cleans up a town, while Robert Livingston keeps the villainy plausible and does an able job as the gambler. Gloria Henry and Mary Beth Hughes register attractively as the woman interest. Pat Buttram gives the film its lighter moments without interrupting the pace. The story is well scripted and director John English's tight control keeps the action fast and direct. Armand Schaefer gives the film good production values. The effect is swift and highly professional.

'The Outlaw'

Howard Hughes' production of "The Outlaw" was shown again this week for the trade press, this time by RKO Radio, now headed by Hughes. The production has been shortened from 115 minutes to 103 minutes, but the story and the sequences remain practically the same as when it was released by United Artists in the spring of 1946, except that the film has been approved by MPPDA in Certificate No. 7440, and has been placed in "Class B" by the Legion of Decency. Two of the scenes which were found objectionable in the former version have probably been shortened, but the story, as the audience "gets" it, is the same insofar as the recollection of this writer goes. STR's Hollywood reviewer (STR, March 23, 1946) called it "an entertaining story about Billy the Kid for those curious enough to see Jane Russell about whom so much has been written and said in the last three years, and those who like westerns." Her opinion as to the picture's box-office draw was summed up thus: "Has lots and lots of exploitable features and plenty of advance advertising. This should help, with the draw of the names, to put it across, with the possibility that it may well turn out to be one of the top grossers of the season." That opinion still holds good.

makes an oldster like me wonder if folks have any idea of the wealth of promise a day holds and the abundance of enjoyment and accomplishment that can be gotten out of it."

Old Man Minutes shook his head dejectedly as he seemed to ruminate before adding:

Always With Us

"If there were just some way to make folks understand that TIME deals only in highly perishable merchandise; that we have no definite quota of days for each customer, and that there's no telling when a chap's supply will be completely exhausted. If we could just impress on folks that there can be no assurance of an unblighted crop and that their best chance for survival and security lies in getting the utmost from each day in the order of its calendar appearance, while they possess the strength to wring it dry of useful ingredients. Somehow or other, we can't make people appreciate our inability to keep our stock free from worry termites and failure bugs. These pests are always with us, and it evolves on the customers to exterminate them through careful planning and hard work."

He was pacing a bit nervously and scanning both ends of the street looking expectantly for the appearance of his new assistant. He checked his hour glass and when that dependable device indicated the presence of many unused minutes before the new lad was due he proceeded:

No Free Samples

"Do you know that TIME got its start the same day Adam got his first glimpse of sunlight in the Garden of Eden? Yes sir, we've been serving man all these years and will continue to serve him as long as it's God's will. It's a pity we can't give out free samples based on the long experience we've had. But the rules are that each man decide for himself just what he wants to do with the element we place at his disposal and, while we deplore the careless way some folks handle and use our product, there's nothing we can do about it under our system of operation. We've been through innumerable wars, famines, plagues, inflations, depressions, and every other possible scourge. It'd be wonderful if we were privileged to pass to each generation the formula that enabled a lot of our customers to survive and succeed despite the most serious adverse conditions. But rules are rules, and from TIME's first beginning it's been decreed that we neither advise or admonish. Our job is to serve the hours and days and leave the fabrication—good, bad or indifferent—entirely to the customer's discretion. Of course, it makes us very happy when our product is welded into success by a combination of wisdom and effort and, conversely, it makes us very unhappy when we see precious hours and days wasted on some undeserving and useless project.

"If it were possible for us to give even the slightest hint of what has gone before, I'm sure that our 1950 customers would embrace every minute and squeeze every hour until it had relinquished its last atom of usefulness. Of course, there's always the hope that man will some day awaken to the fact that a day once lived is forever gone, but the hope becomes dimmer and dimmer as we move from one year to another.

"Yes sir, the job of supervising TIME's business is a tough one. I've been at it for eons and eons. Yet, it's still harder on the store manager. See that bewhiskered fellow peeking through the window of the 1949 shack? Last year he was a youngster but now he's called 'Father Time.' He's just waiting for me to unlock the back door and let him sneak away from that crowd out front who clamor futilely for what they've already dissipated or left unused. The only customers now are those who forgot to pick up today during the past week of holiday parties. They need today to buy horns and noisemakers—at least that's all most of 'em will use it for—to celebrate Father Time's passing and the advent of my new store manager. The job is such a thankless one and such a constant headache that 12 months is all a fellow can stand."

Brushing his white locks over his shoulder he cupped a wrinkled hand over an ear, listened attentively, then turned to say:

"Well, I hear that new fellow coming down the road so I'd better get over and give this staff to Father Time so he can leave according to tradition. Better get the new keys so I can open up here for the new lad, too, cause they tell me this is a right smart, sharp chap the folks are going to like doing business with. I sure hope the people give him less trouble than they did the 1949 manager. They sure treated that lad badly!"

As Old Man Minutes stalked off in the direction of the waning 1949 stand I felt like assuring him that, after I managed to get his remarks into type, I'd bet that folks in theatre business would be far more careful what they did with the hours and days of 1950.

Just to make sure that I wouldn't be making a rash promise, I went back to the 1950 windows and gandered around until I found the theatre department. It's one of the nicest booths in the entire establishment and the location is right in the middle of everything where folks are sure to see it.

Finest Array in Years

On the product shelf is the finest array of pictures in ten years. No less an authority than the Breen office declares them as such and lists more than 80 films as being better than anything in years.

On another shelf is the array of concoctions for improving public relations at the level of your respective theatre. On this you will be given the assistance of TOA and the personal contact they establish to lend national influence and support as well as to guide your personal effort. I couldn't quite see it but I believe the entire program is to carry the label of the very top names—I mean Zukor, Skouras, and others of similar prominence.

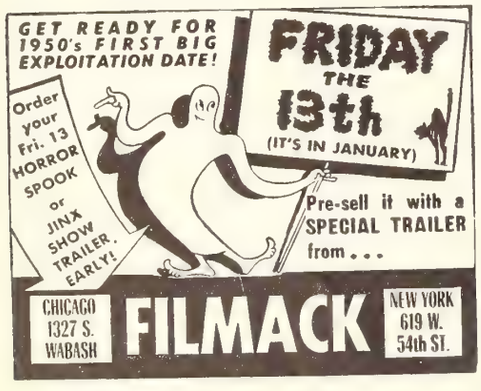
There's an abundance of material to guide you on the moot matter of competitive bidding with advice from the higher exhibitor legal minds and no end of printed detail from the page of STR and other trade journals. From the array of available matter you can only blame yourself if you fail to find the smoothest route for your theatre through the competitive bidding morass.

It's Up to You

The array of national advertising campaigns from Youngstein, Einfeld, Lipton, Dietz, etc., is such as was never before on the producer-distributor agenda. Here again it's up to you to make the best use of this costly work at the level of your theatre.

When it comes to buying and booking you never saw such assists as STR and other industry journals have lined up to help you keep the square pegs out of round holes and fit the product where it will profit most.

There's a whole smear of detail on housekeeping and maintenance that will be made available to you at exactly the right time through the equipment guide pages of STR and others. Those monthly charts of day-to-day reminders will be of great help in avoiding the pitfalls described by Old Man Minutes as always resulting when a fellow fails to choose the right time to do things.



There's a lot of stuff on divorcement, but since that only effects a few of you lads there is no use in doing more than to refer those interested to the news columns of STR.

Insurance, accounting, new additions to the equipment family, guides to programming, television, 16-mm., etc., will be completely covered to assist you in making every hour of every day in 1950 score in the success column.

But remember, those words in the arrow on TIME's big sign, "You think and fabricate," will govern precisely what you accomplish during the hours and days of 1950.

How about trying to conduct theatre affairs during the coming year in such a manner that Old Man Minutes will do nip-ups when he examines our success chart for 1950?

Happy New Year, Everybody!

Seton I. Miller Advocates Honesty in Pictures

Seton I. Miller is a young man with a long and impressive record as an honest workman and an inspired writer and producer of motion pictures. Miller wrote "Scarface," the classic of gangster films, and "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," for which he received an Academy award. These are only two of his many credits, and Miller now brings this distinguished background to an association with independent producer Robert Stillman who was associate producer with Stanley Kramer on "Champion" and "Home of the Brave."

"Honesty in pictures can make the theatre a vital force in our culture," said Miller, in an exclusive interview with STR. "Strong, offbeat stories against a background of today's problems is the special province of the independent producer, and that is the kind of pictures we are going to make.

Seton I. Miller

"Our first productions will be 'Queen for a Day,' from the radio show, and 'The Condemned,' from the critically acclaimed novel of the same name. We chose the subject, 'Queen for a Day' because the laughter, tears, and heartbeat of the world are in that radio program. It tells the story of your neighbors and mine and the hopes, fears and loves that make their lives. Exhibitor profits will be assured by an immense pre-selling campaign that will be carried to every city, town, and village in the country by the entire facilities of the Mutual Broadcasting System and their 600-odd stations.

"We have five pictures scheduled, and we promise that every Robert Stillman production will carry our own brand of honesty and freshness of ideas."

Paramount to Start 4 Pictures in January

Filming will start on four pictures at the Paramount studios in January, Henry Ginsberg, vice-president and studio head, announced late last week. The four are:

"Union Station," based on a Saturday Evening Post suspense serial, which goes before the cameras on Jan. 16. "My Friend Irma Goes West," a sequel to "My Friend Irma," based on the CBS radio series, starts the same day. "Montana Rides," a Technicolor western, starts later in January, as will also "No Escape."

Jane Wyman Named 'Ethan Frome' Star

Originally on the studio's schedule for Bette Davis, who has since severed her connections, "Ethan Frome" has been announced by Warner Bros. as Jane Wyman's next film. Although Helen Deutsch has written the most recent screenplay for the film, which is based on Edith Wharton's 1911 novel, additional work will be done on it when Miss Wyman takes a vacation after completing "The Glass Menagerie."

Nassour to Try Out Scripts on Stage

A new means of pre-testing screen fare is being set up by Edward Nassour, head of Nassour Studios, who is having a 300-seat theatre built on the lot to try out projected screenplays before an audience. The scripts will be adapted for the stage before their performance in Nassour's pre-production theatre.

Yordan to Script Another for Goldwyn

Philip Yordan, who wrote the screenplay of "Edge of Doom," has been engaged by Producer Samuel Goldwyn to write another script for him as a prospective vehicle for Dana Andrews, Susan Hayward and Farley Granger.

The untitled story, as suggested by Goldwyn, mirrors the emotional conflict between a son and what his father stands for. It is described as a modern tragedy with classical form.

Levinson Plans Feature Cartoon About Detective

A full-length color cartoon, "Mann Hunter, World's Greatest Detective," is planned by Leonard Levinson, producer of Impossible Pictures' color cartoon shorts. Levinson believes that the cartoon detective, who has been featured in newspapers and in comic books, has never had a chance on the screen. Hence his plans to give the sleuth a break.

Guy Endore Writing 'Nightmare' Screenplay

Guy Endore is writing the screenplay of "Nightmare" from an original story by Ben and Norma Barzman. The picture will be produced for Paramount by Irving Asher.
